HUSTLING IS NO GOOD.
THERE has been quite a CONTROVERSY in the Southern State on the SUBJECT OF HUSTLING, the latest CONTRIBUTION coming from Mr. KING O'MALLEY, who believes that "HUSTLING IS NO GOOD."
The FABLE of the HARE and the TORTOISE reminds us that the RACE is NOT always to the SWIFT, and leads us to REMARK that in the RACE for COMMERCIAL SUPREMACY we PURSUE the EVEN TENOR of our WAY, AVOIDING alike the TACTICS of the HUSTLER or the LAGGARD, adopting the STEADY STRIDE of PROGRESS that has placed us in the PREMIER POSITION as UNIVERSAL PROVIDERS to the PEOPLE of AUSTRALIA.
As MERCERS, HATTERS, and MEN'S OUTFITTERS, we are at the TOP OF THE TREE, with an ASSORTMENT of MEN'S WEAR that CANNOT be SURPASSED. To-day we quote MEN'S HALF-HOSE, commonly known as SOX, that will SATISFY the REQUIREMENTS of the MOST EXACTING. Economy is assured by offers the biggest inducements. The Estate is right at the station, and there are numerous frontages to the Lane Cove-road, which must command a very high price for business sites in the near future. There is considerable talk just now of the long-looked-for bridge between Milson's Point and Sydney proper being put in hand before many months, and as soon as this becomes an accomplished fact then up goes the price of Lindfield Land.

RUN OUT TO LINDFIELD.

It is only a few minutes' journey from Milson's Point Station, just seven miles out, and have a look at HEART OF LINDFIELD ESTATE. If you want a suitable piece of land to build a home on, or to hold as an investment, we think that an inspection will convince you that this property is beyond doubt the best value offering in Sydney at the present time. Whether for home or business sites.

HEART OF LINDFIELD ESTATE

HEART OF LINDFIELD ESTATE

was offered for sale during December, and up to the present we have sold nearly £17,000 worth. The demand is steady, and the pick of the Estate will soon be gone at the price we are asking now. Good blocks, 66 x 150, are available from

for the best of the property. The terms are very easy—5 per cent. deposit and balance over 5 years.

The Estate is picturesquely situated, and occupies the healthy elevation of 322 feet above sea level. It is accessible, being within half an hour of Circular Quay. Plans and full particulars from Dept. H.

OVER £50,000 SOLD.

That is our record for Bankstown during the past few years. It is about the best proof we can offer regarding this suburb as an investment. Most of this large amount is represented by sales made during the past two years, and the demand at the present moment is stronger than ever. A short while ago Bankstown was little known and inaccessible; anyone living there was regarded as "coming from the country;" but all that is changed now, and Bankstown holds up its head as a shining example of what a thriving, go-ahead, prosperous suburb should be.

GREENACRE PARK ESTATE

is really Bankstown. It is right at the Station, and it was the opening up of this famous property that really gave Bankstown its first push ahead. It is a fine property, consisting of good soil, good roads, good outlook, and fine, healthy atmosphere. It is within 25 minutes of Sydney, and will shortly become a second Strathfield, when the line is extended to Liverpool and the Mail Train stops there.

GREENACRE PARK ESTATE,

(NEW SUBDIVISION)

has been placed on the market in response to repeated demands, and consists of the properties known locally as Caird's, Hayne's, and Jacob's. It is equal in every respect to the original Greenacre, and at our sale in December last we sold over £2000 worth, and this in spite of the fact that it rained very heavily all day. As numerous would-be purchasers were unable to attend for this reason, we are offering the balance for the present only AT ABSOLUTE AUCTION PRICES, from 11/6 upwards. Terms, from £1 down and 10/ per month. Torrens Title. A number of these blocks are quite handy to the railway line, and the property extends right back to the Liverpool-road. Go out and see this Estate to-day. You will find it well worth while. Plans, etc., from Dept. H.

ARE THEY WISE?

We are not amongst the pessimists who talk slump, but, on the other hand, think the future of Sydney is assured. The enormous increase in our output and the pushing out of railways, together with the encouragement of immigration, makes us optimistic as to the future. But we often wonder if people are too sane who pay £6 and £7 per foot for week-end sites or £50 for quarter-acres on the Barcoo. If there should be a setback of any kind, these are the folk who will be left lamenting, and would blame everybody but themselves. A prominent banker from outside the State, who is well acquainted with local conditions, was visiting Sydney the other day, and was asked his opinion of the real estate market here. His reply was: "City and close-in suburban land is all right under almost any conditions that might occur, but this far-out stuff that is being pushed so much, well!" and there he stopped. Silence can sometimes be very expressive. Now look calmly at this proposition for a moment. DOBROYD POINT ESTATE is one of the largest estates, and certainly one of the best, within a reasonable distance of the city. It is a settled locality, with every convenience which population and proximity to the city can give. It is all good land, and the views are magnificent, yet it is selling for less money than is being given for week-end sites. It's an ideal home site, and is being recommended by doctors for its air. Yet many otherwise sensible men and women, who have been throwing their money into week-end sites, haven't even seen it, although its situation, outlook, and surroundings make for an altogether superior suburb. It is being rapidly built on, and the cottages are of an up-to-date character. The building covenant prevents inferior places coming in the neighbourhood. If you want a home site which combines all the advantages of the week-end with the conveniences of the city, DOBROYD POINT ESTATE is the ideal spot. Plans and all particulars from the Haymarket P. L., B., and I. Co., Ltd., 750 George-street, Haymarket.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

Skegness was a man with a reputation in his own party and the opposition of being a man of iron. His enemies declared he was destitute of bowels of compassion. His friends regretted sometimes that he was not more yielding—more influenced by a desire to bestow with open hand on those who served him. But Skegness was human, after all. He was moved by the signs of distress that to a prosperous man like himself have only the outward show. He could not compass the reality of want that lay beneath. It struck him as bad economy to let so promising a genius starve for want of a hand to help him. It was pure waste, and might be regretted afterwards. He drummed with his stick for a moment on the railing. Routh stood by in silence. Suddenly Skegness lifted his head, and looked again at him. Then he spoke.

"I asked you once, I think, if you'd ever contemplated a political life. You told me, if I remember rightly, that it was your highest hope and wish, but that you did not dare to dream of it. Dreams come true sometimes. I told you I would do what I could for you if you ever wanted to fulfil your dream. Are you in the same mind now?"

Routh gave a faint and bitter laugh. "I am in the mind to take a place as day-labourer, if it'll keep me alive. I'm hardly likely to turn up my nose at what any man would jump at, I fancy, if he had the chance. But if it was beyond my wildest expectations when you spoke to me, it's a hundred times more so now. I am a man without a billet, and I don't see much chance of getting one. I'd sweep a crossing this minute if I could buy a broom."

Skegness listened gravely. He nodded his head again. Routh had burst out into an eagerness which he was the next instant slightly ashamed of. He shrugged his shoulders slightly as he realised it.

"Yes, yes. I understand." Another pause of half a moment. Routh still stood and waited rather grimly. It was not likely much would come of this. Then Skegness looked him full in the face again, with that glance that was like a needle. "Why did you leave the 'Galaxy?'" he asked.

"For private and personal reasons." Routh had flushed a little at the sudden question, but his eyes met Skegness' steadily still. "Milbank and I had a difference. He turned me out then and there. That's my story."

"It was not, pardon me, because of any political change on your part?"

"Oh, no," rather surprised. "I'm on the side of the present Government, as I've always been. I don't easily change my coat."

"That's well. It's very well in these days. Well, then, I think I can make that way we just spoke of easier. Would you care for secretarial work? If so, I can offer you a post with me. My private secretary, Parliamentary, of course, is leaving me, and I am on the look out for another. Will you take the post and work with me?"

Routh's eyes flashed. Then the light died again. He cleared his throat. "I—it's far too good of you, sir, to make me the offer. Of course, I know what a chance it is. But my writing—it's my life now. I don't know if I can altogether desert that now."

"Of course! I didn't mean to spoil a promising journalist! It's that special line of yours that I want to make use of. To tell you the truth, your pen will be valuable to whichever side secures you. I spoke first. Your work as my Parliamentary secretary won't preclude your still writing. In point of fact, I hope it will demand a great part of your time to write for the party. You have never done work on the 'Censor?' No? I thought not. The editor's a friend of mine. He'd be glad to take you on his staff as a regular contributor. And the 'Cyclop' and the 'Day-star.'" He ran rapidly through a list of the best-known reviews of the day. "I think I can promise you enough to live on, in addition to what I give as salary. And let me remind you that the Parliamentary secretary of a Cabinet Minister has his foot on the rung of the political ladder, whenever he wants to climb. When the next general election comes round the party may have a use for you." And Routh, unable to find words, in his gratitude and rapture, could only stammer out, "Thank you, thank you a thousand times."

And so it came about that a new Parliamentary secretary succeeded Skegness's departing one within the week. Routh threw himself into his work with the same eager avidity that had marked him when he was doing his best to win Milbank. But it was with a difference now. He had had his fall—a heavy fall. He got up after it a wiser and soberer man than he had been before he wrestled with fate and had his overthrow. There was that in the sharp lesson he had had that left him a changed man in more than one respect. The hot shame, the remorse that crossed him when he thought of the past was the only sign left of what he had gone through—but he was altered all the same.

He began his new career with diffidence, soberly, carefully. He was scrupulous in honour and truth and integrity. He began to earn the name of being a particular man. Skegness would have told you that he could trust Routh like himself; that his secretary's word was as good as another man's bond. There was only one curious thing about the secretary, that made the subject of a jest now and then with other men. They declared Skegness must have chosen him because Routh, like himself, was a woman-hater.

Routh was hardly seen except in the company of men. He had plenty of social invitations, as was to be expected. He found himself run after, invited, in a world more select and more fastidious than the one he had touched on its fringes in the house in Prince's Gate. He became, by virtue of his post with Skegness, intimate in the inner concerns of the House of Commons. He dined at houses where even Millbank had not the entree, and he was beginning to be treated with deference by people whom a little while ago he had looked up to with deep respect.

His was a well-known name in the literary world. He found time, somehow, no one could imagine how he did it, to write a novel, amongst other things. It brought him immediate notice and commendation. He could command his own prices now for every line he wrote. His name on the cover of a new periodical secured the sale of at least the first number—he had made his success. But it was in the political world that he most hungered for a hearing. Skegness had promised him more than once that if the party returned to power, after the next election, he should have a minor post. He would have been nominated for a bye-election before now, but that Skegness would not permit it. He thought it wiser on all accounts to wait for the general turning out.

Between Routh and his chief there was confidence, good feeling, though Skegness was not a man to show effusion, or to praise overmuch. But those about him considered that Routh was indeed highly favoured. He was regarded with envy by most other men.

Now, on this occasion, when he had gone to inquire for Lord Mountfort, Routh had returned to the library, and stood silent before his chief's rapid pen at the writing table till it should please Skegness to pause.

"Well?"

"He has not been yet. I've 'phoned."

"Right." And Routh, walking on quietly to his own table, took his chair and began to tap the typewriter. He was thinking with a faint smile of something that had caught his eye just now in the morning paper. "The wife of David P. Winslow, Esq., of a daughter." Why, it must be the third child, wasn't it? It seemed to him that he had seen that announcement repeated so many times.

It was four years since he had read in all the papers the account of the marriage of the millionaire newspaper proprietor's daughter with his partner.

CHAPTER XXII.
ROSAMUND'S MARRIAGE.

It seemed like yesterday, somehow. The memory of it came back now, as he sat there, mechanically tapping, filling the white sheet with a copy of an address he already knew by heart. He remembered even the faint twinge of discomfort with which he had read through the glowing descriptions of Rosamund's wedding frock. There was no pain to him, oh, heavens, no! But it brought the memory of the old pain back. He had heard months before that Winslow had been taken into partnership in the "Galaxy," that he was a pushing manager, with all the latest Transatlantic methods, that Millbank was not so well recovered by his stay at Nauheim as had been hoped for, and that more and more the power of the "Galaxy" offices was creeping into Winslow's grasp.

Rosamund had gone abroad with her father very depressed, and very unhappy. For his sake, and because she saw how her sadness distressed him, she had made an effort to get back some of her old brightness. But for a [illegible] while she moped. Then, when they were [illegible] just at the beginning of November, [illegible] sent for Winslow to come out and [illegible] some important business point.

[illegible] Rosamund saw him arrive at their [illegible] heard his gay, nasal voice, saw the [illegible] with which he always surrounded all [illegible] she was cheered in spite of [illegible]. He was always so kind and so agreeable. He took possession of her father, and talked to him of things that were Millbank's vital interests, but of which she herself knew nothing. She saw how her father fell back again into dulness, once Winslow had left them. A brilliant inspiration seized her, and she carried it out.

Why shouldn't Mr. Winslow come out every fortnight, and bring her father all the "Galaxy" news, get all his directions? It would keep him in touch with all those affairs that were very life to him. She made the suggestion, and Millbank jumped at it. Winslow, on his own part, was as pleased. To some men the fortnightly crossing of the Channel, and the long journey across the Continent might have had terrors; not so to the active, energetic New Yorker. The Millbanks went on to Pau for the Christmas holidays, and there Winslow joined them. He tempted Millbank to Verney-les-Bains, and the Pyrenean air did wonders for him. They travelled home together, the three of them.

It was on the Channel boat that it happened. Millbank, covered with rugs and supplied with a hot bottle, sat on deck in the motor they had had abroad with them. Rosamund walked up and down the deck, Winslow beside her. The sharp, strong breeze between Calais and Dover brought the red into her cheeks. Her sables flapped about her, and the silk motor-veil that tied on her travelling hat with its pheasant feathers, whipped the air like a pennant. Winslow offered his arm.

"Cling on, Miss Millbank! The boat's got a cant on." And Rosamund took the thin arm he offered. It was undeveloped, but it was as strong as a steel bar.

"I say, I'm real sick to think it's all over. It's been a gorgeous holiday. Now we're going back to work and society. Britishers are so stiff in the back, aren't they? We'll freeze, I shouldn't wonder, when we settle down again."

"I hope not! I'm not likely to do any freezing. Except——" with a gay laugh, "if it's as chilly in England as the papers say. After all the sunshine, the skies will be horrid, won't they? I hate perpetual grey."

"So do I. I wasn't born to it. The sun knows its business, over on the other side. I'd like you to see the States, Miss Rosamund. You don't know how they beat creation. Won't you come over there, some day?"

"I don't know! Father isn't at all fond of travelling! He's been quite unhappy all this time away. I believe he began to get better the very minute Sir Walter Truscott told him he might come home. He isn't likely to want to go to America, I'm afraid."

"I didn't mean to make him one of the party," with sudden meekness. "I think a triangle's just too mean for anything. It was a honeymoon couple I was thinking of. The States are just good for a honeymoon."

"Oh!" After that startled exclamation there seemed nothing to follow.

Winslow was the last man on earth to throw away his chances. He had calculated with a flash of the eye his opportunity, his situation. They were just out of earshot and sight of Millbank sitting inside his motor. They would turn, at the next three steps, into that corner behind the deck-cabins, where there was not a living soul out on deck. They took the three steps more in silence. Then as they wheeled he stopped short, and she too had to stop, for she was still clinging to his arm.

"Miss Rosamund! You know what I mean, don't you? I'm so mad in love I can't wait another minute to say it out. He told me—the boss—that I could speak whenever I wanted. But I didn't dare to risk it and spoil the show. Will you? Do you? You're such an angel that a chap never knows whether it's pure charity, or the thing he wants? Won't you be Mrs. David Winslow? I bet my life and all my chances you shan't ever regret it." And Rosamund, smiling, blushing, fluttering under this novel wooing, let him catch in his the hands she yielded, and kiss her behind the deck-house.

If the wooing that is not long in doing is truly the happiest, they need not have had a fear about their future bliss. Millbank, informed by the overflowing Winslow, so soon as they made their way back to him, had not a word to say to delay it. He gave his blessing and the biggest cheque to buy a trousseau that the "Galaxy" office had ever dreamed of. The Winslows were to live in the Prince's Gate house, and he would keep rooms in one corner of it. That was his only stipulation. An English bridegroom might have demurred to the arrangement. Not so Winslow. He was too used to such a combination of households in America.

"It'll work alright!" he assured Rosamund. "The boss and me'll be on hand to talk biz together, morning, noon, and night. And you can daughter him, as well as be my wife."

That marriage in St. George's, Hanover Square, was one of the events of the next season. Millbank meant it to be the most gorgeous and imposing that had ever been solemnised there. He would have had twelve bridesmaids, if Rosamund had not cried out in consternation. He sent for frocks from Paris, wanted to ask Royalty to the reception. It was only the good sense of Rosamund that prevented the affair from being a kind of advertisement. But even as it was, the society papers were filled with illustrations of her frock and her hats and her presents. The "Galaxy" had material for four columns on the last page.

MAR'S EARLY WINTER.

The multitude of persons who believe in Professor Lowell and his pleasant account of Mars will be interested to know that the famous astronomer claims to have discovered that the Martians are suffering from an early winter, and probably are, at this moment, crouching around fires just the same as are New Yorkers, in their efforts to live through the cold spell. Professor Lowell's suspicions that a Martian winter had set in (states the New York correspondent of a London journal) were aroused by the appearance of what he assumed to be frost on the planet. He noticed a large patch of white, and became convinced that no mass of anything could be so conspicuously large unless it were frost. Professor Lowell explains the phenomenon in language that may be understood by those not scientific nor even technically educated. He says:—"It (the frost) was seen as a bright spot on the planet's sunrise edge and only there, not continuing on the disc as the planet turned. It was evident that this bright area was hoar frost from the fact that it gradually disappeared as it was brought into sunlight by the planet's daily revolution. Its whiteness rivalled the planet's south polar cap, and must have lasted for an hour and a half to two hours after the sun had risen on that part of the planet to be thus visible. Calculations show that it lay in latitude 62deg. to 65deg. south and longitude 170deg. to 200deg. It had been seen on November 5, 6, and 7, and photographed on several plates. The repetition of the phenomenon night after night, combined with its restriction to certain Martian hours, shows that it was a diurnal matter, and the first steps of what is soon to be the snow covering throughout the day of those latitudes. This is the first time this particular phenomenon has been observed."

MINING FOR 1911.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondent, D. Lette, in this morning's issue has, I think, failed to put his finger on the cause of the steady and persistent decline in the gold production of this once world-renowned gold-producing State. The reason is not the need of an amended Mining on Private Properties Act, which is reasonable enough to satisfy any fair-minded man. You can get authority to enter for 12 months. The warden assesses the compensation, which seldom goes above £5—more frequently below this—and even this is only payable quarterly, so that you can practically spoil five acres of good land for 30s. Surely your correspondent does not expect to have the right to prospect and dig holes all over an unlimited area of another man's ground free until he finds what will pay him. There would be no justice in that, and I speak as one who has worked under the Mining on Private Properties Act, and consider it liberal enough for anybody.

The trouble with the goldfields is the Mines Department itself, pure and simple. It is antiquated, hopelessly out of date, and suffering from dry-rot. Let any mining man go into it, and he must admit that the absence of vitality will be apparent in five minutes. We have a prospecting board which is supposed to encourage prospecting, but does it? It has a few paltry thousands of pounds at its disposal, which it fritters away in £25 or so at a time to needy prospectors of wild-cat shows, in reality providing them with food while they fossick. We looked for something good from bluff old Alf. Edden when he became Minister for Mines, but he, too, seems under the mesmeric influence of the department officials.

Let the Minister reform the prospecting board, wipe the present department out of existence—it has done no good—and institute in its stead a board composed of six independent mining men, three mining managers, and three metallurgists, independent of political control, with the Minister as the head. Let these men visit the known fields, inquire why they are stagnant, what is wanted to vitalise them (these two questions are big enough), and then let the department act on their recommendations immediately without waiting till they are tied up with miles of red tape, and I am sure Mr. Edden would give mining in New South Wales such an awakening and such a lift up that his name would never be forgotten. It is too much to hope for a new Mines Department. Goodness knows it is wanted badly enough, so give us new methods, and then this depressing wail about the decreased gold yield will cease to be the theme of the Under-Secretary's report, as it has been for too many years.

I am, etc.,
A GOLDMINER.

Sydney, Jan. 11.

Lord Rosebery stated at Edinburgh that he had heard from the Aberdeen librarian the result of a test applied to discover which books were really [illegible]. But the librarian had chosen books of travel. He thought that books of travel were almost immortal; he had never been able to put away any book of travel, however poor, however apparently jejune its subject. He asked the librarian to try his test in some other department of literature.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

CONGO LIFE AND FOLKLORE.

What with its atrocities and its conflicting spheres of influence, which have only been delimited within the past few weeks, the Congo has been much in the public eye of late, and "Congo Life and Folklore," by J. H. Weeks, makes an opportune appearance. The author was for many years a missionary in this country—for the greater part of the time in remote districts, where an occasional trader was the only white visitor—so he can speak as one having authority. Moreover, his interests are anthropological rather than polemic. Abuses there are which he mentions, but he is concerned less to bespatter Governments which cannot reply than to give an account of the intimate life of a little-known people.

To do so Mr. Weeks adopts the device of speaking in the person of a brass rod—the usual currency among the natives of those parts. In some respects this is unfortunate. Certainly it enables him to describe numerous phases of life according as the brass rod finds a temporary owner, but in the first place no such excuse is necessary in a book of this nature, and in the second the results are sometimes ludicrous. We are accustomed nowadays to all sorts of personifications, but for all that it comes rather as a shock to hear this remarkable piece of metal suddenly break from an artless narrative into a discussion of comparative anthropology or a denunciation of native superstition. However, Mr. Weeks has achieved a very interesting book. He has made it his business to get at the back of that queer thing, the savage mind, and some of his information is both curious and valuable. One of the lessons that Mr. Weeks inculcates is that if the white man took the trouble to explain to the black the motives for his actions much needless suspicion and friction would be avoided. Take, for instance, the ordinary trader who collects rubber and ivory. His reasons for so doing are to him sufficiently obvious; he does not realise that rubber and ivory have no intrinsic value to the native, and the latter cannot understand why they should be sought after by anyone else. Accordingly the Congos have come to the conclusion that this trade is a mere pretext, and that the white man's real object in the Congo is to buy up bodies to send to their country to make cloth out of. As an ancient greybeard explained to a youth, "There is a hole in the sea, and the white man goes in his steamer and rings a bell, and the watersprites push up the end of a piece of cloth, which the white man pulls one day, two days, three days, until he has enough. . . . Before he leaves the hole he throws into it some bodies he has bought in our country."

However, the inhabitants of the Congo are not always so ingenuous. They are quick to detect sharp practice among the traders whose commercial methods are not always above reproach, and endeavour to pay them back in their own coin. The author quotes one instance where a native found that the strings of beads with which he was paid contained only 60, instead of the regulation 100. He said nothing, but made up the deficit by covering bananas with his rubber, and selling the result as a solid mass. By the time the fraud was discovered he was well ahead on the transaction. This method of getting even was comparatively harmless, but sometimes retaliation goes to greater lengths. Many so-called outrages, Mr. Weeks points out, are really provoked by unfair dealing on the part of the "victims," but as the latter are careful not to give all the facts the natives are often criticised too harshly. One such incident created some stir. A highly-placed official returned from a village with his head, beard, moustache, and eyebrows shaved off. He gave out that this was a piece of wanton insolence on the part of the natives, while as a matter of fact it was the punishment for his attempt to steal the ivory trumpets of the tribe; and the author would have us believe that such episodes are by no means uncommon. In Congo there is a proverb, "In a court of fowls the cockroach never wins his case"—i.e., the verdict of one race against another must be received with caution—and this proverb cuts both ways.

The author has a great deal upon the somewhat baneful influence of the witch-doctors. These have no official place in the tribal constitution, but the native is prone to superstition, with the result that the services of the witch-doctor are called in upon every possible occasion to solve mysterious deaths, to bring good luck in hunting or warfare, and to settle questions of policy. These doctors are often men of considerable shrewdness and powers of observation; and if their divinations do not conform to modern ideas of justice they at any rate give satisfaction to their clients. Suppose, for instance, a native has died for no apparent reason. His relatives consult the doctor in order to discover the person responsible. It is an easy matter for an astute cross-examiner to find out whom they suspect, and after a good deal of by-play for the sake of effect the doctor names him. Then follows the trial by ordeal, which the Congo, like most other primitive societies, possesses. The advantage of the ordeal is that the guilty never go unpunished; its disadvantage, that the innocent never escape. However, all parties are satisfied save the late defendant, and he, of course, has no means of making his grievance felt. Mr. Weeks gives some interesting descriptions of these trials by ordeal, some of which are very similar to like institutions in early English law. In one of them, for instance, if the suspect would plunge his arm into boiling oil without being scalded he was held to be innocent. Others are very complicated. One of the most common is that of the ukasa tree. The victim is made to drink an infusion of the bark of this, which is an emetic and narcotic. If its emetic effect does not prevail the man is guilty; if it does he is ripe for a further test, which Mr. Weeks describes. "While he stood swaying there six twigs in rapid succession were thrown at his feet, and he as quickly had to name the trees to which they belonged. This he did successfully, and then he was told to name the birds and butterflies that were sailing by. Again he gave each its proper name, but now, just when he wanted his eyes to be at their keenest, he could feel them becoming blurred with the dregs of the drug he had been forced to take. They called on him to name the ants crawling at his feet. He faltered, stammered hazily, and in stooping that his hazy eyes might have a better chance to recognise them, he fell to the ground." The verdict, of course, was "guilty." Naturally the witch doctors are the determined foes of all progress, as they see in it the decay of their influence. If the bar of their conservatism were once removed, enlightenment would be rapid, as the Congos are an exceptionally intelligent type. This is borne out by the picture the author gives of their institutions, manners, and customs. His close association with them has enabled him to acquire knowledge hidden from the ordinary explorer or trader, which should be of the utmost value to ethnologists. In particular, he includes in the volume a number of folk tales current in the Congo, which are interesting in themselves, and indicate that the Congos have reached a higher stage of intellectual development than is generally supposed. THE HISTORY OF OUR TIME.

Among the new publications of the "Home University Library" a most valuable little book is "The History of Our Own Time" (1885-1911), by P. G. Gooch. Of course, a quarter of a century is a short period, but the one just passed has seen events and developments of the highest importance. In Europe the political situation has definitely changed, and now Britain and Germany are the two protagonists, with the other nations falling into one or other of the armed camps. In the East a new world Power has arisen, of whose existence Occidental statesmen must for the future take account. And, most important of all, the past twenty-five years have witnessed the growth of what is perhaps the most remarkable feature of modern times, the spread of the democratic spirit, which has given constitutions to places sunk in Oriental despotism, supplanted monarchies by republics, and filled the Legislatures of every country.

Consequently, Mr. Gooch has no lack of material. Indeed the difficulty is its superabundance, and he has used it with discretion and discrimination. In the opening half-dozen chapters he gives a survey of events among the European Powers, and in the case of each finds some dominant characteristic. In Great Britain it is the concerns of Empire and the possibility of turning that Empire in name as well as fact into a confederation. In France it is the defence of the Republic against its foes within and without; in Germany it is organisation within, to be followed by expansion without: in the Latin South it is the struggle to repair the evil wrought by conquest, corruption, and revolution in the past; in Austria-Hungary the racial conflict; in Russia the efforts for a constitution; in the Near East the eternal strife between Crescent and Cross. Of course, in the space at his disposal Mr. Gooch can only give the barest outline, but he has an admirable sense of proportion, and these pages contain an excellent summary of events and tendencies during this period.

The remainder of the book is mainly devoted to a bird's-eye survey of Asia, Africa, and America, and in the closing chapter, which might well have been longer, there is an account of those very momentous movements, political, social, and religious, which know nothing of geographical boundaries, but are international in character.

We in Australia may regret that so little is said of the Commonwealth. True, there are references here and there. In one place we learn that the referendum is successfully employed; in another that Labour Governments flourish, in another that female suffrage has been in vogue for some time; but there is no chapter specifically devoted to us. Perhaps the author feels that events here were not sufficiently important to merit a separate chronicle, and we can console ourselves with the reflection, "Happy is the nation which has no history."

A more serious objection is that the author is not always free from prejudice. In a book of this compass, where statements are made without qualification or explanation, it is peculiarly necessary to avoid all suspicion of bias, and, though Mr. Gooch generally succeeds in this, at times he lets it clearly appear which way his sympathies lie. Talking of Egypt, for example, he says: "The unpopularity of the Occupation was increased by the vindictive punishments inflicted on the Denshawi villagers in 1906 for an attack on British officers engaged in pigeon shooting." It would be fairer to say that the attack resulted in the murder of one; many people considered the punishment too lenient; and, in any case, his meaning would have been adequately expressed without the use of the word "vindictive." Again, with reference to the partition of Bengal by Lord Curzon, in 1905, he says: "If it was not the greatest political blunder since the Mutiny, it played directly into the hands of the extreme party, which aims at the overthrow of British rule." Many competent critics consider this one of Curzon's most beneficial acts of administration, and its effects can scarcely be judged after the lapse of only six years.

However, these are small points. Mr. Gooch is to be congratulated on an excellent book, up to date in every respect, and packed full of information. (Published by Williams and Norgate.)

"THE TROUBLED POOL."

Among the somewhat sterile wastes of present-day minor poetry in England, the oases are both few and far between, and not very green into the bargain: so it is with the more relief that one comes across a book like "The Troubled Pool and other Poems," by J. Griffith Fairfax. Mr. Fairfax is already favourably known to a select few by his verses, and this volume should win him fresh laurels and increase the list of his admirers. Although the author is a native of this country, and many of the poems are addressed to local personages, it cannot be said that Australian influences have affected his work to any noticeable degree. Indeed, more than once he yearns for—

> . . . . The gray loneliness
> That clings about my city's frozen year,
> For the soft mantle of the muffling folds,
> The wintry mist that is her wonted dress.

And the sympathy with the more melancholy aspects of nature is marked throughout—

> By the gray meadows of the withered sedge,
> Along the lonely curves again I glide,
> To gather, in a month forlorn of flowers,
> Blossoms of old dreams by the wan waves' edge
> To overhear the whispered speech beside,
> And shy returning feet of ancient hours.

However, Mr. Fairfax is not always melancholy; he has a quiet fancy, and the power of clothing his imaginings in exceedingly graceful melody. His work is at all times polished, and constantly one finds a fine thought uttered in a striking manner. Perhaps the author's poetic gifts find their best expression in the sonnet, a form of which he makes considerable use, and handles with great skill, as is illustrated by the following upon "Green":—

> Oh, thou most various and delicate
> Raiment of all things fugitive and frail,
> Green—of the first spears, quivering and pale,
> To spring's adorning newly recreate;
> Green, who dost lend thy mutable estate
> To waters wavered when the windy sail
> Dips, and the prows uplift the foaming veil;
> And the sun follows down the glistening spate,
> So laughing; but thou hast thy mysteries,
> Green, when the dusk comes shadowed up the lawn,
> And softly in thy darker mantle drawn;
> And thou art in a mood for mournful eves;
> Then sorrows wait as on a widowed queen,
> About thy passage, hushed and sable Green.

FRIVOLOUS PEEPS AT INDIA.

"Frivolous Peeps at India," by Mrs. T. H. Kelly, of Sydney, is, as the name applies, an account of the impressions gathered by that lady during an extended tour in the country. Mrs. Kelly went everywhere and saw everything, and writes of her experiences in a bright and entertaining fashion. However, the book is by no means a sort of animated Baedeker, for besides her descriptions of the places and things to which the docile tourist is invariably led, the author contrived to get off the beaten track. Moreover, Mrs. Kelly gives a lively picture of the social life of the Anglo-Indian. She met every one worth meeting, and her impressions of people, no less than of places, are briskly told. Throughout the book is seasoned with a highly-developed sense of humour, which no doubt prevented Mrs. Kelly on many occasions from being bored, and certainly prevents the possibility of a similar fate overtaking the reader. (Published by George Robertson.)

"RIVER ROVERS."

"River Rovers," by E. J. Brady, like "The King's Caravan," by the same author, which was lately reviewed in these columns, is an account of an unusual journey. The author seems to have a penchant for unorthodox modes of travel. "The King's Caravan" described his experiences on a waggon trip from Sydney to Townsville; in "River Rovers" he has betaken himself to the unstable element, and the book is the record of a voyage on a motor launch down the Murray from Albury to Lake Alexandrina. Most of the volume has already seen the light in the pages of the "Lone Hand," but his story, which makes extraordinarily good reading, was well worth republication in a more permanent form. It is interesting upon several grounds. In the first place the journey itself was a notable one. A trip in a launch down a river does not perhaps seem to promise great adventure, but it should be borne in mind that the trip was 1500 miles long, and the launch 15ft. Merely for the distance covered the achievement was remarkable, but when one reads in Mr. Brady's pages of the other dangers to be encountered we wonder how he ever got through. Snags, currents, shoals, floods, whirlpools, and rapids were among the most ordinary incidents of the daily-round, and all conspired to compass the destruction of the Lone Hand, as their little craft was called; but, though there were some narrow shaves, it always proved equal to the occasion.

But, quite apart from this, Mr. Brady gives [illegible] a phase of life in Australia unknown to most of its inhabitants. All along the [illegible] of the interior exists a clan whose interests and occupations are quite different to those of the usual dweller in the backblocks. The crews of the steamers that navigate the Riverine when the depth of water allows, plying up with stores and down with wool; the lonely fishermen; the itinerant hawker, who tempts the riverside from a boat instead of a tipcart; the providores of entertainment, who travel to and fro with a floating biograph—all these Mr. Brady came to know, and he gives us an account of their works and days and quaint philosophies. But the author not only adorns a tale, but points a moral as well. A large part of his book is devoted to questions of water conservation. He describes what has already been done in this direction, and his suggestions are not the least valuable part of an interesting book. (Published by George Robertson.)

MINOR FICTION.

"The Doubts of Diana," by Evelyn Tempest, describes a phenomenon which is said to be by no means unusual, that, viz., of a young lady who does not know her own mind. When the story opens she is engaged to Geoffrey Mayne, a young squire of sporting proclivities. His lack of interest in everything else jars upon her after a time, and when she meets Muirfield, a novelist who possesses all the qualities wanting in Geoffrey, she gives the latter the go-by, and becomes engaged to Muirfield. However, Muirfield palls after a bit, seeming to her rather critical eye too little virile. So she returns to Geoffrey, but no sooner is her third engagement announced than Muirfield's charm reasserts itself, and once more Diana is a prey to indecision. To the reader there seems no possible solution short of her marrying both, but she takes part in a suffragist raid on the House, is arrested for resisting the police, and when she is released from the police court Geoffrey rushes her off to a registry office, and marries her out of hand. After a space Muirfield consoles himself with another lady, and all ends well. The story is brightly told, and there are some admirable descriptions of suffragist politics. (Published by Hodder and Stoughton; our copy from George Robertson.)

Rex Beach is one of the most popular of the younger American writers, and his latest novel, "The Ne'er-do-well," should increase the list of his admirers. It is the story of the regeneration of Kirk Anthony, son of a railway magnate. He has devoted his time to football and driving motor cars at excessive speed, and seems in danger of becoming a wastrel. However, one evening on a "grape frolic" he is drugged and sent off to Panama in the place of an embezzler, who hopes thus to put pursuit off the track. At Panama the stern parent disowns him by cable. He is thrown on his beam ends for a time, but despite his wildness he has the real stuff in him, and he goes to work on the Canal works. Perseverance and an engaging manner carry him on, and after various adventures of the heart and otherwise, there is a reconciliation and all ends in a satisfactory manner. The book gives a good picture of the hectic political life of the Central American States, with their corruption and intrigue, and there are some graphic descriptions of the work on the Canal. (Published by Hodder and Stoughton; our copy from Angus and Robertson.)

"The Magic of the Hill," by Duncan Schwann, has been hailed as the success of the season; but while it is without doubt a very readable book, it is hard to see upon what grounds it takes precedence over at least half a dozen others. At the beginning we learn that an English diplomatist has married a Parisian prima-donna, who dies after giving birth to a son. The son is brought up in total ignorance of whom his mother was, and bids fair to develop into the ordinary public-school-cum-university type, when in order to avoid a possible entanglement with a lady of rather doubtful antecedents his father sends him to the embassy in Paris. Here all the Bohemian instincts inherited from his mother but hitherto latent make themselves felt, and he falls an immediate victim to the gay city's fascinations. Not in the vulgar sense, for those things which make Paris the Mecca of a certain class of tourist are abhorrent to him; but he is dazzled by its glamour and glitter, and the somewhat sordid gaieties of the Montmartre are seen transfigured through a golden haze of romance. This part of the book is well written, and contains some excellent descriptions of the "Hill;" but, except as introducing a character who plays a part in the denouement, have little to do with the story. Meanwhile the lady with the past follows him to Paris, and in her experienced hands he is soon brought to the point of proposing. But Nemesis, in the shape of a broken-down Englishman, a cast-off lover, follows close on her triumph. She is exposed, and the hero suffers bitter disillusion. However, his heart on the rebound is caught by a delightful little English girl, and all ends happily. Mr. Schwann has written an exceedingly clever book, and though portions of it are irrelevant they are so well told that one would not have them away. (Published by Heinemann. Our copy from George Robertson.)

A COSTLY HONOUR.

Mr. Carl Hentschel, a member of the City of London Corporation, and chairman of the General Purposes Committee, has given notice of motion to refer it to that committee for consideration and report (1) The question of the expenses of the mayoralty of the city, owing to altered circumstances; and (2), the necessity for certain improvements and alterations to the Mansion House. The last time the question of the Lord Mayor's official salary was raised (says the London "Standard") was in 1873, but since then the importance and dignity of the position have greatly increased. Before 1775 the Lord Mayor received his income from ancient dues. For instance, Lord Mayor Brass Crosby in 1770 received £4251 and spent £6685, and John Wilkes in 1774 received £4859 and spent £8226. Thence down to 1835 the Lord Mayor received a fixed stipend of £1000, with certain allowances. In 1838 the Lord Mayor received in all £7904. In addition the corporation used to pay about £3300 per annum on Mansion House expenses. The subject of the Lord Mayor's salary was dealt with in two reports in 1837 and 1869, the former recommending a salary of £6500 per annum and the corporation paying the expenses of the Lord Mayor's Show and banquet, and the latter suggesting a commutation of all fees and allowances by the payment of £9000. Both these reports were withdrawn, and ultimately the corporation in 1873 fixed the Lord Mayor's salary at £10,000, free of income tax, recommending that the occupant of the office should show hospitality and attention to the other municipalities of the kingdom, and the representatives of the city guilds and the trading and commercial classes of London. Since then the corporation have, in addition, spent from £6000 to £8000 per annum on purposes associated with the upkeep of the Mansion House, such as rates, taxes, maintenance, repairs, etc. It is common knowledge that large as the Lord Mayor's salary is few, if any, chief magistrates of modern times have been able to discharge their duties without a more or less important contribution from their personal incomes. One Lord Mayor is reputed to have spent £30,000 out of his own pocket in a year of no special importance, while the average is from £8000 to £12,000. Mr. Carl Hentschel's motion invites the corporation to inquire and decide if £10,000 is enough for the Lord Mayor of the present day. If it is, the corporation, he argues, ought not to bear some of the Mansion House charges; if not, the allowance ought to be increased. The second part of Mr. Hentschel's resolution deals with the sanitary condition of the Mansion House, especially in the domestic and kitchen departments.

ECZEMA ALL OVER HER BABY'S BODY.

"My little boy, who is only eighteen months old, suffered something dreadfully for eight months from eczema, which was all over his body. I had two doctors, but they failed to cure him. It first came as little pimples, and he was covered from neck to feet with them, and when he went to sleep it would come out thicker than ever. Then the pimples turned into sores, and he could not get any sleep at all, for as soon as he went to sleep he got hot and itchy and would then wake up crying and scratch them until he made them bleed. I was ordered to bathe him in warm water with a cupful of bran. I also used ——, zinc ointment, lotions, and rubbed him with sulphur, lard, ——, and boracic acid, and many other things, but all did no good.

"One day I read the Cuticura advertisement and thought I would give it a trial, and am very thankful to be able to say that Cuticura Ointment cured him. I bathed him with Cuticura Soap and put the Ointment on all the spots and after using it twice he got much relief and slept for hours, and after using two pots of Cuticura Ointment he was quite cured, and he has not had any signs of it since. I have also found Cuticura Soap a wonderful thing for making the hair grow. I have great faith in both Cuticura Ointment and Soap, and would now use no other." (Signed) Mrs. W. J. Langham, Anson-street, Orange, N.S.W., Feb. 20, 1911.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Dec. 8.

Australians are likely to hear shortly a good many details, which they never knew before, about Adam Lindsay Gordon and his poems. Last night, at the informal meeting of Australians, which now takes place on the first Thursday of each week at the Royal Colonial Institute in London, Mr. Douglas Sladen, who, with a collaborator, has been making careful inquiries from Gordon's English friends and relations, and will shortly publish the results in a book on the subject, gave an account of some of the new facts he had ascertained. A good part of these come from a favourite cousin of Gordon, who is still alive, and who certainly knew him more intimately than any other person now living. She tells Mr. Sladen definitely that Gordon did not leave England, as has been often said, in disgrace, but because his adventurous disposition was attracted by the romantic life of the Australians of those days. It has often been supposed that Gordon was expelled from Cheltenham College. He was one of the first batch of boys there when the school was first started; he then left for a time, and came back again later, and the idea has been held that he was expelled for some wild escapade. The Cheltenham College authorities, at Mr. Sladen's request, caused inquiries to be made, and, as a result, this story also appears to have been exploded. At the same time Gordon, whilst at Cheltenham, did begin his connection with sport, for he learnt boxing there, off Edwards, and became a very fine fighter. He counted steeplechase riders amongst his close friends—one of them who is still alive, rode a grand national winner three times. But Gordon could hardly have been an expert rider himself at this time, for the old friend above mentioned could hardly be persuaded to believe that Gordon himself had performed any exceptional riding feats.

Amongst other discoveries, Mr. Sladen has definitely identified the scene of "How we beat the Favourite." It is not far from Cheltenham, and photographs have been procured of all the chief features of the ground mentioned in the poem. What is even more interesting is that there has been found a letter from Mr. Tom Olliver (who is mentioned elsewhere in Gordon's poems) to Stephens, the jockey, containing advice curiously corresponding in its wording to that given in the poem. Another interesting letter which has come to light is one from Gordon to an English relation, written during the time of his married life in South Australia. In it Gordon writes in glowing terms of his wife as a splendid horsewoman—it was the great link between them. When he wrote that letter Gordon had just bought her a very fine horse from Melbourne. At this particular time his married life was clearly a happy one.

At the end of Mr. Sladen's paper, old General Strange, who was at Woolwich with Gordon, gave a short description of him as he knew him. "I can see him now," he said, "with his tall frame, and grey blue eyes, and the set of his uniform—a sort of tail coat we wore then—over his shoulders, and his slight waist, and his jaunty little cap on the side of his head. Though I cracked his head on one occasion with a ruler, I had a great affection for Gordon—I loved him and honoured him. In all the time he was at Woolwich I never heard a disparaging word of him as a soldier or a gentleman. He was always a dreamy fellow even in those days. Youngsters used to go to Woolwich very young in those days—at the age of 14 or 15. It was more like what the Royal Naval College now is."

THE MILLION CLUB.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your correspondent W.J.C. in his letter in your issue of yesterday seeks to establish the position that the ideal and purpose of the Million Club is to aggrandise Sydney, and to neglect the country, thereby fostering the evil of centralisation.

Though your correspondent appears to have read the report of the speeches made at the meeting inaugurating the club, he entirely misunderstands its objects. He seems for some reason or other to have mistaken the purport of the speeches made. It was distinctly and emphatically stated, and the point was insisted on by Mr. Percy Hunter, Sir Albert Gould, Brigadier-General Gordon, and other speakers, that while the club would work for an improvement in all the public utilities of the city of Sydney, and for the city to be given its proper place in the eyes of the world, "it was not intended to increase the numbers of Sydney's inhabitants at the expense of the country."

Your correspondent's dread of the evils of centralisation is shared by the Million Club, whose members are quite aware of the conditions which would result from efforts made to make Sydney grow in undue proportion, without regard to the interests of the State as a whole. But apparently your correspondent's preventive for any such state of things is that Sydney should not be made attractive, that its progress in modern improvements should be neglected, and that its public services and utilities should be allowed to lag behind the times. This is an attitude which, of course, the Million Club is not likely to assume.

The name of the club is perhaps unfortunate, and that one of its objects is to see Sydney's population increase to 1,000,000 (which, of course, it will not do unless the country behind can support them) is, perhaps misleading, but I am sure that your correspondent will yet learn that his criticism is wide of the mark. His criticism would be good if the facts are as his letter sates, but they are not. In its real nature the club will be non-political, non-partisan, and non-sectarian. Among its members will be gentlemen, residents both of country and city, gentlemen of high character and public standing in professional, commercial, and business circles, with the interests of the whole State at heart. The club will strive to make New South Wales a better and better-known State, and Sydney a better and better-known city. Its character will be such that its voice will be listened to and its point of view respected, because it will have no axe to grind, its only objective being to see improvements and reforms desirable in the interests both of city and country, brought into speedy effect.

I am, etc.,
ONE WHO KNOWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—"W.J.C." in your Thursday's issue, expresses the opinion of many disinterested well-wishers of their native country, and, but little can be added to the protest.

Anyone reading lately the medical testimony on the effect of factory life on young girls, and also inferentially in a lesser degree upon boys, should wish to see an exodus of young people and their parents to the healthy country. I am, etc.,

HUMANITY.

A CLEMENTS TONIC LETTER FROM TUBBUL, VIA YOUNG, N.S.W. READ IT IF YOU ARE NOT IN GOOD HEALTH.

Tubbul, via Young, N.S. Wales,

CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"As a miner for years I worked in wet ground, and now it is telling on me, for I suffer with my kidneys and backache and loss of appetite.

"I saw several doctors in Young; they told me I had hydatids, and said an operation might be necessary. Their medicine did me no good. I resolved not to have an operation; and I was so used up that I could not walk any distance, often having to have a spell after a short walk. I have tried all sort of medicines and all sorts of pills, and my life has been a misery to me through continuous ill-health until I tried Clements Tonic. The first and second bottles did me no good, but the third did. I was surprised at the great change that came over me. I felt as well as when I was 21. I can eat and sleep well, and work is no trouble to me, and I think that CLEMENTS TONIC OUGHT TO BE WRITTEN IN GOLD. I always keep it in the house. I HAVE JUST TAKEN 23 BOTTLES, and I never intend being without it. To me it is past all understanding, and I think it is ONE OF THE GREATEST NERVE CURES IN THE WORLD. I recommend it to anyone broken down in health. You can do as you will with this letter, as I am here to prove what it has done for me.

"(Signed) J. WISEMAN."

Business men should specially read this testimonial, and remember that Clements Tonic may renew their lease of life. It will certainly give them new mental strength for Insomnia and Brain Fag or Debility it is ever reliable. Mr. Wiseman speaks only as he finds concerning this great nerve and blood medicine. All Chemists and Stores sell it.—Advt.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Mr. Lawrence Godfrey Smith, after five weeks in England and two in Antwerp, is now visiting his student haunts at the Leschetizky School, Vienna, where he expects to remain for half a year. At Antwerp the Sydney pianist found both a French and a Flemish opera-house, and at the latter enjoyed an excellent performance of Verdi's "Otello," with an orchestra of 80 players, and prices ranging only from one franc to five francs. In Brussels he heard Ysaye, the great violinist, conducting his own fine orchestra. "Ysaye," continues the traveller, "is a tremendous and forceful personality, and the Vienna Conservatorium might have secured him as violin-professor had they had the wisdom to accede to his prime condition—the conductorship of the Musik-Verein orchestra here. My first visit in Vienna was to my old master, whom I found teaching away at 82 years of age with unabated vigour, continually interrupting the pupils to play passages, which he did with great brilliance. The new Mme. Leschetizky, a fellow-student with me five years ago, has just given a successful concert here. She is a young Pole, and must be one of the most beautiful women on the concert platform. I wonder if your readers have heard yet of the latest Vienna Wunderkind? I refer to Erich Korngold, 14 years of age, a composer whose opera, written two years ago, has been produced at the Imperial Opera House, whilst his latest, a very long piano sonata, is spoken of as being even more modern, complicated, and difficult than anything of Richard Strauss. He is quite famous. Schnabel, the Berlin pianist, is playing the sonata in all his recitals all over Europe. Last week Paderewski's new symphony had a cool reception. The 'Tageblatt' gave it a long notice, which included the remark, 'The work is, indeed, long, but still not so long as it seems; for while one thinks it will never leave off, it really lasts scarcely more than an hour and a half.'" Mr. Smith adds that Casals, the Spanish 'cellist, is drawing crowded houses, also that Eugen D'Albert, the pianist, who now chiefly devotes himself to composition, has come to live in Vienna. "If he took up teaching, Vienna possessing also Leschetizky, Godowski, and Sevcik, the assemblage in the Austrian capital of English and American students would be greater than ever."

"Dame Nature," in which Miss Ethel Irving is drawing crowded houses at the Criterion for her now fast-lessening farewell appearances, owes not a little to the artistic consistency of the support. Bataille's touching drama in particular has given welcome prominence to Miss Violet Ley as the Princess de Chabran, in which the splendour of magnificent dressing and an imposing presence is employed to disguise the insolent selfishness of this over-indulged woman of the great world. Miss Ley was born in St. George's Square, Belgravia, and possessing a deep mezzo-soprano voice made her stage debut in a small part in the musical play "Eastward Ho" at the London Opera Comique. The production was the last at that once-famous playhouse before its destruction. Miss Ley then moved over to the Strand Theatre in "The Water Babies," under the late Willie Edouin, and after a stay at that home of farcical comedy was engaged as understudy for "Trilby" on tour, a character for which both her physique and her voice eminently suited her. This artist's next engagement was as principal understudy in "The Great Ruby" at Drury Lane Theatre, where she played also a minor role, and on tour she played seconds to Zena Dare, with Seymour Hicks in the musical piece "The English Daisy." After that, partly owing to her marriage with Mr. Townsend Whitling, the actress confined her efforts to drama, playing heavy lead in "Riding to Win," lead (as Lady Sylvia) in "The Country Mouse," and in the name-part of "Peter's Mother," in which comedy she, as a girl of 24, was years younger than her son Peter (Mr. Percy Hutchinson). Just before sailing for Australia Miss Ley and Mr. Whitling were appearing as Odette and Lucien in "Inconstant George" (parts taken here by Miss Beatrice Day and Mr. Reynolds Denniston). Mr. Gilbert Porteous went down to Eastbourne on purpose to see them, and immediately offered them important positions in the Ethel Irving Company for Australia.

Miss Esta D'Argo, whose fine style as an oratorio soprano, was indelibly impressed upon Sydney audiences at the Royal Philharmonic Society's Christmas performances of the "Messiah," has since spent a few weeks with the friends of her girlhood in this city, and on January 24 sails for London by the Seydlitz, with her husband, Mr. John Tillett, and her mother, Mrs. Holroyd. Mr. Tillett, who is a member of the London firm (Ibbs and Tillett), which for some years included Mme. Clara Butt amongst its clients, has already accepted contracts for Miss D'Argo's immediate reappearance after her arrival in England. Her first engagement will be in March, with the Cardiff Choral Society, in Gounod's "Redemption," and a few days later she will sing with the Alexandra Palace Choral Society in Gounod's "Faust." This will be the artist's fourth appearance as Marguerite at the Alexandra Palace. This favourite singer has important engagements on Good Friday, when she appears at the Crystal Palace sacred concert in the afternoon, and the Queen's Hall sacred concert in the evening, the list of artists including Mmes. Butt and Crossley, Mr. Ben Davies, and Mr. Kennerley Rumford. Miss D'Argo has also received the gratifying intelligence of her engagement for the Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace in June. Other artists so far engaged are Mmes. Donalda, Butt, Messrs. Ben Davies, Herbert Brown (baritone), and Robert Radford (basso). Messrs. Ibbs and Tillett on December 12 last introduced Professor Otakar Sevcik, the famous violin teacher of Vienna, as conductor of the Queen's Hall Orchestra. This was Sevcik's first appearance in London, and formed a novel departure, inasmuch as all the six soloists were students from his school. The prices were 7s 6d, 5s, 3s, 2s. Afterwards each of these students gave separate recitals at the Bechstein Hall. Miss Daisy Kennedy's success was cabled to Australia at the time. This student left Adelaide for Prague at the end of 1908 by the advice of Jan Kubelik, who had heard her play, and made her Vienna debut on October 18 last. Mr. Tillett is advised that Miss Kennedy will probably tour Australia late in the present year. His best news is the prospect of a second starring tour here by his wife under his own management in about two years' time.

Mlle. Eva Gauthier, a Franco-Canadian mezzo, is arranging for a brief starring tour of Australia this winter, which is likely to be remembered as a contralto season, not a single soprano having yet been announced. The new artist has been making great successes in the Straits Settlements, India, China, and the East, and is now in Java, where she was giving concerts in November, 1910, and then returned for a further season in 1911. This news has been brought here by Jhr. W. J. E. Van Riemsdyk, a first lieutenant in the Netherlands cavalry, who will return to Batavia and Padalarang about a fortnight hence with encouraging reports as to the musical field available for a singer of distinction. Mlle. Gauthier, who was trained in Paris by M. Bouhy, through the assistance of Lord Strathcona, supported Mme. Albani throughout Great Britain, the United States, and Canada as a contralto, but made her operatic debut in Italy at the Theatre Guidi, Pavia, as a lyric soprano in the role of Micaela. At the Hague and Rotterdam the press notices allude to her as "a warm, full mezzo, of beautiful quality, and very extended range." Mlle. Gauthier, who has been decorated by the Queen of Denmark, is very pretty and petite. It is probable that she will reach Australia in April or May. After those months three more famous contraltos are due here—Mmes. De Cisneros, Kirkby Lunn, and Eva Mylott, and the Quinlan Grand Opera Company is also expected.

The English papers record the death of Willie Parker, a boy-actor who appeared in London with success in Michael Morton's farce "The Little Stranger," the humour of which consisted in the boy-actor's disguise as a baby. Parker was very clever in the part, but when he appeared with an English company in the play at the Sydney Palace Theatre in November, 1906, its far-fetched absurdities failed to sustain a run. After his return to England Parker appeared in "Peter Pan," and had a good part at His Majesty's Theatre in Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Pinky and the Fairies."

THE LIFE OF THE STREETS.

(BY E. R. COLLIS.)

Public holidays are well enough in their way, but in the city they are depressing. The closed shops, with their iron guards, the bolted doors of offices, and the deserted streets, lacking all their workaday life and colour, have a dismal effect upon even the holiday-maker, until he is clear of them and hunting for a seat upon a crowded steamer, departing for a pleasure resort. The Quay and railway station are busy enough, the trams may be full, but for the city proper, it is a city of the dead, the more depressing on account of its size. But when the holiday is over, and collar-proud men return to work, all the pleasant activity of the streets begins again. The stir of life sounds in the footsteps on the pavements, in the business of the shops and offices. Its steady hum is a grateful sound after the daytime slumber of the holidays. When Charles Lamb confessed his love for the sweet security of streets, he imagined no security in deserted streets. He liked a venerable pile of learning like Oxford, well enough in vacation, and that is fitting, for a brooding peace hangs well on cloisters of antiquity but he would have regarded the forlornly-empty streets of London in much the same whimsical manner as he wrote of death, "to be branded, proscribed and spoken ill of." After all, normal life is the best, and there is a sense of security in fellow passengers on the footpath, and the busy world around one, that the echoing desertion of a metropolitan street cannot give. One of the forlornest spectacles I have witnessed was on a Tasmanian Sunday afternoon in Launceston, when a traffic constable was stationed, for some reason not readily apparent, at the intersection of two streets. In a desolate calm that fretted the imagination he waited three-quarters of an hour before a vehicle passed, and then it slowed down at the crossing and gave him no opportunity to rebuke the driver. Better the fiercest crush of bewildering traffic than so cruel a lethargy. Holidays are sweet on the countryside or by yellow beaches, but the city streets are desolated to make a picnicker's holiday. Yet, by the contrast, one enjoys the more the normal day of the city, distinct alike from the press of the Christmas shoppers and the loveliness of the succeeding holidays. Telegraph messengers on bicycles again skim by, lorries rumble, and motors hoot. Shops are gay once more, short-sleeved, bare-headed young men dash about the streets, little knots of men and women plume themselves round the stage doors of theatres, and energetic auctioneers, in stores open to the street, sell gold watches and other ornaments for a few shillings. Traffic constables alternate between dogmatism and chivalry in a roar of trams, motors, carts, and bicycles. People on the footpaths, careless of keeping to the right, or sauntering with painful slowness, block your advance and force you into the roadway. Cabs pull up in front of banks, newsboys thrust their wares beneath your nose, and a street band collects a crowd as it plays on the kerbstone. Benevolent gentlemen, with tips from the stable, bestow them upon comparative strangers, and arrange quiet card parties, plain-clothes constables move unostentatiously about, and detectives scout in pairs, now dividing, and now meeting without effusion. Youths in white coats offer a book of the races, pedlars dangle ingenious toys at the end of elastic, and small girls, with an air of wondrous possession, cross the roadway in front of imminent trams and vehicles. A heavy stone, with a nerveless man upon it, is hoisted a hundred feet in the air to the top of some new building, and pedestrians pause below and throw back their heads to watch the ascent, the crane, responsive as the airman whistles. Sometimes a pavement artist stakes out his claim upon the footpath. The parks are briskly crossed by those on business bent, a few quiet streets are rich in their own individuality, and the tea rooms are temptingly open. Martin Place is gay with flower-sellers with umbrellas over their baskets. Sailors in caps or bowler hats, and men-o'-warsmen in costumes affect lower George-street, and the clothing shops of Brickfield-hill overflow with goods. York-street is lined with waiting vehicles, and diffuses an air of solid prosperity. Sussex-street has a distinctive flavour loved by old habitues, and obtrudes bags of potatoes and onions upon your notice. Straining teams of horses toil up the steep streets from Darling Harbour wharves. Upon the wharves themselves coatless men with bowler hats balanced upon the backs of their heads and necks are besieged by half-a-dozen clerks and aproned carters, and deal swiftly with their requests. In Surry Hills the children play in the streets. In the Haymarket Chinese in European clothes walk about, or lounge at the entrances of produce stores, and the atmosphere of Sussex-street is being attained. From the arcades a leisurely throng debouches on to the streets. Two thousand people wave as an ocean-liner sails from its wharf. Turbaned Assyrians with curling red shoes walk from the Quay to Hyde Park, or sometimes inspect the Art Gallery. Photographers' and florists' windows attract spectators. Pretty girls and women make pilgrimages to drapers' shops and tea rooms, and exotic young fashionables from the counting-house parade the pavement in the latest made headgear and shoes. At the entrances of the continuous picture theatres uniformed commissionaires proclaim the attractions to be found within. Many of us find the pictures of the street even more fascinating.

That is part of what Lamb meant by the sweet security of streets, the security of busy numbers, the ordered fabric of society. Even the idlest man might well like to stand in the press of the throng, to feel life washing over and around him, and to note—with an inartistic but natural change of metaphor—how its heterogeneous particles are fused in an harmonious whole. The life of the streets is materialistic only to the materialist; to anyone else it is romantic, thrilling, dashed with colour, and glowing with warmth. Though we grant their pre-eminence in that respect, it is not alone century-old Latin communities that blaze with warm colour and picturesque pageantry; the new-born cities beneath the line show a little, too much, the iconoclasts contend. I confess to a sneaking sense of delight at the sight of lawyers' wigs in King and Phillip streets when the courts are sitting. I like to notice the mop of hair of an occasional white-kilted Fiji or New Hebridean policeman, as his bare brown feet move noiselessly over the pavement, and I enjoy a Governor's outrider as he goes by. Little things, but they help to satisfy the pride of the eye. One likes to feel, too, in the mingling of the pavement of all the arts, sciences, crafts, trades and professions a sense of the complex organism of the city. There comes a reality that a city is not merely a huge stretch of buildings, but that it has a sentient life of its own, formed of the totalling lives of its citizens. There is a pleasure as well in recognising on the footpath on which you are walking the men who have made names for themselves in their different spheres. The streets are wonderfully neighbourly in that regard, and, without being snobbish one may pay mental homage to achievement. It includes a feeling of satisfaction that one is part of it all. Yes, the streets are right neighbourly, and when they glow with life, one understands something of the love which the Athenian had for the city of the violet crown and the Roman for the diadem set upon the Seven Hills. But if you look with kindly eyes upon the life of the streets, with its pleasant bustle, its variety, its neighbourly humanity and its unwitting drolleries, be wise enough to see the city only when it is working, deserting it on its holiday. There is a useful moral in a pleasant libel circulated about an energetic resident of an important northern town. He was a night watchman who earned his bread in watching shops by night, and consequently slept by day. Being a genial Irishman, he longed for a more gregarious occupation, and presently he trenched into his sleeping hours to sell fruit upon the railway station to the passengers of the numerous trains that passed that junction. Between his two occupations he made money, and next became the proprietor of a boarding-house without resigning his other positions. With three separate professions he was kept busy—in the day time at least—and the good man's enemies whispered that the only time he found for sleeping was when watching. This was probably a delightful but unfounded libel, but if not, it was, bating the question of morality, an ingenious device worthy of the attention of the reader. He, too, should ignore a city of the dead and flee the echoing desolation of its streets. If he may not do that, he will suffer, but at least he will have his compensation. For on the day after the holiday the ebb and flow of the pavements will wash over him more pleasantly than before, and the life of the streets will seem the finer for his yesterday's deprivation.

Kia-Ora Lemon Squash

MANUFACTURED BY O.T. LIMITED.

A Thirst-Quencher & Blood Purifier

—— MADE FROM ——

Lemon Fruit Juice and Cane Sugar

A cooling and wholesome draught with most valuable powers for improving health, for refreshing the body, and for dispelling tired feeling and summer langour.

Kia-Ora is exceedingly refreshing and is a much superior beverage to the over-sweet, thick-syrup Lemon Squashes on the Market. It is purer and has more virtue than the usual home-made Lemon Squash.

A Glass of Kia-Ora and Soda Water half an hour before meals is an excellent system purifier that clears out the irritating acids of unclean fermentation.

20 DRINKS IN EVERY BOTTLE.

Take home a Bottle and try it—TO-DAY

KIA-ORA is richer in Lemon Fruit Juice than many other brands of Lemon Squash!

A PERFECTED HEALTH BEVERAGE

"KIA-ORA" is something quite different to ordinary Squashes. It is due to a very special process perfected during 12 years manufacturing that its qualities are developed to such an extraordinary degree.

Some Squashes are nearly double the acid strength of "KIA-ORA," not because they contain double the quantity of Juice, but because of the large quantity of added Citric Acid. This Acid, although a constituent of Lemon Juice, is not actually Lemon Juice when dissolved in water, because in the Lemon Juice itself there are other valuable constituents present.

Those disappointed with the harsh acid flavour of such Squashes will be delighted with the Soft Fruit Flavour of "KIA-ORA."

Kia-Ora is specially concentrated by a method which conserves all the goodness of the fruit. It is not too sweet, nor too dry, and is free from any admixture of deleterious substances. It is not only most delicious to the taste and most powerful in allaying thirst, but it is a most valuable drink for torpid liver, catarrhal jaundice, rheumatism and gout, and is a powerful agent for preventing and removing scurvy.

Ask distinctly at the Bar for Kia-Ora Squash—don't take another brand and imagine that it is "just the same."

Kia-Ora is obtainable at first-class Hotels, Soft Drink Shops and Restaurants by the GLASS, and at Stores by the BOTTLE.

With the aid of Citric Acid (which is merely the Acidity of Lemons) some Squashes are made with but little, if any, Lemon Fruit Juice.

SCIENCE NOTES.

W. G. P.

PROTECTIVE COLOUR.

The current "Science Progress" has a good article on the basic principles of protective colouration for the most part following the fine work of the American naturalist Abbott Thayer. At the root of the theory of colour in animals there are several wide generalisations. Natural selection in its most general sense comes first; such things as mimicry, sexual selection, and protection by concealment follow. But these factors do not always work together, and at times they are diametrically opposed. Thayer in his work has laid most stress on the principle of concealment. In comparison he thinks the other factors severely restricted; and no doubt they are. At first sight it is not quite easy to accept the view that the colour of the peacock equally with that of the nightingale, of the zebra equally with that of the antelope, of the butterfly equally with that of the caterpillar, is designed for concealment and nothing beside. But the more the facts are considered the sounder does the position seem to be. Animals are, in fact, much better hidden in their ordinary surroundings than the average looker-on is apt to imagine. Thayer had the great advantage of being trained as an artist before he became a naturalist, and he early learnt the importance of trying to see—and, incidentally, trying to find—an animal in its natural habitat. This taught him at the start what protective colour means, and later on it taught him the way in which nature imitates art—the whole object of art is to produce an illusion, and that is the whole object of protective colour. To fade into the background has been the final objective of natural selection; an objective attained by counter shading, by "averaging the background," and by obliterating the outline. Thayer's achievement has been to generalise the theory of mimicry. An animal is not imitating any specific object; it is imitating its whole environment. A colour scheme may be at once bold and effective as a means of concealment, once we learn not to detach the animal from its surroundings. One point is important. Protective schemes of animal-colour have never been elaborated to hide them from man; animals themselves do not see things from the same angle.

THE LIGHT OF FIREFLIES.

Two Indian students have recently made some interesting observations on the light of fireflies. The light is naturally fitful and faint, and not easy to experiment with. A rapid photographic plate was placed in a dark slide, and three insects were placed on the slide beneath a watch glass. The plate gave a dark grey print after an exposure of three hours. A similar print was obtained when the slide was enclosed in a leather case. Similar plates were then enclosed in black paper, and still gave a grey print after two hours' exposure. It is obvious that the trend of these experiments is to show that this so-called phosphorescent light is in some way closely akin to the radiation which we know of in connection with Rontgen rays and similar phenomena.

SOME EXTINCT REPTILES.

In the Carboniferous and Permian deposits are found various small reptiles which suggest the beginnings of the development of the class from the amphibia. As would be expected, they retain many amphibian features. Some of the earliest forms were found in Nova Scotia within decayed tree stumps buried in the coal-measures. These forerunners of the reptiles were all small, most of them not attaining a length of more than five or six inches. As the development of the class went on there was a general growth in size and a general solidification of vertebrae. At present what appears to be the central stem of the reptilian tree is represented only by a single species, the Tuatara of New Zealand, and this ancient lizard is even there very nearly extinct. After these first of the reptiles came others four or five feet long in the upper Permian, and the reptilian character becomes more and more pronounced. The Tuatara is usually grouped with the lizards, but it is at least doubtful if it should not be classed as a much more primitive reptile, the entire absence of copulatory organs being sufficient in itself to separate it from any existing lizards. The vertebral column is also very primitive, and incidentally has many features in common with the dinosaurs. Formerly common all over New Zealand, the Tuatara is now restricted to a few small islands where it is specially protected. They make a small hole as a burrow, which on the coast is often shared commensally with petrels. Curiously enough, the reptile tolerates the bird, but it will not allow another reptile to live in the hole. Next to this most ancient of living reptiles comes a large and mixed group which begins to appear in the lower red sandstone of Bohemia and the middle Permian of Russia. Others come from the Karroo sandstone of South Africa. The curious thing about them is that they developed strongly mammalian characters. There is, of course, no doubt that the mammals sprang from a reptilian group, but it is none the less interesting to come upon a parallel line of evolution, which, though it led nowhere, serves as an indication of what, in the ultimate, really happened. One of the most characteristic features of the mammals, for instance, is their dentition, and these extinct reptiles developed what might be called a perfect set of mammalian teeth. The skull, again, is almostly perfectly mammalian in type; and the pelvic arch is an almost perfect reproduction of the mammalian plan. Whether or not the mammals actually arose from these Theomorpha or "beast-shaped" reptiles is a matter still in dispute, inasmuch as definitely reptilian characters are at the same time strongly developed. But however that may be they serve to show the line of advance, and it is beyond all doubt that from some such transforming forms the first mammals must have come.

THE CARRIAGE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS.

The immediate source of sleeping sickness is, of course, the bite of the tsetse fly, by which the trypanosome is introduced into the blood of the victims; but in the course of working out the problem some curious points have been met with. In general, the flies bite human beings or other mammals, and incidentally feed on their blood. But great swarms of biting flies are often found in places where there are no men and no mammals, and one puzzle is to know how the flies manage in such a case. Roubaud, who has been doing some fine work on tropical disease, has carefully investigated this point, and has shown by laboratory experiments that in the absence of any more enticing prey the flies readily bite various species of caterpillars, and also attack snails and earthworms. It is, therefore, more than probable that invertebrate hosts play a large part in the distribution of the disease-bearing parasite.

VALUE OF BIRDS TO MAN.

Before a meeting of the British Empire Naturalists' Association, at the Royal Society of Arts (reports a London journal), Mr. James Buckland spoke on "The Value of Birds to Man." He opened by asking: Had not man overlooked the beneficent power of the bird? The greatest known enemy of vegetation (the prime requisite for the perpetuity of all other forms of life), was insect life, while bird life, by virtue of its predominating insect diet, wielded a most important balance of power against this chief pest of vegetation. The number of insect species was greater by far than that of the species of all other living creatures combined, and practically all living animals, as well as most plants, furnished food for these incomputable hordes. Forbush had computed that a certain flesh-eating larva consumed in twenty-four hours two hundred times its original weight, a parallel to which, in the human race, would be a baby consuming in the first day of its existence 1500lb of beef. But the number of insects that daily passed the insatiable maws of young birds almost exceeded belief. Birds unquestionably were one of man's greatest possessions; yet it was just the possession on which he set the least value.

ROUND A CONTINENT.

BY O.H.

A century ago the circumnavigation of our island continent would have been a memorable achievement. Nowadays, with rapid transit, and all the wonderful adjuncts of modern civilisation at our disposal, the feat seems hardly worthy of more than passing notice. But so few of our citizens have enjoyed the privilege of circling the ten-thousand miles of coastline. So little is known of at least one portion of the journey. A century of progress has left some stretches even as they were when Dampier and his merry men first skirted the coast of New Holland.

If a trip round Australia from Sydney to Sydney does nothing else, it impresses the traveller with the vast extent of this Cinderella continent. Ten thousand miles is but an abstract term, until the traveller, day after day and week after week, sees the bow-blade breaking through the long leagues of ocean. Then, having exchanged the Pacific for the Antarctic, and the Antarctic for the Indian Ocean, the Indian Ocean for the Arafura Sea, and this in turn for the Pacific again, some idea is formed of the territorial immensity of the smallest continent. Having exchanged the equable Sydney clime for the bitterly cold breezes of the Bight, and then suffered the enervating and insistent heat a few degrees from the equator, one laughs when the unsophisticated person exclaims that the world is a small place. Electricity has annihilated space and conquered time, but actual distance is still a factor to be reckoned with.

Notwithstanding that the largest island is so very large, it seems to dwindle when catalogued as a continent. Where we have 10,000 miles of coastline, South America has 14,500, Africa has 16,000, Europe 19,500, North America 24,500, and Asia 35,000. And it is well to remember the paramount influence that coastline bears upon the progress of the continents. On comparing the external contour of each continent with its superficial area, we find that progressive Europe has—in proportion to its surface—four times as much coastline as Africa; nearly three times that of Asia; and twice that of America. The coastline of Australia comparatively to its superficial dimensions is two and a half times greater than that of Africa, and nearly equals that of North America. So while the whole mass presents an aspect of solidity, the surrounding oceans give it a development of coastline which, though much inferior to Europe, is relatively considerable. We have 300 square miles of territory to one mile of coast; Europe has only 190, North America 350, South America 482, Asia 500, and Africa 750.

Professor MacMillan Brown, lecturing in Sydney some time ago, referred to the indented coastlines as "breeding-places for sailors." Pre-eminence belongs to a virile commercial maritime nation. That is why the centre of Russia, of Asia, of Brazil, of Africa, and of Australia lay behind in the march of progress. If Spencer's Gulf had extended to the M'Donnell Ranges, Central Australia would have had an entirely different history.

The course that the writer took in looping the circle was not an uninterrupted sea voyage. This would have left nothing but a blurred impression of seascape and coastline. Opportunity was taken to cut inland at almost every port of call, and so get some idea of the primary productions and the primary producers of the vast hinterland. So before setting out for Sydney a couple of years was spent tripping north to Wallangarra, north-west to Moree and Mungindi, west to Bourke and Cobar, south to Albury and Milton, south-west to Hay and Deniliquin. Similar journeys in Queensland afforded a glimpse of Cloncurry, Winton, and Longreach; in Victoria, of Ballarat, Bendigo, Echuca, and Wahgunyah; in South Australia, of Mount Lofty and Murray Bridge; in Western Australia, of Kalgoorlie and Leonora, Mount Magnet and Nanine. A few thousand miles of land travel—train, coach, cycle, and horse—provided a basic knowledge of the interior, which made the sea journey far more profitable and instructive.

Sydney never looks so irrestibly attractive as when the ocean liner swings outward, and the traveller gazes back over the peerless harbour, alive with ferries and coasters and pleasure craft, and the last impression as the red roofs of Mosman fade away is that Sydney is in all essentials more blessed than any city under the sun. Too well known for recapitulation are the south coast headlands and ocean beaches. Familiar also are Gabo Island and Wilson's Promontory and the Rip which leads to Port Phillip and the southern capital. Not unfamiliar is the journey past Kangaroo Island, into the Gulf of St. Vincent, and on to the Torrens and the city of churches. But when out again into the Bight, and bowling merrily along to westward, the traveller feels that he is now beyond the ken of the average Sydney-sider or Melbournian. Fremantle, with its mail-day bustle and excitement, tells of the progress of the Golden West, but Perth, the beautiful city by the Swan, leaves pleasant memories with the visitor. Past pretty little Rottnest Island, destined to become the playground of the West, a new and smaller steamer swings to northward till it meets a line of reef jutting out into the Indian Ocean, and inside that reef Geraldton and the shimmering waters of Champion Bay. North-east are all the riches of the Murchison Goldfield. Nor'-west the Sultan steams for 500 miles till it sights Dirk Hartog Island. Then it cuts eastward into Shark Bay, and north to where the white roofs of Carnarvon gleam in the sun. A long, long pier juts into the sea. A tram propelled by a sail skims along to the pier. A hundred kangaroo shooters inland have loaded the wharf with hides. A few score squatters have banked it high with wool. Negotiating Geographe Channel, the Charon enters the tropics, skirts Nor'-west Cape, and anchors off Onslow. A little lugger rides saucily over the bounding waves, dextrously catches the passengers and mails, and skims in again to the pier. A horse tram negotiates the few miles of sandhill, claypan, and spinifex that lead to the port. This is the first of the pearling ports of Nor'-west Australia. Further north is Cossack, populated by a few tired whites, some Chinese, Japanese, Malays, and niggers. Cossack is within the willy-willy zone, and it is visited periodically by these disturbances. A fine new pier having been erectd at Port Sampson, the importance of Cossack is dwindling. Inland nine miles (a horse-tram being again the connecting link) is Roebourne, once the capital and distributing centre for the vast nor'-west. But Port Hedland, a hundred miles nearly due east, is usurping its place. From Hedland (which boasts one of the very few harbours on the coast) long lines of smellful camels, with Afghan drivers, used to trek to Marble Bar and the mineral belt of the interior. Now a railway runs. Hedland is dumped down and spread about over a white sandhill, which refracts the heat till it scorches the face and burns the foot through leather sock and shoe. There is consequently a disproportionate number of hotels, and on account of the willy-willies numbers of the houses are chained to the ground with iron cables. The stories of the wreck on sea and land caused by these tornadoes would fill a bookcase.

Three hundred miles further on are Roebuck Bay and Broome, the pearling capital. This is perhaps the most interesting port on the coast. A forest of masts tells the whereabouts of the pearling luggers and schooners. A blaze of colour in the streets of "Asia" bears witness to the most cosmopolitan community in the Commonwealth. There may be seen the Japanese wrestlers, Oriental bazaars with pearlshell intricately carved and mounted, Binghis newly in from the back country, the Manilamen's Band, and a host of un-Australian sights; but, best of all worth seeing, are the white sails of the luggers gliding over the glorious blue, purple, and eau-de-nil waters of Roebuck Bay. The Bullarra swings round Dampier Land, threads the intricate passages of the Buccaneer Archipelago, and shoots between the narrow gorge-like passage that marks the entrance to King's Sound. When the tide comes in it rushes like a torrent, for here is the greatest difference between high and low tide in Australia. Forty feet is the fall, second only to the Bay of Funday for a world's record. Now we are in practically unknown country. It is here alone in Australia that the black man resists the elsewhere victorious march of the dominant white. There are big frowning headlands and deep and sinuous recesses like the Fjords of Norway. Then, entering the picturesque Cambridge Gulf, is seen the most northerly port in Western Australia, Wyndham, nestling like white tents under the lee of the frowning Bastion. In the country hereabouts the cattlemen wear revolvers, not out of bravado, but for sheer necessity. Lubras, in flaring red and green petticoats, fish on the forreshores. Niggers in the chain-gang work on the roadway. Wyndham vies with Cloncurry, Port Hedland, and Marble Bar for the unenviable honour of being the hottest place in Australia.

Leaving the Golden State behind, a tiny 50-ton steamer—after nearly turning turtle in a storm—takes us to Darwin, the Territorian capital. The magnificent port is almost deserted. The beautifully-situated town, shaded with bamboo and luxuriant tropical foliage and feathery palm fronds, does not bustle with life and activity. Half of it is sacred to officialdom. Half is profane with Oriental squalor and wretchedness. This is the problem province. The Changsha, blessed with perfect weather, finds the Gulf of Carpentaria like a sea of glass, and nearing Cape York glides through the picturesque archipelago, skirting lovely green-clad islets with waving palms. Here and there little beaches of pure-white sand run down to the waveless ocean. Then comes Thursday Island, the key to Australia. It is a quaint, picturesque little island, with a polyglot population, just like Broome, though there are fewer Asiatics and more Papuans. Turning southwards again, the Maranoa steams along between the Great Barrier Reef and the mainland, but this is better-known country. There are the magnificent Whitsunday Passage, Cairns, and the foam-fed glories of Barron Falls, Cooktown with its Oriental savour, Townsville with the Magnetic Island; then, in turn, Bowen, Mackay, Rockhampton, Maryborough, and Brisbane, the northern capital.

Once more we are within the pale of civilization, and steaming down the Brisbane River we turn our heads southward and homeward. To the east lies the vast Pacific, oldest of oceans. To the west lies sunny Australia, youngest of continents, with a mere sprinkling of colonists—a handful of heroes scattered to conquer a continent.

PAPUA.

AN INTROSPECTION.

(BY R. A. GOODYEAR.)

I.

Port Moresby to-day grows whilst you look at it. Three years ago it was just a mean little sprinkle of some thirty houses, and you looked in vain for its street scheme. You may walk up and down and across its roads to-day, in search of a vacant allotment, which you will not find.

Much of Papua's recent history can be read by comparing the census return of three years ago with yesterday's. The former you will be able to repeat after a second reading; the latter is beyond memorising. But, as a sign of the times, look at the personnel of the two lists. The first tells you that the population comprises storekeepers, traders, recruiters, civil servants, miners, and hotel-keepers. Just the everyday crowd that could be found on any isle in the Pacific. For Papua, like most of the other islands, was asleep. Now, in addition to the former residents, you are introduced to bankers, butchers, bakers, planters, weekly-paper proprietors, timber exporters, builders, carpenters, etc., and last, but not least, of all, our policemen. This is the day of Papua's awakening; and these are the people who do things, the men that count. The clattering of iron, the banging of hammers, the buzz of saws, and the hundred other noises incidental to building fill one's ears throughout the working day. Strange, indeed, would it not be if Port Moresby had not grown up. To-day it is the parent of a half-grown suburb, which also grows up apace on the flank of Hannabada across the bay.

Three years ago saw the birth of a new era for this territory. Three years ago Papua was just another land-of-lots-of-time, and you sent your letters about town per a native, on "shank's pony." To-day you tinkle the telephone bell, and flash it along a wire. Then we owned a wharf which reached out hungrily into the bay, crying for the boats which never came. To-day you find it hidden under long lanes of building material, heaps of merchandise, and piles of machinery. Some little time ago the powers which be saw that trade was developing, and built a bond shed, which they deemed big enough for all the immediate future requirements. Boats started calling before it was finished, and now it is hardly big enough to hold our whisky and tobacco. The other things had to take their chances outside. Sometimes it rains. Lately, though, it appears to have forgotten how to. All the new arrivals and all the changes are to help convert about two million pounds sterling into plantations. Rubber, coconuts, and sisal hemp divide the interest.

Mining is confined to a few alluvial fields, where a little gold is being found, and some copper lodes in the Astrolabe range district about 18 miles inland from Port Moresby. During the last copper boom it looked as though there was money to be made here, and several so-called experts went nosing around the shows; but the boom burst, and they don't now visit here.

A few syndicates put holes down on the different properties, but since these were, in most cases, sunk upon the recommendation of some clerk-turned-geologist, the results were of no value. Big low-grade sulphides stick up right through the country. I do not know any lodes around Australia which make for such easy proving. A diamond drill would either rush these shows on the market or blast their chances for ever inside a very few months, seeing that they would be able to start where in most cases drills begin to leave off at the stuff they are looking for.

But at present mining hardly counts, except in possibilities, and the people who are here are here to plant.

RECRUITING.

Recruiters are scattered all over and all around the territory trying to induce "the boys" to come away and work on the plantations; up every river, across to every island, through every swamp where a village is or may be. Their failure is apparent wherever you turn. The plantations buried under weeds and Kuro-Kuro grass shriek it. The miners "on the drunk" for months on end waiting for their "boys" tell you of it.

Papuan labour requirements have got past being supplied by the territory. The Papuan bush is a big aching emptiness, where natives are not. The latest official estimate of native population is 2[illegible],000—divide this by two to get at the number of males. It is 125,000. Say you can make one in every five of these work by regulati.n. We have 25,000. This is a liberal estimate, and is literally true. Think of it. A handful of natives equal to, in numbers, the crowd which would be in the Sydney Cricket Ground on a slow day to watch a test match to be the only labour available to develop 331,677 acres of tropical plantations out of dense tropical jungle. The position is impossible. There is a very bad time in store for many shareholders in Papuan concerns if outside coloured labour is refused admittance.

A RUN ROUND.

We will have a run around the coast in a recruiting vessel as far as the Fly River, calling at the various villages en route. In the first, the boys won't come, because, out of the last crowd of 30 who left, one of the number died. It is in vain that you try to tell them that boys sometimes die in their own village. That boy died away from home, and they will insist that he was killed by sorcery or purri-purri—call it anything you like. This village will not let any boys away for perhaps a couple of years.

You heave the anchor up, and run along to the next village, perhaps 30 miles further along the coast. Here they tell you that they're "busy making gardens." The boys that you want will probably be getting a sweat up looking on at the making of them. At the next place, the Purari delta say, you find that the simise (a big ceremonial dance which lasts may be four or six months) is about to start. The men are in the dubus making the head dresses—huge masks resembling animals, fisher-birds, etc.—and you see that your chance of getting labour here is like "Buckley's," and so make for the Bamu. Here, the older men in the dubus exert their influence to block you. However, perhaps six boys sneak away with you, despite the parental opposition. It would be a pity to leave them, and, if you ever listened to the objections of a boy's parents or relations there wouldn't be a hundred natives working throughout the territory to-day. You take the boys away dirty, dreamy-eyed, and lazy, out of a cess-pit of filth. It is its own justification. You spend a fortnight amongst the villages in the Fly without success.

These boys formerly worked on pearling boats in Torres Straits, where they got biggish notions, and learnt some things they would be better ignorant of. They used to get £1 per month. The rate which the plantations pay to ordinary labourers is 10s and found. The residents of the Flydubas gave out an edict that "no boys would be allowed to go to Port Moresby under £1 per month." The position is still this, and likely to be.

You have been away on the trip perhaps four to six weeks, and you have brought back with you just 12 recruits—instead of 12 times as many.

One-twelfth is, I think, just a fair proportion of boys working to boys wanted. This, not for further development work, but for maintenance, and to keep weeds down on the area now planted.

Managers of plantations pace up and down, day after day, month after month, cursing the weeds, and waiting for the labour which doesn't come. No wonder is it that the man is prematurely grey, and that such items as brandy, whisky, opium, tabloids, etc., begin to make their appearances in his monthly invoices.

Your physician cannot prescribe a better medicine than Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy for cramps, colic, or pains in the stomach.—Advt.

IN THE GARDEN.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEA.

Raisers of new varieties of sweet pea have for some years past been devoting much attention to the creation of a type that would flower at midwinter, in places where the weather conditions are such as obtain in the coast districts of this State, and excellent results have been obtained, for there are now quite a number of comparatively hardy kinds that bloom freely during the cooler months. With the addition of the summer flowering varieties of this very popular annual, the season for producing the delightfully perfumed, charming sweet pea flowers has been considerably extended. By judiciously sowing the seed of the different varieties at intervals in the more favoured districts, sweet pea flowers can be procured during a great part of the year. In those parts of the State where sharp frosts and snow are experienced the winter flowering sweet pea will not bloom in the open during the coldest months. The winter flowering sweet pea grows about three feet high, and produces flowers of various colours, blue, crimson, lavender, maroon, pink, primrose, scarlet, white, and yellow being the prevailing hues. In the coast districts the first sowing of seed may now be made in an open, sunny, but not exposed position. This class of sweet pea gives excellent results when grown in a row in deeply-worked, rich, sandy loam, but does well and flowers profusely in any deep, fertile garden soil. The seed should be sown very thinly and evenly, and left covered with about half an inch of soil. If the resulting seedlings grow too thickly the weaker ones should be liberally thinned out, so that those left may develop into good flowering specimens. When the plants are about one foot high light, twiggy pea sticks should be fixed on both sides of the row to keep the stems upright, for in that position their flowers are seen to much greater advantage than when they straggle on the ground. Some very good varieties, with the colours of their flowers, are included in the following list:—Burpee's Earliest White, pure white; Earliest of All, pink and white; Earliest Sunbeams, primrose; Jack Hunter, yellow, salmon ground; Le Marquis, dark blue; Meteor, scarlet; Mont Blanc, very early, white; Mrs. Alex. Wallace, lavender; Mrs. Wild, crimson; and Mrs. W. Sim, salmon pink.

THE POPULAR PANSY.

Where it is desired to have pansies in flower in early winter in the coast districts the seed should be sown during this month, or very early in February. The best and most expeditious way of raising the seedlings at this season is in shallow seed boxes, or earthenware seed pans. These should be well drained, and filled nearly to the rim with fairly rich, light sandy soil, which should be pressed firmly down, and left even and smooth on the surface. On this the seed should be sown very thinly and evenly, and left only lightly covered with fine soil. Then the seed boxes or pans should be placed in a shady position, and the soil watered through a fine rose watering can. The soil should be kept moist, but not too wet, and when the seed has germinated the seedlings must never be allowed to suffer from the want of moisture at the roots, or the results will be disappointing. The young seedlings must be kept shaded from the hot sun until they grow into strong plants, but it is important that they should have an abundance of light and air, in order to develop sturdy, vigorous growth. As soon as the young pansies have developed three or four leaves they should be carefully transplanted to a bed composed of light, rich soil, in rows about three inches apart, and the same distance apart in the rows, and kept shaded from the direct rays of the sun at midday until well established. When the plants are large and strong enough, and have been gradually inured to the full sunlight, they should be carefully lifted and transplanted, about nine inches apart, to the positions where they are to flower. If the ground is moist, and favourable weather is chosen for the operation, the plants will not suffer much by the removal. To obtain the best results pansies should be grown in friable, rich soil, and during all stages of their growth they must be regularly and efficiently watered at the roots, and frequently overhead before they begin to bloom, in dry weather.

NOTES.

Montbretias (Tritonias) are now in full bloom and producing a very fine effect. These hardy South African bulbous plants thrive in rich sandy soils in the coast districts, and are worth more extensively planting. They grow from about two to four feet high, and when planted in groups produce a brilliant effect in bloom. Their flowers, which are produced in great profusion, are of various colours, but orange, scarlet, and yellow predominate. There is a very beautiful variety with double flowers like a double yellow tuberose, that is worth including in every collection where it is not already represented.

Poinciana gilliesii, the shrub that produces the so-called "bird of paradise" flower, is now blooming very freely, and forming a conspicuous feature in some gardens. It is a very ornamental shrub, attaining a height of 5ft or more, has graceful foliage, and bright yellow flowers, with long, rich crimson stamens, disposed in clusters at the ends of the branches. It thrives on a variety of well-drained soils, endures the heat and dry weather remarkably well, and is worth a good position.

Lilium tigridum, the tiger lily, and its handsome double-flowering variety, are now making an attractive display in the borders. Their orange-red flowers, freely and remarkably spotted with black, are produced at the summit of tall stems, and give quite a character to their surroundings. These, as well as the very beautiful flowering varieties of Lilium speciosum, must not be allowed to suffer from the want of water at the roots, or their blooms will not be well developed. If weak solutions of liquid manure are given occasionally at the roots the plants will be greatly benefited, more particularly if they are growing in soil that is not too fertile.

Some varieties of the hardier class of fuchsia that have been flowering in the open since early spring are now rather unsightly. Their long growths should be well shortened, the weaker and useless shoots removed, and the plants pruned into shape. Then fork in lightly about their roots a little bonedust or decomposed rich manure, and mulch them with some decayed vegetable matter. This will stimulate vigorous new growth, which will flower profusely in autumn and early winter.

VEGETABLE GROWING.

Cucumbers, melons, squashes, and vegetable marrows that are being grown for succession should receive occasional attention. The superfluous and weakly shoots should be removed on a cloudy day, and only the fruiting laterals permitted to grow. The points should be pinched out of the latter after two or three leaves have developed beyond the young fruit. When this is carefully done the sap will be directed to the nourishment of the crop instead of being used in the development of so much foliage. The bush custard squash, and the bush vegetable marrow, which are better than the running varieties to grow in small gardens, will not require such attention. Rock melons, when about half grown, if carefully placed on clean pieces of wood about one inch thick, and one foot square, will be kept from coming in contact with the soil and will consequently have a bright and clean appearance when ripe. Celery plants raised from a previous sowing should now be sufficiently advanced for transplanting to trenches that have been well enriched with well-decayed manure, or spent hops from the brewery, to provide for early supplies. Celery is a moisture-loving plant, and must be regularly watered in dry weather or it will be likely to go prematurely to seed. A large sowing of celery seed may now be made in a shady position to provide plants for the principal winter and early spring crops. Butter beans and dwarf kidney or French beans, which are amongst the most easily cultivated and prolific vegetables to grow during the hotter months, may still be sown at regular intervals, and in quantities according to requirements, till March, so as to keep up a continuous supply of these excellent table succulents. Small sowings may now be made in prepared beds of Brussels sprouts, cress, endive, kale, kohl-rabi, or turnip-rooted cabbage, bush custard squash, onion, leek, lettuce, radish, and bush vegetable marrow. In drills sow seeds of carrot, parsley, parsnip, peas (in the cooler districts), spinach, swede and white turnip, and sweet corn or table maize. Tomatoes that are being grown for succession will require attention. As soon as the fruit is well formed pinch out the points of the too-exuberant growths, and thin out all the weaker and useless shoots. Most of the culinary (summer) herbs are in a sufficiently advanced condition for cutting, drying, and storing for future requirements. This should be done in dry weather, so as to preserve the flavour of each plant.

In the coast districts seeds of the following plants may now be sown:—Wallflower (which should be treated in a similar way to that recently described in this column for stocks), candytuft, cornflower, English marigold, and mignonette, to provide plants for flowering in winter and early spring. Seeds of anemone and ranunculus may also be sown in a bed composed of light, rich soil. With a little care and attention the resulting seedlings will flower freely in spring. It is too early to plant the tubers of these charming and very beautiful flowering plants, but when the right time arrives, it will be referred to in this column.

"STRAKER SQUIRE." "HURTU." "HURTU."

AN UNBIASSED AND INDEPENDENT OPINION.

A N.S.W. clergyman writes:— November 4, 1911.

Sir,—I venture to enclose two little "potshots" I made during my recent overhaul of my "STRAKER SQUIRE." The Car had completed 6501 miles before the overhaul—the first "dressing-down" it has been subjected to. The results were very satisfactory—revealing everything in perfect order. Bearings all good, rings quite a nice fit, not much carbon. In fact, it is useless saying anything, for there is absolutely nothing to say. The car is as it should be, and has always been so. During those 6500 miles there were frequently times when I thought she would tear her heart out—rough roads, mud, creeks—everything that could try a car through and through. I have frequently done trips that would be marked as incredible if read in a story. Sometimes a motorist will do a "freak trip" just for fun and glory. To do such trips as part of a regular routine is a vastly different thing. The "STRAKER SQUIRE" has been through work of this nature month after month. To look at her now, to hear the engine ticking, to handle her on the road, you would think that she only left your garage last week. I would like to show you some of the places I travel to round here. You would return to Sydney with a huge respect for the motor. I have long wanted to make some photographs of these trips, and would do so if you could possibly spare a day during your visit here. They would make thrilling slides. Pardon want of brevity. I had intended to give some report of my overhaul—if only for the satisfaction of inquirers.

PRICE EQUIPPED AS PER CATALOGUE, FROM £475.

The HURTU is 10/12 H.P., 4 cylinders, 70 x 100 bore and stroke, 3 speeds, and is up to date in every respect. It is simple, silent, flexible, durable, reliable, and handsome in design. It is one of the oldest French makes. It has been on the road for upwards of 17 years. It won a GRAND PRIX in 1908. It's a compliment to get any for abroad. One been running in York-street for over a year. What an owner says after 14,000 miles:—

"It is faster, better built, and infinitely a better hill-climber than any other car made. I have tried them all."

THE DUNLOP "COVERSAVER"

is an elaboration of our popular inside canvas repairing sleeve for use in gashed or weakened covers. It is constructed of several plies of high-grade canvas, which are vulcanised and moulded under heavy pressure to the exact size of the inside of cover. The sleeve is made of sufficient length that the tapered ends lap one another, thus forming, when fitted, a complete supplementary casing to your motor cover. This sleeve can be moved round from time to time, thus enabling a weakened or partially worn-out cover to be used for a very considerable distance, when it would have otherwise been relegated to the scrap heap.

THE "COVERSAVER"

Can be used time after time in damaged covers, and is really the best money-saving—and trouble-saving—device yet offered to motorists. When placed inside the cover it does not in any way impede fitting of tube. Does not heat or creep.

GOLDENLYTE MOTOR LAMPS

WERE USED BY HIS MAJESTY THE KING AT THE INDIAN DURBAR.
THEY ARE ADMITTEDLY THE BEST OF ALL MOTOR LAMPS.

WHY?

They use only the yellow or more penetrating rays of light, and eliminate the merely dazzling violet rays. In other words, they give a longer and better light than other lamps.

They do away with deep shadows, and enable a clearer discernment of distant objects.

Their brass work is that solid type of work and material that one associates with first-class British goods.

The lamps are made in various sizes and designs. Insist on your cars being fitted with "Goldenlyte" Lamps. They are the best, yet cost no more than others. They will last and please for a lifetime.

MOTOR CAR SPEEDOMETERS.

Speed 60 miles, trip record 1000 miles, season record 10,000 miles. £5 5s, plus 15 per cent., £6 0s 9d.

S. SMITH and SON, Ltd., of London, make the All-British Speedometers that have been adopted by his Majesty the King, his Majesty the King of Spain, and most of the Nobility of England.

They have been adopted by the Daimler, the Austin, the Deasy, and the Albion Car Companies, and this after severe tests of all other makes.

Notwithstanding that they are the best instruments, they are the cheapest on the market, and we are selling them at the London prices, plus only Customs and importing expenses—15 per cent.

Motorists are invited to see the range of designs.

N.B.—The hand revolves the CIRCLE, not merely a quadrant. Plain figures, cash.

The Lords and the Reform Bill—Home Rule in Peril—Diplomatic Interviews—Glimpses of Nelson and Goldsmith—An English Court of Quarter Sessions.

Dec. 8.

Like the poet, Mr. Asquith shot an arrow into the air and it has fallen to earth at an undesigned spot. His announcement of intention to add a comprehensive Reform Bill to next session's already crowded programme, whilst it amazed the general political circle, has carried dismay into the Irish Nationalist camp. The Redmondites had come to regard next session as peculiarly their own. A Welsh Disestablishment Bill would be introduced, and a Plural Voting Bill pressed forward. But Home Rule would hold the first place, and would certainly accomplish one of the three stages ordained by the Parliament Act. The only possible lion in their path was an early dissolution. The Parliament Act requires that before a measure approved by the Commons and opposed by the Lords shall be added to the Statute Book it must thrice have been rejected by the Lords. But as the life of the present Parliament may run into the year 1915, the Home Rule Bill introduced next session, and duly thrown out by the Lords, was assured of receiving the Royal assent within the duration of its life.

The introduction next year of a Reform Bill changes the situation. It is not the case as is widely believed, that immediate dissolution must necessarily follow on the enactment of such a measure. The Reform Bill of 1867, and that of 1884, were severally followed by an interval of 12 months before a dissolution gave the reconstructed constituencies opportunity of exercising the franchise. But assuming a Reform Bill were carried next year, Parliament would be dissolved in the course of 1913, and the achievement of Home Rule, which a month ago seemed within the grasp of Mr. Redmond and his friends, would be relegated to the dim and distant future. It is said that of course the Lords will throw out the Reform Bill, which will thereafter run its three-session course with Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment, to be added to the Statute Book in the penultimate year of the present Parliament. But there's the rub. Mr. Asquith has placed in the hands of Lord Lansdowne and his party a weapon they may be quick to use. If they pass the Reform Bill when it reaches them next year, a dissolution will follow within the period of 12 months, and both the Home Rule and the Disestablishment Bill would be subjected to the possible peril of a general election, and the certainty of indefinite delay.

This is a coup d'etat that may be expected to recommend itself to the astute statesmen who in the House of Lords control the destinies of the Unionist party. They will not like a Reform Bill that will not only abolish the plural voter, but destroy snug Conservative seats in the universities. But a sacrifice that will result in the shunting of Home Rule and Welsh Disestablishment when they are actually in sight of the terminal station, is worth making.

An important passage in Sir Edward Grey's momentous speech in the House of Commons on British foreign policy touching the Moroccan question was the record of a statement made to him by the German Minister calling one day at the Foreign Office. It exceeded in length a quarter of a column of print, and was avowedly textually rendered. How was this done? Is Sir Edward Grey gifted with a memory so marvellous that he could retain every word of the message, writing it down when the Minister left? Or did he take a shorthand note as it was spoken? The other day I had the opportunity of questioning the highest authority on the subject, and gathered some interesting particulars of diplomatic usage in such circumstances. The German Minister read aloud from M.S. the detailed statement of the views of his Government on the latest phase of the crisis. Sir Edward Grey, seated at his desk, wrote out in longhand the message as it was delivered.

To ordinary folk, unused to the time-honoured tradition of diplomatic "conversations," there seems a better way of doing the business. Had Prince Metternich brought with him his message typewritten in duplicate he might have handed a copy to our Foreign Secretary, which not only would have insured greater accuracy, but would have saved some trouble and half an hour of precious time. But the custom followed has existed from the beginning, and who shall say what might happen were it varied? Another quaint custom consecrated by time is observed when the representatives of two great Powers interview each other. At the opening one or other reads from M.S. a formal statement. If it be of exceptional delicacy and importance the Minister to whom it is addressed says it will be necessary for him to consult his Government on the matter. If it be within his authority to deal with it, he makes suitable reply. In either case the incident there closes. But very seldom does the visitor forthwith retire. There follows what at the Foreign Office is known as "an informal conversation," which is usually prolonged beyond the limits of time occupied by the formal communications, and may by its results prove to be more important.

In a collection of autograph letters to be sold by auction to-morow at Sotheby's rooms there are two which, by strange coincidence, tell of the plight of two famous Englishmen. Writing on September 23, 1802, Nelson replies to the application of an old friend for his patronage. "If ever," he writes, "I should be again called into service, or placed in a situation able to promote your nephew, let him present himself to me with a note who he is, and I shall be happy in being useful to him. I cannot be recollected, for when we met I was not 24 years of age and active; now blind of one eye, can scarcely see with the other, with the loss of one arm, besides being otherwise crippled. However, I am thankful to be as I am; my mind is happy under these apparent misfortunes."

The other letter is from Goldsmith, recently back from his journey on the Continent, which, amongst other things, endowed the world with the deathless poem, "The Traveller." Lamenting his financial embarrassment, he writes from the Temple Exchange Coffee House on August 15, 1758: "I have already given my lanlady orders for an active reform in the state of my finances. I declaim against hot suppers, drink less sugar in my tea, and check my grate with brickbats. Instead of hanging my room with pictures I intend to adorn it with maxims of frugality; these will make pretty furniture enough, and won't be a bit too expensive, for I shall draw them all out with my own hands, and my lanlady's daughter shall frame them with the parings of my black waistcoat." It will be observed that as a preliminary exercise in economy he twice spells landlady without a "d" in the first syllable.

This morning I sat on the Bench in the Court of Quarter Sessions, holden in one of the oldest boroughs in Kent. As a travesty of judicial procedure, the business exceeded the range of the fancy of Gilbert—who by the way, much enjoyed attendance on the magisterial Bench. The calendar contained the name of a single prisoner charged with stealing clothes of the value of 12s. In order to try him the Recorder had come down specially from London, bringing his wig and gown with him. A grand jury had been summoned to consider the evidence, and decide whether upon it they should or should not return a true bill. Assuming the latter case, and the assumption proved correct, a pretty jury was impanelled to try the prisoner, whom a barrister was briefed to prosecute. His fee certainly would not exceed two guineas, a little less than four times the value of the goods alleged to have been stolen.

By direction of the Recorder, the prisoner stepped into the dock. He was an undersized, pale-faced man of about 40. His beady little eyes gleamed as he surveyed the scene. The wigged and gowned Recorder, a full bench of magistrates, a long line of special jurors, another group of petty jurors, all brought from their homes and businesses on his account. One was sorry for him the more acutely because he had been in prison seven weeks awaiting trial, an awkward circumstance supposing his innocence had been proved. But I am bound to say he did not play the game. The charge having been read by the clerk, he was called upon to plead. "Guilty," he said, and there was an end of our business, ushered in with tremendous preparation described. It turned out upon police evidence that the prisoner was an habitual tramp and a confirmed thief. He went about the country taking, like Moliere, his good things where he found them. He had spent the greater part of the last ten years in gaol, and thither the Recorder, with a few moral reflections, sent him for an additional six months.

I don't suppose anyone in Court more highly approved this conclusion of the matter than the shabby, slouching, beady-eyed man in the dock. Winter is at hand. Food grows scarcer. Sleeping out becomes impossible, whilst tramping by day through slush, in rain and snow, loses much of its charm. Six months hence, when he is set free again to prey on his fellow men, it will be June, with all the summer time awaiting him. Meanwhile, through the bleak winter months, he will be housed and fed, all at the expense of the ratepayer.

THE CONDOMINIUM.

YASUR, THE BRIMSTONE-THROATED.

(BY "TRADER.")

III.

Compared with Etna, which has swallowed a poet and sat on a god; or with Vesuvius and Pelee, which have buried cities with a single sneeze; or with that sea-sick monster in Samoa whose incessant vomiting not ocean himself can withstand, the fire-pot of Tanna seems poor enough. Yet, nowhere else in the world, perhaps, has the old lame firemaster of Olympus a steadier-burning forge.

According to the Tannese, or, rather, to their foes, the Erromangese, since they themselves, now the missionaries have come, are rather ashamed of the story—the fire on Yasur is a theft. Originally it belonged to Erromango, and not to Tanna at all; but the crafty Tannese, aided and abetted by their gods, stole forth one night while its guardians slept, and carried it off to Yasur.

The best time to visit Yasur is after the sun has set; which means, in the tropics under the stars. It is better, indeed, to go under the moon as well; for, though the moon takes much from the weird infernal glare, it adds worlds to the ride through the woods. It saves you also many a scratch and blow—since a bush track on Tanna is three feet wide.

Choose your night, and choose your moon; and then, while earth lifts her dripping face to the stars, and the palm trees bare their shining arms, steal forth at midnight alone.

Earth will speak to you then, and the muffled rustle of dewy leaves whisper of worlds unknown. Through the branches above you, you will hear the breathing of night; and clear above grumbling Yasur himself, whose husky, explosive rage booms ever out on your ears, you will catch the song of the stars. Even the foolish bat, as he flies off to big mother moon, screams like a dream-startled child.

For the first half-hour you ride through tangled bush; then suddenly the forest comes to an end, and you enter the zone of fire. Tying your horse to a withered stump, you push ahead on foot. And then the track ends too. One moment you walk on lava too hard to take an impression; the next, you struggle through sand too loose and fine to hold a footprint half an hour.

On the right is a lake, the home of Gossiburriboo, though, even in the dry season, when the depth is less than two feet, I have never seen the devil himself. What one can see, however, even now in the moonlight, is a hill in the middle of the lake, which Yasur, some years ago, attacked by sudden bile, blew bodily from his side. There are natives still who remember the rent—for the mind of the native mocks at time!—natives who, standing where the base of the Yasur now is, gazed into his burning pit. It must have given the devil a fright. Indeed, apart altogether from Yasur's indigestion and bile, the wonder is that either lake or devil still survives the unceasing ashes of his wrath. Day and night the fine dust falls, as the centuries wing their flight, and yet Gossiburriboo to-day hides half the year in water 30ft deep.

And now you must make the final ascent. In perpendicular height you are within three hundred yards of the monster's mouth; but these three hundred yards will take you close on two hours. It is not that there is such a vast difference between the perpendicular and the slope—you would travel faster if this were greater; but the broken lava and shifting sand, combined with the actual heat of the ground, make travelling painful and slow.

Long before you have reached the summit, the crust is hotter than naked feet could bear. In one place a thermal creek flows steaming down the slope, while further on the very earth breathes steam. At last the ground is so hot it burns you through your boots.

Within 50 feet of the summit you poke the crust with a stick; crude sulphur lies underneath. You prod a little deeper; the sulphur is crystalline. Once more—a foot down this time—and the sulphur comes up warm and soft; then you prod no further. It was all very well for Empedocles; Etna gave his sandals back. But how do you know that Yasur has plenty of boots?

And now, only two and a half hours since you crept out of bed, you are gazing in awe down the monster's throat. Heavens, what a throat! Three-quarters of a mile wide, and dropping sheer down nine hundred feet! Nine hundred and sixty feet, I think the record is—though how they are sure of the sixty I do not know. Perhaps those are the sixty the sailor went down, that mad-cap tar, of whom I have heard—I am sure he worked in the stoke-hole—who, visiting Yasur one day, insisted on going down tied to a rope;—and went, till the fumes overcame him. Nine hundred and sixty feet, all smoking and red, and below a bubbling pit of fire.

Etna, though two miles high, can hardly surpass it; and think of the trouble of getting to the top of Etna. Vesuvius, too, according to Mark Twain—even if you start at midnight—takes some little [illegible] to ascend. (Seventeen pages, I think.)

Yes, this is the remarkable feature about Yasur, that a hill which a schoolboy would think nothing of climbing for a sparrow's egg, could swallow, with ease, a fair-sized town.

Oh, the fear and the fascination of it all, as you stand there at midnight alone—the shuddering dread that would drive you away, and the horror that will not let you go. A thousand feet down in that weird glaring gloom, a bubbling sea of golden fire: and each moment from the deepest caverns of earth a crash like the crack of doom. Oh, these bellowing barks of rage; each moment you turn to go, and one of these drags you shuddering back. First a low growl, like far-rumbling thunder; then a flash and a deafening roar, and a thousand tons of liquid fire shoot up at the shrinking moon. Higher and higher you see it go, spreading like a hollow fan; then it turns and falls in a golden shower, and clatters far down the abyss.

At last, lest Vulcan should claim you, too, you turn and literally flee; and not till you hear the homely champ of your horse do you really breathe freely again.

You look at your watch; you have been away exactly three hours; yet you seem to have skirted the void itself, and stood on the bourn of Time.

TROMBONIST'S £40,000,000 FORTUNE.

Fortune has smiled upon a humble performer in a theatrical orchestra at Madrid. His name is Juan Antonio Bayona, and the trombone is the instrument of his choice. Recently (reports a Madrid message in a London journal) he created a tremendous scandal in the Teatro Martin by uttering discordant notes whilst the soprano was singing a love passage. At the end of the performance the conductor invited the trombonist to explain his extraordinary conduct. The humble artist handed his musical director a cutting from an illustrated paper reading as follows:—"A rich Spanish merchant has just died in California, leaving a fortune of 200,000,000dol. In his will he appoints his brother, Juan Antonio Bayona, sole executor. Inquiries made by the Consulate only prove that the Juan Antonio Bayona lived in Valencia until 1882, and married in Madrid in 1884, where he died in 1901." The modest orchestral artist is the son of the person named, bearing the same name. Bayona found the newspaper cutting by the merest accident. On entering the theatre his cigar fell out of the holder. Stooping to pick it up, his eyes fell upon the cutting. He says he will not give up playing the trombone until he is perfectly sure of his legacy.

THE DURBAR.

AT DELHI.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

(BY REV. STACY WADDY, M.A.)
Headmaster of King's School.)

IV.

Gentlemen, the King!

There are times in one's life when events happen so swiftly in succession, each so striking and so different, that the event of yesterday seems to have passed straight into history; the verdict is instantaneous, and even while it is happening it commends itself to the imagination as unique and historical.

So it has been to those privileged to see the indescribable magnificence and splendour of the Coronation Durbar at Delhi in 1911. It is now but five days, five crowded days of swift-moving scenes of dazzling splendour, since the King-Emperor set foot in the city that for centuries was Imperial. Scene has followed scene, pageant succeeded to pageant; it seems hard to realise that five days ago they were in the future; they have been lifted at once to the pedestal of the historic. And the mind of the spectator is almost bewildered. One hardly knows what set of thoughts to encourage. Are we to view them simply as pageants of splendour and scenes indescribably picturesque? Then they will satisfy even the taste most greedy for combination of colour and bewildering wealth. Should one rather look beneath the surface, and think of the historic meaning of these events? Then there is food for abundant thought, and hopefulness about the future of India, and the welfare of an Empire ruled by so statesmanlike a King as this great idea of the Durbar has proved our Sovereign to be. Or, if one is eager to see at close quarters the statesmen and soldiers who mould our Imperial destinies, here they are to be viewed at close quarters, glittering in their scarlet and gold, arrayed with the medals and orders that mark their services to the Empire, and point them out as the men of the future.

The three great public pageants have been the State entry of his Majesty, the Coronation Durbar, and the Royal garden party in the Palace of the Moghuls, when the King showed himself in State to the people, after the historic fashion of the Moghul Emperors, and on the very balcony they used.

It must be confessed that the functions began with something rather near to a failure—at least, a disappointment. That was in connection with the State entry of the King. For days and weeks the people of India had been pouring into Delhi (I mean here the native people); and it must be remembered that the way it strikes a visitor and white-skinned spectator is of little importance compared with the great point, now it appeals to the native. One would go further, and say that it is the humble class of native who matters more in this connection than the Rajah. The appeal of the Durbar is to the great multitudes of India, the King's appeal to popular imagination. The tales that will be told round the village fireside count for more than the reports that will go into the papers. India does not read; it talks and thinks.

Excitement grew tense as the climax approached. At last, at 10 o'clock punctually, on a cloudless morning, the guns thundered from the fort; the King had set foot in Delhi. Outside the walls, along miles of route, were massed the waiting peoples; the one thought was for the King. Nearly fifty thousand soldiers lined the route; their one business was to salute the King. And it will hardly be believed, yet it is true, that for the greater part of the route the King rode by almost unrecognised. Behind him came the Queen, glorious in apparel, gracious of demeanour, bowing from side to side in her carriage. But the King rode on his Queensland horse, Akbur; and round him—much too close round him—rode the nobles who attended him. He was in field-marshal's uniform; they also were in uniforms very similar; hence it came to pass that he on whom all thoughts were centred failed to focus the eyes of the crowd. It was a thousand pities, for he rode through an almost silent crowd, as a result; and those who would have been eager to warm their blood with rousing "hurrahs," Eastern and Western alike, went away disappointed and perplexed. "I have seen a splendid 'tamasha' (show)," said one native, "but I have not seen my King."

And a splendid show it was, the three-parted procession that took over two hours to pass. To the great regret of all, the elephant procession that so delighted people at Lord Curzon's Durbar was abandoned; the King rode, the Queen was in a carriage, and the native princes followed the example. Yet the splendour and taste of the East found their opportunity. The procession of native princes was a feast of varied splendour. There were horses decorated with cloth of gold, with raw gold ornaments, covering cruppers and foreheads. There were even carriages totally overlaid with silver, and mounted richly in gold, which almost dazzled the eye as the four stately horses drew them along. Of jewels sewn thickly upon coats and head-dresses one grew almost tired.

In this connection I may mention an experience of a later function. It was at the laying of a stone of the All India Memorial to Edward VII. The King had gone; the people were departing. With some of The King's School Cadets, who on that day had been seated with the Imperial Cadet Corps of India, every member of which is of noble or royal blood, I was walking away. I had heard of one Rajah, who has "the million-pound coat;" a coat so strewn with diamonds and pearls and other gems that it is valued at that fabulous price. And in that crowd I looked round, and found myself brushing against that famous garment. I am no judge of gems; but there were in that crowd many other coats and turbans that flashed almost as gorgeously; and it is a feature of Eastern magnificence that though the ladies are hidden, the jewels are worn by the princes, in a thick splendour that no European lady would match.

As the sun shone on the stream of carriages and their jewelled inmates, the thought came how great a man of the human race was represented in that procession. A Viceroy of India once remarked that "He and the Emperor of China ruled one half the human race between them, and yet found time for breakfast." We do not realise that there are still over four hundred ruling native Princes in India, governing as much Indian territory under their flags as is covered by the flag of England. Those Rajahs whom we applauded that day (and some were heartily cheered, especially the plucky Begum of Bhopal, the only woman-ruler of a State—a "purdah" lady, hidden under a thick veil, but with two keen eyes looking out of slits) represented the rule of nearly one hundred and fifty million people; the King's Viceroy rules another hundred and fifty million; and his Majesty represented the wide expanse of the British Empire. There was much to think of as the long line swept by.

Of the great event of the visit, the Coronation Durbar itself, it would be a heart-breaking task to attempt a full description. The idea and plan of it were entirely simple and dignified; every detail of it was worked out with a stateliness and success that could not possibly have been improved upon; and the affect upon the people was very marked. Even a visitor, who found only a babel of sound in the eager buzz of talk around him, could see the difference of spirit in the crowd after the Durbar from what it had been after the State entry. There was no mistake about the King this time; they had seen their King; and in a ceremony, which, though on so huge a scale, yet never became formal or theatrical and had some little touches of almost homely appeal about it.

Imagine a circular arena, over a quarter of a mile across. On it are massed twenty thousand troops in fullest review uniforms. There was the British scarlet and white helmet; the Highland kilts. But the native troops no more kept to one pattern of uniform than to one type of face; and greens and blues and reds and yellows, and many another brightness mingled in the serried ranks of the wearers of turbans. And in the morning breeze fluttered the gay pennons of thousands of lancers. Amongst them, proud, indeed of the privilege accorded to them on such an occasion, were the grey and blue uniforms of the King's School Cadets, representatives of the oldest cadet corps in the British Empire.

Enclosing the arena are two semi-circles of seats—the one roofed, a stand of white and gold, for the distinguished visitors, and for the seats of the Princes who are to do homage. Facing it was a splendid pavilion of rich crimson cloth, upheld by poles of gold. There was a second pavilion, loftier than this, in the centre of the arena, covered with a dome of gold; on it were two thrones; here the King and Queen would face the people, and here the herald would proclaim his Coronation.

And facing them as they sat high aloft on these thrones were their people. Over fifty thousand could sit on that banked-up mound; many more could stand. And such a show of colour as that crowd made no man could imagine who had not seen it, and no man could tell. Soldiers are always picturesque; rajahs, as all the world knows, flash with jewels. Ladies wore their gayest frocks; their Majesties wore their crowns and ermine robes. But we were quite unprepared for the discovery that the most picturesque part of the great show was the people who had come to look at it. Not a black hat amongst them, but that bright hot sun shone down upon masses of vari-coloured turbans and flowing robes that formed a background to the uniforms of the troops. Here would be a group of deep blue—a block of schoolboys, perhaps; for wisely it has been ordered that special care shall be taken to let the growing youth of the land see the show. Side by side will be the brightest mustard-colour, tossing and heaving in excitement as some fresh incident catches the popular attention.

Sometimes, when a man feels that great moments are passing round him, there comes a sudden thrill, a catch at the throat as emotion wells up, a clouding of the eyes with moisture. There were many moments of deep interest at the Durbar, but there were two moments when I frankly confess that my eyes were dim.

The first was half an hour before the King was to arrive. There was a stir; down one of the roads that wound between the troops in the arena we could see officers riding slowly, with hats held almost reverentially off their heads. A buzz of sound grew to a cheer; the crowd rocked and surged. Down the lines of troops like a great feu-de-joie came the spontaneous cheers—quite unrehearsed. Who can resist such a sound as over eighty thousand people cheering? We cheered, too, we knew not why. Then the word went round. It was the crippled old veterans! the "has-beens," the men who wore the uniforms of days long past, who fought the fights that made the Durbar possible. They have had a special camp at the Durbar, and have been treated with all honour; the King has voiced all our feelings in the gracious honour he paid them. And as they came down that road, pathetic wrecks of bodies that were so strong and eyes that were so steadfast and bright, the great roar of welcome must surely have warmed their hearts. Veterans of the Mutiny! men of Lucknow and Delhi, still alive. Hats off—and see them if you can through a mist of swelling tears.

The other moment that many a spectator would pick out as that which came home on him with a thrust was the simplest, most homely part of the whole show. The homage was paid, and their Majesties rose from their thrones, and then walked hand-in-hand from the one pavilion along a raised walk to the other. No retinue obscured them—only the fascinating little pages—rajahs' sons all—held the trains of the ermine robes, and the gold umbrellas shaded the crowned heads. Behind the suite, and the Imperial cadets. For a moment there was a hush; then a great burst of applause, and amidst that, slowly and with stateliness yet simplicity and homeliness, they walked to their exalted thrones.

It may be of interest to give the King's own proclamation of what he meant the Durbar to be, and why he came to India. After reciting how he succeeded his lamented father upon the throne, he goes on:—"Whereas it is our wish and desire to make known to all our loving subjects within our Indian dominions that our Royal Coronation has been celebrated, and to call to our presence our Governors, and the princes, chiefs, and nobles of the native States under our protection, and representatives of all the provinces of our Indian Empire, now we do declare our Royal intention to hold at Delhi an Imperial Durbar, for the purpose of making known the said solemnity." This explains the object of the gathering; the King is not crowned there; he proclaims that he has been crowned King, and claims homage in person.

Of the wonderful effect of his visit upon the popular imagination there cannot be the least doubt. It was visible in the faces of all the people as that enormous crowd broke up. It was increased by an announcement that had been carefully kept secret, till it fell from the King's own lips at the Durbar, proclaiming Delhi the capital of India in place of Calcutta. This was indeed a daring step; as someone well put it, this was "making history and geography at once." Sometimes a conversation in a railway carriage with a chance acquaintance sums up the popular point of view better than set words; and I may repeat what was said to me by an Indian while we rode out on that queer, halting light railway from the city to the canvas city.

"The Indians are all King-worshippers," he said. "We think that the King is the incarnation of all that is good; and that if he came to the country all good will follow. When there were no rains, and people said he would not come, we said, 'If he will come, then the rain will come'—and he did. Now we are very happy people; we have seen our King."

There has been one more scene, more truly popular even than the Durbar, on the day following. Early in the morning the different religions formed processions, and on the ground below the palace walls, that once was a river-bed, joined in prayer and thanksgiving, each after his kind and to his own god, for the coming of the Emperor. Then the day was given over to a festival; and about 4 o'clock the King and Queen appeared in Royal robes and crown, and showed themselves to the assembled throngs on the historic Moghul balcony. There could have been little less than a million people gathered there, to be seen at one sweep of the eye. And mass by mass, from different States, each with its banner, preceded by its sword-dancers and tumblers, it flowed by and greeted its King. Was ever such a sight? The dusk came down; the firework display lit up the packed crowd; searchlights played and waved. Up from the crowd came a sound of a million voices; and in them was just that incalculable note of joy and loyalty that it was hoped the Durbar would bring. Yes, the Delhi Durbar has been a success. God save the King!

UNIFICATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—This is a question, not for the determination of tax-imposers, but taxpayers; so one can smile at the matter being disposed of (?) after discussion behind closed doors by a handful of Labour dignitaries in the persons of Ministers, ex-Ministers, and others who wish to keep the Parliament doors open for their own honour and emolument. "It was officially announced that the motion in favour of unification had been rejected by 19 to 6"—so runs your report at the end of what should be, not barely a column, but a full-page, report of what each speaker said anent the matter. But, closed doors or not, the eyes of the public are wide open as to who are Australian patriots and who are pocket politicians now sitting at Hobart. Nineteen are for more political power and pay for themselves; six, for the power of the people, as a restraint on the blundering and plundering policy of bad State Governments. It is the bounden duty of the Fisher Administration to put this question decisively, on a plain "Yes" or "No" issue, again before the public for their decision. It needs but writers and speakers to come to the front and make their views known all over the Commonwealth, and then the legislators who are pulling against the movement will go down, as they richly deserve. There is no time like the present. A vigorous effort on the part of high and low, rich and poor, and the thing is done.

I am, etc., A UNIFICATIONIST.

ITS EFFECT IN INDIGESTION.

Persons suffering from indigestion will find the following letters acutely interesting:—

From Mrs. C. Searle, Lindsay-street, Hamilton, Newcastle, N.S.W., 10th June, 1910.

"I suffered acutely from dyspepsia, severe headaches, and biliousness for some years. I could scarcely eat anything solid without having to endure pain afterwards. I grew weak and excessively nervous. Hearing of the cures effected by Warner's Safe Cure, I gave it a trial, and obtained complete relief from all the distressing symptoms that had troubled me for so long a time. I am never troubled with pain in the head now and I can eat a good meal without the least ill-effect."

From Mr. W. T. Mansfield, saddler, etc., Baylist-street, Newtown, Wagga, N.S.W., 27th July, 1910.

"For some years my life was made miserable by disease of the kidneys and chronic indigestion. At times the pains in the back were excruciating. I could scarcely eat anything without having to endure great suffering. There was always a fulness and sense of oppression after meals. As a natural result I grew weak and excessively nervous. I had heard about Warner's Safe Cure and the good results derived from it from persons who had tried the medicine, and at last I decided to give it a trial myself. I was astonished at the great relief I obtained from it. After taking a few bottles of Warner's Safe Cure I was quite cured. Pains in the back never trouble me now, and I can enjoy my food without fear of any ill consequences. I strongly advise anyone suffering like I did to give Warner's Safe Cure a trial."

A pamphlet containing full information relating to Warner's Safe Cure, for the kidneys and liver, will be sent post free on request by H. H. Warner and Co., Ltd., Australasian Branch, Melbourne.

Warner's Safe Cure is sold by chemists and storekeepers everywhere, both in the original (5s) bottles, and in the cheaper (2s 6d) "Concentrated," non-alcoholic, form.—Advt.

SYDNEY'S GARDEN SUBURB.

The steady upward movement of house rents and the growing demand for homes close to the city emphasise the advantages of owning your OWN dwelling. By paying a moderate deposit, and the balance of the purchase-price as rent, you can acquire a charming new brick cottage at HABERFIELD—the place of beautiful homes.

Haberfield Cottages are distinctive in design and treatment; and each one is faithfully constructed, thoroughly weather proof, and well finished throughout. The interior arrangement affords ample natural light, perfect ventilation, and convenience of access to the various rooms, which are each large and lofty.

Come out to Haberfield this afternoon. Our salesmen will be in attendance at the Estate Office, ready to motor you to the various cottages available. Another portion of Haberfield Estate is being opened up—and we will there build cottages TO ORDER in accordance with your own ideas and desires—and effect a considerable saving for you, because of the large and efficient staff of Architects and tradesmen employed and the advantages we enjoy in purchasing materials.

Haberfield is only 20 minutes from the city by direct tram, or 10 minutes by "through" train to Summer Hill.

Take the Haberfield or Abbotsford tram to George-street, and alight at O'Connor-street. Further particulars and booklet post free.

TO ENJOY GOOD HEALTH.
you need to get right away from the city confines, out to where the sea blows cool and refreshing. You are probably enjoying good health where you live, but life is not worth living until you have tasted the pleasures and joys of a week-end home. And the same thing applies to your wife and family. They need frequent changes from the monotony of suburban life, and it is only a fair proposition that you should take them to a health-giving resort, such as for the week-ends. Port Hacking is so well-known to people in Sydney that it needs no comment, but we would like to draw your attention to BAY VIEW HEIGHTS ESTATE, which fronts BURRANEER BAY, the finest of Port Hacking Inlets. This property has a long frontage the main Port Hacking-road, and is only a few minutes' walk from CRONULLA TRAM. The blocks are ideal sites for week-end camps and Cottages, and the price places a lot within reach of the small man. The terms are another big advantage, being 10s deposit and 5s monthly per lot. Prices range from £15 10s. Title is Torrens. Send to Dept. H. for particulars and plans.
PORT HACKING,

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

In the Real Estate market the year is opening up well, and there are many signs of a continuance of that volume of business which marked 1911 as a year of unbounded prosperity. Operations are hardly in full swing yet, but the first batch of indoor sales were held this week. They were all well attended, and a fair amount of property changed hand at satisfactory prices. The catalogues in each case were small, and the items did not include any big parcels, but there was an air of satisfaction among the auctioneers as to the results.

The first batch of outdoor sales of the year were held last Saturday with fairly satisfactory results. People had hardly got over the festivities of Christmas, and the attendances therefore were not quite up to the standard reached last year, but in every case a fair proportion of the lots offered found buyers at good prices. At Vaucluse Messrs. Richardson and Wrench got rid of 16 blocks of the 10th subdivision of the well-known Vaucluse estate at prices which reached as high as £4 per foot. Land in a much better position in the estate was sold at half that price a year or two ago. This is evidence of the popularity of Vaucluse as a marine residential suburb.

Values at Narrabeen are keeping up well. Messrs. Green and Co. last Saturday disposed of a number of lots in the M'Pherson subdivision at prices ranging from £1 to £2 per foot. Other sales will be held from time to time, and with the early completion of the tram to the beach at Narrabeen, and the likelihood of a further extension immediately towards Pittwater, land right along that fine stretch of ocean frontage is still in the public eye, and those in the know expect big things this year from that quarter.

Long Bay is a suburb that has always held its own as a week-end resort, but now it is gradually developing into a seaside residential district, and houses are dotted here and there along the ocean frontages. As an instance of the progress of this suburb, it might be mentioned that seven years ago land at Long Bay was sold by the acre, the prices ranging from £50 upwards. The same land was since resold at £1 and £2 per foot. Last Saturday Messrs. Richardson and Wrench sold the whole of the lots in the balance of an estate some distance from the beach at prices from 30s to £2 2s per foot.

With the excellent prices maintained at Cronulla a movement is now on foot to sell the land between Cronulla and Sutherland, and last Saturday Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. disposed of a dozen blocks at Sutherland at from 12s 6d to 30s per foot.

It is wonderful how the values keep up at Cronulla. On Saturday last Messrs. Mobbs and Co. sold the whole of an estate at prices ranging from £3 to £4 15s per foot, and even after the sale some of the buyers got rid of their purchases at an advanced price. At first sight it sounds like a gamble in land. The whole of this estate was sold subject to a building covenant.

But everybody is not bent upon having seaside land. There are those who prefer the inland mountain air, and last Saturday Messrs. Richardson and Wrench had a fairly good attendance at their sale at Fairfield. The firm was selling on both sides of the railway station. On the western side they got as high as £2 per foot for the land, while on the eastern side the blocks went at from £17 to £48 each.

There was quite a display of lithographs in the auctioneers' offices this week, and the demand by the public for these prints is really good. It shows the continued interest in the week-end sales, of which there are quite a number to take place within the next month or two.

To-day's list is a fairly good one. Messrs. Raine and Horne will submit some good building land in the heart of Auburn and adjoining the Auburn Park. The Auburn-Clyde district has of late shown a wonderful expansion as a manufacturing centre, and many new works are contemplated. Houses will be needed, and the land to be submitted is in elevated and level blocks, suitable for workmen's dwellings.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will submit this afternoon the Telopea Estate, which occupies an important position in the Sutherland-Cronulla district, which is now a recognised suburb of Sydney, with its dairy service of 38 trains each way, and a similar number of trams. The estate is just outside the penny section on the tram line, with a post-office but a few yards from the property. Public schools are on either side, and there is a good service of tram-cars. This all indicates the steady progress of this district. The upset price has been fixed at 10s per foot, with lengthy terms to suit.

Ensing will to-day claim the attention of a number of buyers of good suburban land for building purposes. Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. will submit the Sconers Orchard Estate, which comprises 28 lots not far from the railway.

Judging from the unprecedented inquiry for litho. plans Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will have a big sale at Dulwich Hill this afternoon. The firm will offer the Priddle Estate, which is right in the heart of the district, and affords a splendid opportunity to speculating builders and others desirous of adding to the record which the Marrickville municipality holds of having erected the largest number of houses in one year.

Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., are offering for sale on January 20 a very saleable property known as Tempe Heights Estate, Tempe. This estate is situated on the heights overlooking Cook's River, and is only some two or three minutes from the railway station. It also commands a fine view of Botany Bay and George's River, and on account of its convenient and healthy situation should commend itself to the worker in the city. Tempe is only four miles from Sydney, and is just a quarter of an hour's journey from Central Railway Station.

Land at Brookvale, especially near the Brookvale-Narraheen tram extension, is property that is likely to hold its own. Summit View Estate (Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd.) will be offered for sale on Saturday, February 3, and is a very fine site, either from a residential or investment point of view. It is some 15 minutes from the present terminus, and will be only a couple of minutes from the new extension. Comprehensive views are obtainable of Deewhy Lagoon, Long Reef Beach, The Oaks, etc.

A glance at the lithographs on the auctioneers' tables shows the amount of subdivision work that is proceeding. Surveyors and those engaged in road-making in the different suburbs have their hands full. But there are loud complaints against many of the municipal councils for causing delay in adopting the plans of this estate. On the following day the firm will sell a number of township blocks on the Hawkesbury River.

Woy Woy has of late years gone ahead considerably as a residential and holiday resort owing to the healthy and picturesque position it occupies, and also for the unbounded facilities it offers for outdoor sport. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., are offering on Anniversary Day next one of the picked sites in the locality. It is known as Merritt's Wharf Estate, and consists of numerous residential and holiday and water-frontage allotments facing Cockle Creek, an arm of the well-known Brisbane Water. Merritt's is very central, being within 15 minutes of Woy Woy township, and handy to all the beauty spots of the locality. A regular ferry service runs twice a day. In addition to the sale the firm announce a number of attractions on the ground. These include a balloon ascent, display of aerial warfare, and parachute descent. It certainly is an innovation at land sales, but one that ought to prove attractive.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench have fixed Monday, January 29 as the date on which they will offer on behalf of the City Council the 6 years' leases in the second subdivision of the resumed lands fronting Wentworth-avenue. This is an important sale. There are in all 30 good building sites.

THE CHURCHES.

FOREIGN MISSION CENTENARY.

The movement for the celebration of the centenary of the English Wesleyan Methodist Foreign Missionary Society was publicly inaugurated at a series of gatherings in Liverpool on November 13. Liverpool was chosen for this inauguration because it is to be next year's conference city, and the hopes entertained that the movement would be launched in a spirit of intense enthusiasm were realised in all the meetings.

The promoters of the movement have been careful to explain that it is not primarily a financial one. At the same time, it is confidently anticipated that the income of the society will be increased during the two centenary years by at least £15,000, and that a fund of £260,000 will be raised for the adequate equipment of the mission stations for agressive work. Consequently, promises were gladly received, and, including as anonymous gift of £5000, they amounted to £9200. The proceedings began with a meeting for ministers in the morning, at which over 100 were present. The president of the conference was in the chair, and the Revs. William Goudie and C. W. Andrew, B.D., spoke. In the afternoon the president presided over a meeting of local missionary officials in the Liverpool Central Hall.

Mr. Andrews made a spirited appeal to business men to promise not only money, but as much time a year to the cause. Mr. Goudie explained the objects of the Thanksgiving Fund. The Rev. C. W. Posnett, who has just returned from Medak, painted two pictures of the transforming power of the Gospel. Mr. Andrews declared that as the last 25 years had been the epoch of home evangelisation, so the next 25 years should be the era when the cry of the outcast abroad should be answered in like manner.

The Archbishop, Dr. Wright, is anxious that churchmen should take into early consideration in each parish the best means of representing effectively to the Royal Agricultural Society the reason for not holding the show on Good Friday.

The arrival of the Rev. J. E. Watts-Ditchfield is expected shortly, and it is probable that he will be in Sydney from July 9 to 30, and also, on his return, from August 24 to 30. On his four Sundays in Sydney he will preach at men's services at St. James's, city; St. Stephen's, Newtown; All Souls', Leichhardt; and the Cathedral, besides other churches to be arranged.

The New South Wales tour of Mr. Watts-Ditchfield will begin at Albury on July 1. He will be at Wagga July 2, at Goulburn July 3 and 4, and on leaving New South Wales will spend a fortnight in Queensland, returning down the coast.

The new honorary canons of Christ Church Cathedral, Newcastle, are the Revs. E. H. Wright, A. C. Hirst, and C. F. Withey. Canon Wright, ordained by Bishop Marsden, in Nelso, 1875, did excellent work in the diocese of Bathurst, and was the first rector of St. Clement's, Marrickville, in the diocese of Sydney. He is at present rector of Merrewether. Canon Hirst, also formerly of Bathurst, is rector of Paterson. Canon Withey, ordained 1873, first took up clerical duties in New Zealand. He subsequently became curate to the Rev. J. Langley, now Bishop of Bendigo, and is at present rector of Lochinvar.

The committee that has in hand the erection of a memorial on the site of the first church erected in Australia, has appealed by circular for a collection on behalf of the fund from every church on Anniversary Sunday. The church referred to was opened in 1793, and some few years later. Rev. Richard Johnson, B.A., was its clergyman, and probably Rev. Samuel Marsden, then of Parramatta, occasionally preached within its walls. The city authorities have given their consent to the erection of the memorial, which will cost between £200 and £300. The Cathedral and St. Philips' have already agreed to give a collection on the day.

The annual distribution of prizes in connection with the diocesan examinations at St. Mary's Schoolhall on Thursday next will be presided over by Archbishop Kelly.

Archbishop Kelly intends to preside at the sixth annual meeting of the Mater Misericordiae Hospital for Women and Children, North Sydney, to-morrow.

Archbishop Kelly presided last Monday evening over an inaugural meeting in preparation for the suitable celebration of St. Patrick's Day in Sydney.

Rev. Father Rohan, of St. Augustine's Balmain, who has been on furlough for a year in Europe, is expected home next month. The parishioners are looking forward to his return, and a whole-hearted welcome to Father Rohan is anticipated.

Rev. Father Joseph Kelly, of Singleton, who has been transferred to Taree, was entertained by the members of St. Patrick's Young Men's Society, on behalf of the members Monsignor Meagher, V.G., made a presentation to Father Kelly.

A public farewell has been arranged for Rev. Father T. Hayden, vice-president of St. Patrick's College, Manly, who is about to take a trip to England and Ireland. The farewell will take place on Thursday next, when Father Hayden will be presented with a purse of sovereigns.

In the Manly Presbyterian Church a tablet will be unveiled to-morrow in memory of the late Rev. J. Anderson Gardiner, B.A. The service will be conducted by the Rev. John Ferguson, of St. Stephen's Church, Phillip-street. A monument is also in preparation, which will be placed, on completion, over the grave in the Manly cemetery.

The Presbytery of Sydney has arranged to induct the Rev. George Cranston to his charge, Campbell-street, Balmain, early in February.

The Rev. W. D. M'Ilwraith, B.A., has departed to the Richmond River, where he is to open up the newly-founded church at Dunoon.

The Presbytery of Illawarra is making arrangements for the induction of the Rev. John Macalister, formerly of Junee, who has accepted a call to Berry.

Rev. Albert G. Carter, B.A., is to receive a call to Gloucester. He has been officiating there since the translation of the Rev. J. I. Thorburn, M.A.

An octogenarian minister, who is still able to take service, recently celebrated his eighty-second birthday. The minister in question, now retired, is the Rev. Alexander of Menindie, Adelaide, South Australia. He has been in the ministry for nearly 60 years.

Owing to the fact that there is at present no Methodist church at Fern Hill, services are to be held in the Lindsay Hall until a church has been erected. Mr. W. Fry has been appointed Sunday-school superintendent, and is taking an active part in pushing forward the formation of the new church and building matters.

The Rev. Dr. Bromilow, president of the Methodist Conference, in addressing a midday prayer meeting of the Consolidation Society on Thursday last at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, said he was growing tired of the oft-repeated statements of travellers and others that the Papuans were incapable of understanding Bible truth statements and Christian theology. This was altogether contrary to the truth, and if many of the gentlemen who made such statements would consent to undergo a test examination on theology and Bible history with the native students in Papua he was sure that the Papuans would come out on top.

In connection with Home and Foreign Missions Sunday (January 21) the Central Methodist Mission will have the services of Rev. Dr. George Brown, the noted traveller, missionary, and author, and the Rev. G. H. Hewitt. The former will preach at the morning service, and in the afternoon Mr. Hewitt will give his lantern lecture, "Through Fiji with Camera and Bible."

Sister Francis, who recently returned to Sydney after a year's work for the Methodist Mission in Fiji, New Zealand, conducted the Christian Endeavour anniversary service at Rawson Hall, Miller's Point, on Sunday last.

Mr. Arthur Toomes, organiser for the Grand Lodge of the I.O.G.T., Queensland, now on a visit to Sydney, has addressed several meetings of the Central Methodist Mission.

Messrs. P. N. Slade and H. M. Hawkins have been re-elected respectively to the positions of hon. secretary and hon. treasurer of the C.M.M. For years both these gentlemen have rendered valuable service to the mission.

The Burwood Methodist Church Brotherhood and the St. Luke's Church of England Men's Society united for an open-air meeting in Burwood Park on Sunday last. Dr Bromilow took the chair, the Rev. E. A. Clayton, rector of St. Luke's, and Mr. T. Green (Methodist) gave addresses. Mr. Ferris (Baptist), secretary of the brotherhood, expressed the pleasure of the brotherhood in having the Men's Society with them at the open-air service. A most interesting meeting was held Mr. Berry, of Summer Hill, conducted the singing.

The annual thanksgiving services in connection with the Balmain East Methodist Church were held on Sunday, and were attended by large congregations. The Rev. J. Thomson preached morning and evening, and special music was rendered at each service. At the close of the evening service the annual covenant service was held. The offerings for the day amounted to £12, which will be added to the church funds.

The Rev. F. W. Hynes has been invited by the quarterly meeting to remain another year in charge of the Balmain Central Methodist Mission Hall circuit, subject to the approval of conference.

A series of after-church pictorial services has been decided upon by Rev. S. Varcoe Cock, of Bourke-street Methodist Mission. The services are to take place in the new Olympia Picture Palace.

Among the arrivals by the Suevic on Monday was the Rev. Selwyn J. Evans, late of Reigate, Surrey, who comes to this State to succeed the Rev. A. P. Campbell, B.A., now of Killara, in the pastorate of Hunter's Hill Congregational Church. The policy of bringing a minister from home was only adopted after much anxious consideration on the part of the deacons and members, and on account of the shortage in the ranks of both pastors and theological students of the Congregational community.

Mr. Evans, who comes with the highest credentials, including a warm recommendation from the Rev. C. Silvester Horne, M.A., M.P., was introduced to the notice of the church by the Rev. Dr. Fordyce, late of Sydney, and at present no service used in the whole diocese for which the sanction of either himself or his predecessor had not been sought and obtained. Regulation, in place of arbitrary suppression, or a weak pretence of ignorance of what was going on, has been the keynote of his action. The Bishop goes on to say: "Has the result of this policy been to send people over to Rome? The exact contrary has been the case; no person, to my knowledge, in orders or out of orders, of any importance or standing, has gone over to Rome during the last ten years. In my opinion, if men hold Roman doctrine, they had far better go to Rome. But the truth of the matter is this: That if we give our people the full privileges of the Catholic Church, to which they are entitled by their baptism; if they are really spiritually fed; if we obey the command 'pascе verbo, pasce vita'—they will no longer look with longing to another communion, and shutting their eyes to its palpable fallacies and historical mistakes, join it to get the spiritual food they failed to find in their own Church."

The annual meetings of the Australian Aborigines Mission, which has for its object the religious uplift of our "dark people," began in the Baptist Schoolroom, Bathurst-street, on Wednesday night with a social reunion and time of prayer. On Thursday night the annual council meeting was held. A good deal of important correspondence was dealt with, and a number of interesting reports were given by the missionaries and teachers present.

CITY STREETS.

WERE THEY STARVED TO SHOW SURPLUS?

Discussing the proposal of the Lord Mayor to utilise a portion of the City Council's surplus revenue, £20,000, on the purchase of motor waggons for street watering and cleansing, Alderman Clarke, at the meeting of the finance committee, urged that the whole of the surplus be brought forward to 1912, and that the matter of the motor waggons be considered when the estimates were brought down, which he argued was the proper course.

Alderman Cocks expressed the view that the surplus had to a large extent been obtained by starving the vote for the maintenance of streets. The thoroughfares of the city should be kept in the best order possible, and not starved so that a surplus might be shown.

Alderman Clarke's suggestion was put as an amendment and lost, the Lord Mayor's minute being approved and recommended to the council for adoption.

CREMORNE TRAM AND FERRY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Surely the action of the North Sydney Council in carrying a resolution "that the Sydney Ferries, Ltd., be informed that the North Sydney Council protests against the charge for season tickets from Cremorne to Circular Quay being in excess of that charged on the Neutral Bay service" will not be regarded by the signatories to the petition as championing their cause in getting better conditions on the Cremorne line. If they do, then some credence will be given to the statements oft repeated that the Neutral Bay residents are opposed to the proposal to put a twopenny ferry fare, which it is said they regard as a barrier to any encroachment upon their landed preserves by the plebian portion of the community. It is certain that the action of the North Sydney Council will not meet with the approval of the people mostly concerned, viz., the residents of Mosman and Cremorne. The argument advanced that it will relieve the congestion on the Neutral Bay service prompts the question, does any congestion exist, and is it not a fact that the prohibitive charge of twopence is the cause of the service not being more largely availed of? The Neutral Bay residents have been and appear to be content with the charges in existence, and possibly the North Sydney Council has misconstrued their apathy as acquiescence with the present tariff. But if the Neutral Bay residents are content to pay twopence for a six-mile journey, what is the reason, when Lavender Bay only pays one penny for a similar time trip, then that is their lookout, and it is a question which they might very well raise before asking for such second-rate "championing" as has been given them by the North Sydney Council. Is it likely, if Neutral Bay people are sincere, that this half-hearted action of the North Sydney Council will be approved of? Does the "championing" of their cause mean that no progress should be entered against the tram charges? And still there is no mention of this in the resolution moved by Alderman Reynolds. Why is it hushed? Is a Neutral Bay resident going to pay twopence for a tram ride to Cremorne wharf, when the Neutral Bay tram is more accessible, and only costs one penny to the wharf? It only shows how short-sighted those North Sydney Council luminaries are. Alderman Clark, from your report, appears to have been the only one to see the futility of the proposition put forth by Alderman Reynolds. The question mostly concerns Mosman Bay and Cremorne residents, and while they will gladly welcome Neutral Bay residents to assist them in their agitation for fair and reasonable tram and ferry charges, it must not be supposed that personal feelings are to dominate, but the broader issue of opening up the big areas suitable for residential purposes and relieving the Mosman ferry must overshadow everything else. I am, etc.,

Mosman, Jan 10. S

An interesting discovery has been made in Mexico in the valley of Texcoco, where Professor Niven, of New York, has found the remains of a town, buried like Pompeii by a volcanic eruption. A few feet below the surface he has discovered streets and houses and a temple, with all its furniture and decoration unspoilt. In the court-yard of the temple 200 terra-cotta models have been unearthed, statues, vases, and ornaments. The workmanship points to an unknown period in Mexican civilisation, and suggests an Oriental influence, for the heads of the statues are of the ancient Egyptian type, and other works recall the art of Western Asia, notably of Borneo and India. The paintings on the walls of the temple are in admirable preservation. The excavation of this town should prove exceedingly interesting, for it seems to afford proof of the theory that America was colonised by an Eastern race.

SLIGHTLY USED PIANO BARGAINS AT PIANOLA HALL.

There is always an excellent assortment of Pianos by leading makers, such as Steck, Bechstein, Ronisch, Lipp, Bluthner, and others, available at enormous reductions at Pianola Hall. The reason, and the only reason, they have been exchanged is the desire of their owners to replace instruments they could not play with others which they could play. For the first time in the history of the Piano business, Pianos which were entirely satisfactory have been exchanged by their owners. They have come from some of the best homes in Sydney, and are remarkable for their excellent condition as well as their uniformly high grade.

The PIANOLA PIANO (Steck or Steinway Piano) represents an entirely new thought in musical instruments. Its advantages for the accepted type of pianoforte are so manifest that thousands of Pianos heretofore satisfactory are destined to be disposed of to make room for this 20th Century production.

THE PIANOLA COMPANY are manufacturers of the Steck and Stroud (ordinary Pianos) as well as the Steck Pianola Piano. They control the largest producing factories in the world, making last year over 20,000 instruments. All instruments sold by the Australasian houses are manufactured expressly to meet Australian climatic conditions. They are shipped direct from our factory, and are sold throughout Australia with but one profit added to the cost—that of the manufacturer, thus saving the profit of the home exporter and importer. We invite you to visit our showrooms, where we carry large stocks of Steck and Stroud Pianos, Steinway and Steck Pianola Pianos, besides a huge selection of Slightly-used and Second-hand Pianos. The Stock is represented in Burr Walnut, Circassian, Walnut, Rosewood, Mahogany, and Waxed Oak from a small Upright Piano to a Concert Grand.

ONE MAN MILKS 40 COWS WITH THE "JERSEY" MILKER IN 2½ HOURS.

The Single "Jersey Milker."

THE MOST SCEPTICAL OF DAIRY FARMERS MUST ADMIT THAT THE TESTIMONY OF MR. CUTLER, AS GIVEN IN THE FOLLOWING LETTER, PLACES ALL QUESTIONS OF SPEED—ECONOMY AND ACTUAL RESULTS, BEYOND QUESTION.

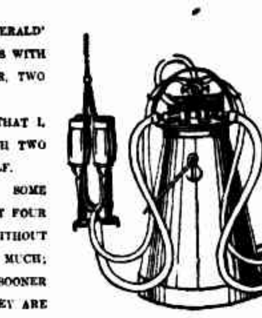

IT ALSO ADDS ANOTHER TO THE ALREADY LONG LIST OF CONVINCING PROOFS OF THE INDISPENSABLENESS OF THE "JERSEY" MILKER TO EVERY MAN WHO WANTS TO GET THE BEST RETURNS FROM HIS COWS—ON THE SPEEDIEST AND MOST ECONOMICAL BASIS.

MR. CUTLER SAYS:—

"I NOTICE IN THE 'SYDNEY MORNING HERALD' THAT GRAHAM BROS. CAN MILK 40 COWS WITH FOUR 'JERSEY' MACHINES IN ONE HOUR, TWO MEN AND ONE BOY TO BAIL UP.

"I HAVE MUCH PLEASURE IN SAYING THAT I, WITH ONE MAN, MILKED 40 COWS WITH TWO MACHINES IN TWO HOURS AND A HALF.

"WE BAILED AND STRIPPED THEM. SOME WERE HEIFERS AND ONLY GAVE ABOUT FOUR QUARTS EACH. I WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THE MACHINES IF THEY COST TWICE AS MUCH; IN FACT, I WOULD GIVE UP DAIRYING SOONER THAN GO BACK TO HAND MILKING. THEY ARE EASILY WORKED, THE COWS ARE NO TROUBLE WITH THEM, AND THEY ARE EASILY CLEANED."

WHAT THEY THINK IN GERMANY ABOUT BEALE High-grade PIANOS.

The London "Musical Opinion and Music Trade Review," an important trade journal published in Great Britain, says (July, 1911):—

"A Hamburg trade journalist, who has just returned from the Antipodes, states that the pianos manufactured by the Beale Company in Sydney greatly resemble in touch and tone those turned out at the best German factories. The Beale is sold at forty-five pounds and upwards, and enjoys a good reputation, not only in Australia, but in India, Java, South Sea Islands, and other colonial countries with hot climates. The 'Hamburger' fears that if these British colonials extend their piano manufacturing operations there will be little room left for Continental makers in the musical instrument line."

ON THE LAND.

FARM AND STATION.

BIRDS AND INSECT PESTS.

A wheat field invasion of a very alarming character took place in the Ganmain district this season. There were many fine early crops, and just as they were earing, caterpillars in amazing masses suddenly appeared on the scene. In some paddocks the wheat was practically eaten out of a race. Powerless to combat the pest the farmers concerned sent an urgent request to the Department of Agriculture, and the Government entomologist, Mr. W. W. Froggatt, investigated the matter. He found the case to be quite as serious as it was represented to be. Although the trouble was not as extensive as in some previous years, the pest had done considerable damage in the Yanco, Narrandera, and Grong Grong districts, as well as about Ganmain. In this locality one farmer had about 50 acres of a fine wheat crop eaten right down. This farmer was of the opinion that the eggs were deposited upon the straw in the paddock after the previous crop had been harvested, and the area infested was that in which the straw had been ploughed into the ground. In the other portion of the paddock, where the crop had been cut for hay, and where there was no straw to plough in, no caterpillars appeared. It would appear that the pest hide to a great extent in the day under clods and the rough surface of the soil, and feed at night. Each female is capable of laying several hundreds of eggs.

The pest appears, says Mr. Froggatt in the course of an article in the "Agricultural Gazette," to be the Bugong moth (Agrotis infusa), or an allied species which has been known as an agricultural plague from a very early date in New South Wales. In advising farmers how to attack the caterpillars, Mr. Froggatt says:—"As soon as ever they are noticed poison should be sprayed over the ground on which they are feeding, or spread out in the form of baits. Paris green is the most suitable poison for the purpose, and not so dangerous as white arsenic. One pound of paris green will poison 16lb of bran or sharps. The bran should be placed upon a sheet, and the paris green sprinkled over it, the whole being thoroughly mixed in a dry state. Sufficient water, in which a few pounds of salt have been added (to make it taste), should be used to make the combined ingredients into a bran mash that can be freely scattered with the hand over the infested ground when the insects are feeding. In warm weather they usually feed from 4 p.m. well into the night. Spraying the infested patches of crop with fluid spray of paris green (1lb to 100 gallons of water) will kill the caterpillars feeding upon the sprayed crop; but the mixture must be kept well shaken up, as the green is otherwise likely to sink to the bottom, and the spraying would be uneven."

One useful result of the visit was a rather striking demonstration of the immense value of the ibis and the wood-swallow as friends of the farmer and the grazier. On reaching the district the entomologist had his attention arrested by the enormous numbers of these two species of birds, which hovered about the fields. The wood-swallows were present in thousands, while great flocks of ibis were noticed to be busily engaged in different parts of the paddocks. Closer observation disclosed the fact that wherever the caterpillars were thickest there the birds were concentrated. Indeed, the feathered tribes were pertinaciously pursuing the creeping pests in the manner of an attacking army on the flanks of a retreating enemy, and enormous havoc was being continuously wrought in the ranks of the odious insects. So great was the destruction persistently carried on by this vast collection of birds that Mr. Froggatt expressed the emphatic opinion that if they had arrived earlier on the scene the pest would have been practically disposed of before they had attained the dimensions which rendered them so dangerous to the interests of the farmers in that portion of the State.

A suggestive thing was that the attack was practically confined to the two varieties of birds mentioned. Odd birds of other species were about, but did not appear to give much attention to the caterpillars. Among them were the pretty white-shouldered caterpillar-eater (Lalage tricolor), which arrives in this district somewhat later in the spring than the wood-swallow. These birds, however, are usually few in number, and would make no impression on myriads of caterpillars, even if they concentrated their whole attention on this particular form of food. The value of the ibis and the wood-swallow, on the other hand, is tremendously enhanced by their numerical strength. In lesser degree it is the same with the stately ibis. On the plains and in other settled parts of Riverina these birds may be seen all the year round in flocks ranging from 30 or 40 to 500, and as they are voracious foragers they must consume vast quantities of insects of every description. The ibis, like the herons, is very partial to low-lying and swampy country, and is credited by Dr. Cobb with a special taste for the fresh-water mollusc, which serves as the host of the fluke in sheep. These they are said to devour in great quantities. That they also exercise a great influence on the life of grasshoppers and other insect pests is also beyond question. The writer has watched a community of four or five hundred ibis making active and incessant warfare upon grasshoppers for two or three hours—indeed, until it would seem that they must be so gorged as to be unable to assimilate another insect. Apart from its value as a friend of the man on the land the ibis is one of the most picturesque and handsome of the birds of Australia, a flock on the wing being one of the most pleasing and striking of the objects to be seen in travelling through Riverina. The birds are very friendly, too. If unmolested they will remain continuously for weeks at a stretch in the vicinity of homesteads, and especially if water is available.

There are several varieties of the wood-swallow, which is also known in the bush vernacular as the summer-bird, the martin, silver martin, etc. The two most numerous divisions of the family are the wood-swallow (Artamus sordidus) and the white-browed wood-swallow (Artamus superciliosus). These are the birds seen most commonly in Riverina in the spring and summer months. They depart north with the approach of winter, and the disappearance of the bulk of the insects upon which they prey. All the wood-swallows are artless and docile in their habits. Though usually found in greatest numbers in the open country, they come right into the outskirts of towns and build their flimsy nests low down and usually in the most exposed places. Because of this lack of the wariness and the instinctive guile which marks the nesting habits of the majority of birds the wood-swallows are easy prey for the human nest-hunter, as well as for the predatory creatures of the air. It may be reckoned that every year countless thousands of eggs and young are sacrificed, yet the birds are so [illegible] that the process of reproduction seems to go on with undiminished vigour.

A peculiarity of the wood-swallow is that the same community does not always return to the same region in the spring, even though a large percentage of them may have been reared there. In one locality they are sometimes present in such crowds that they easily outnumber the whole of the other birds combined, while in the following season only a few of them may come south in that district. Mr. Robert Hall notes that "the white-browed wood swallow shows a remarkable instinct in the choice of a locality where insect life is specially abundant. The decision is evidently arrived at some time previous to their return from the north, though how the knowledge regarding the suitability of the chosen areas is arrived at is a matter shrouded in mystery." The guiding instinct in this case seems to be the same as that which enables the snipe to come thousands of miles almost direct to rich feeding grounds; and so far as the writer has observed it is not peculiar to only one variety of the wood-swallow. Artamus sordidus appears to possess the same mysterious faculty for finding the areas where natural food is most plentiful. In Riverina this summer, for instance, certain forms of insect life were unusually abundant in different districts without being common to the whole of the country. In some of these localities both the wood-swallow and the white browed variety appeared in great numbers almost simultaneously with the development of insect pests. In some previous years, when there were no insect pests to speak of, very few of these birds had visited the district.

The wood-swallow, it may be pointed out, is not only useful in the spacious rural lands devoted to grazing and agriculture. It is of value in the garden as well as on the farm. This year the pumpkin beetle (which now voraciously attacks numbers of other plants) was a great pest about some towns until the wood-swallow arrived. After that the insects gave very little trouble in those localities where the birds were left unmolested. In cases scores of the white-browed variety were to be seen making destructive attack on the beetles even in gardens quite close to dwelling houses. Instead of protecting these invaluable birds, which become so trusting and friendly with fair treatment, however, the majority of people ruthlessly raid their nests, and even make war upon them with pea rifles and other weapons in utter disregard of either the moral or the legal law. A bird lover in the Junee district this breeding season made special and searching observation, and reports his failure to note that a single brood of young had been raised, although there were hundreds of wood-swallows nesting about the town. The chief offenders, he noted, in the raiding of the nests were school boys. In some cases parents quite proudly boasted of the fact that "this year their boy had collected some hundreds of eggs." Here and there an odd school teacher renders good service to the country in inculcating knowledge of birds together with an effort to develop both a practical and sentimental interest in them. For the most part, however, the teachers know little, and seem to care less, about the avi-fauna of the country, and it is consequently not surprising that the vast majority of their pupils remain in the same mischievous state of ignorance and indifference. Yet this is one of the subjects which it would be profitable to make compulsory in all schools: it should not be left to the individual discretion or taste of the teachers.

THE WOOL TRADE.

AUCTIONS NEXT WEEK.

On Monday next the holiday recess in the Sydney wool market will be brought to a conclusion by the resumption of auction sales, for the disposal of the balance of the clip. That balance, fortunately, promises to be well within requirements, and needed for consumptive purposes. That position, too, was not so self-evident four or five weeks ago. It was to most of the sellers, and to most of the buyers on this side; but it was probably not so clear to those good gentlemen at Bradford, or in London, who see wool through the densest of November fogs, and magnify supplies out of all due proportion to the actual quantities likely to come forward. The recess now drawing to a close is revealing the true position with regard to prospective supplies, on the one hand, and to the trade's requirements on the other.

When the weekly series closed on December 18 last, upwards of 491,675 bales had been catalogued in the Sydney market, and 432,905 bales sold at auction; an increase on the corresponding period of the previous season of 30,891 bales, and 29,077 bales, respectively. This early season, on top of a previous early season seemed to lend colour to the idea that there would be an actual increase in the season's production. It was not blazoned forth in English trade or financial journals, as during the previous statistical wool year; but the presumption was that there would be more than enough wool to go round; and that if Bradford only continued to quote prices low enough for wool tops, and do it persistently enough, wool values might be dragged down to any depths. The effect of this was beginning to be felt towards the close of the auctions in December, and the recess came as a welcome relief to those anxious to maintain firm raw wool values.

It would have been too bad if, when the very limited quantities were offered during the Sydney recess in Hobart and Launceston this year values had been dragged down, as last year; not only because it might have extended, as last season, to Melbourne, Brisbane, and Sydney, but also because it would have been detrimental to the interests of the sections of the trade who have so consistently supported the Australian markets this season. In such wise has the recess been a beneficial one to the growers whose clips have yet to be sold, as well as to those buyers who have not been turned from their view of the true position by the "bear" tactics of the Bradford woolcombers.

If the world had been getting poorer, if trade had been paralysed, if wool production had palpably been beyond the consumptive demand, and it was evident that combers, spinners, weavers, and goodsmen were in for a bad time, then growers would not have marvelled at a set being made to bring values for wool down. They would not have liked it, of course; and would have done their best to stem any decline below remunerative levels. But they do naturally object to the insensate move that is made every Australian wool-selling season at Bradford, and in English financial papers, to lower wool values by hook or by crook. It comes off once in a while, as last January. This year, however, the "bears" have only hugged themselves, and it is to be hoped that they are enjoying the squeezing process to their heart's content. The moderate supply in Brisbane this week, the moderate balance in Sydney to close the weekly season, the moderate quantity available for the ensuing London series, all point to a very healthful state of affairs for owners during the next few months.

When the 41,000 or so bales are submitted in the Sydney auction room next week a strong, all-round, demand is expected to rule at firm or firmer values. Rates current for the principal descriptions of staple, based upon last auction rates, may be given as follows:—

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

Auction sales have been held in Melbourne, Brisbane, and Geelong during the week. The strong tone sounded at the Hobart and Launceston sales on January 3 and 5 respectively prevailed in the larger markets this week. The offerings on the first two days in Melbourne were not too attractive, the selections comprising a larger proportion of small farmers' clips than earlier in the season. There were, however, included some few Tasmanian wools (that sold to /15) and a number of good average clips from this State, as well as Victoria. On Wednesday an improved selection was submitted, embracing some attractive Eastern Riverina wools, with a few representative clips from the western and north-western districts of Victoria and the south-east of South Australia. Competition was keen and general, Yorkshire showing much more disposition to secure supplies than prior to the recess. Most wools showed an improvement. Merinos, although not quotably higher, were keenly sought after at hardening rates, whilst all descriptions of crossbred were reported in strong demand at an average advance of 5 per cent., the coarser grades showing the greater improvement.

At the Geelong sales on Thursday about 12,000 bales were submitted. The selection was reported as a good one, especially in crossbreds, while there was a representative showing of comebacks. The market ruled on a par with Melbourne on the three previous days, merinos, fine crossbreds, and comebacks being very firm, with medium and coarse crossbreds 5 per cent. higher.

Only some 15,881 bales were catalogued at the Brisbane sales on Tuesday and Wednesday last. It was originally expected that there would be a three days' series, and between 21,000 and 22,000 bales submitted. On the opening days six catalogues aggregated about 9940 bales. Small lots were considerably in evidence, with a small proportion of large lines. The selection was only fair, and not as attractive as expected. There was a fair display of scoured, including some good parcels. Buyers were in full attendance, and bidding was keen, especially by the Continental operators. Yorkshire was more in evidence than previously. A few lines suitable for America were taken on United States account. Greasy sold to /13, and scoured to /23. On the second day three catalogues were brought forward, totalling 5941 bales. The selection was only a medium one. Fine quality wools were scarce. The offerings included a few attractive clips from the central and northern districts. The market ruled very firm on both sale days, German buyers securing the bulk of the purchases on the second day. Greasy sold to /12, and scoured to the same price as the first day, namely, /23.

NEXT LONDON SALES.

Late cables report that the list of arrivals for the series opening on Tuesday next closed last week. The new shipments amounted to 253,000 bales, of which 151,000 were forwarded direct to manufacturers in the United Kingdom and abroad, leaving, inclusive of 10,000 bales of held-over wools, a total of 182,000 bales, as compared with 197,000 bales available for the corresponding series last year. Writing at the opening of the December series Henry Dawson and Co., in endeavouring to gauge the position at that time in London, said that it was a perplexing one, for while the overseas markets report hardening values for the raw material, the outlook for the winter season's worsted trade in Europe is somewhat dull. The preference having been given to woollen goods, the hosiery and woollen prospects are fairly bright, but this does not greatly help the top trade, and does not guarantee such a heavy consumption of wool as when combs are employed to their full capacity. Perhaps the "bears" and those who generally have been holding pessimistic views of the future may have been too extreme in their opinions, but so far as European business is concerned there is certainly no such outlook as to encourage any bullish tendencies. The better tone which has come to the wool markets may be chiefly attributed to the fortunate and welcome arrival of some U.S.A. demands. There is also a little machinery hunger in the combing mills, and this will doubtless benefit the present series.

LONDON WOOL IMPORTS.

The imports of wool into London for the 12 months ended December 31 last amounted to 1,285,000, as compared with 1,271,000 bales for the previous year. Among the principal importers during the past 12 months were the following:—Dalgety and Company, Limited, 80,000 bales; Bank of New Zealand, 56,000; Elder, Smith, and Co., Limited, 34,000; James Morrison and Co., Limited, 34,000; New Zealand and Australian Land Co., Limited, 34,000; Sanderson, Murray, and Co., 53,000; Union Bank of Australia, Limited, 55,000; New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company, Limited, 46,000.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Moderate quantities of wool have been received by rail and boat during the week, showing a decrease in both instances. As it was an early shearing season, an increase by rail was piled up early in the selling season. This increase has of late been gradually reduced, as anticipated three to four months ago. Upwards of 676,443 bales have been received by rail at Darling Harbour since July 1 last, as compared with 674,602 bales during the corresponding period last year—an increase of only 1841 bales. The decrease by boat of 18,374 has been mainly due to less coming to Sydney for realisation from Queensland. The comparative figures for the week and season to date are as follow:—

BY RAIL.

Season.	Jan. 6-12.	July 1-Jan. 12.
1911-12	8,066 Bales.	676,443 Bales.

BY BOAT.

1911-12	1,137 Bales.	78,914 Bales.
1910-11	1,956 Bales.	97,288 Bales.

NEXT WEEK'S SYDNEY ROSTER.

BRADFORD TOPS FIRM.

Our cable message of yesterday's date reports the Bradford top market as firm, and quotations for all qualities unchanged. On the corresponding date last year the market was cabled as weak, with but little business doing: sixty-fours and super sixties (merino) were quoted ¼d lower; common sixties (merino), ½d lower, forty-sixes (medium crossbred), ¼d lower; and forties (coarse crossbred), ¼d lower than the previous week's prices. The course of prices of tops as cabled since the opening of the Australian weekly series of wool sales has been as follows:—

AGRICULTURAL BUREAU.

The following lectures have been arranged by the Department of Agriculture for the week ending 20th instant, under the auspices of the local Agricultural Bureau:—At Little Plain, Tuesday evening, January 16, a lecture on "Irish Blight in Potatoes," by Mr. A. J. Pinn, Inspector of Agriculture; at Dubbo, Saturday evening, January 20, Mr. J. G. R. Bryant, Assistant Fruit Expert, will deliver a lantern lecture on "Fruitgrowing."

DESTROYING GROUND INSECTS BY ELECTRICITY.

"P.B.S." writes:—Your account of Dr. Hellberger's (Munich) experiments in destroying ground insects indicates success in so being able to do. But it would be very informative to also know whether such indiscriminate destruction as this system must have the effect of is not an exemplification of the "cure being worse than the disease," when considered in the light of such general debacle must be included the ordinary ground flesh-worm, which, so to speak, ploughs, digests, and manufactures bad soil into good growing humus for man's benefit. Does the learned professor shed any light upon this phase of his work? It would no doubt be of great interest to your readers what more can be gleaned on this subject.

RURAL WORKERS.

THIRTEEN HOURS A DAY FOR SEVEN SHILLINGS.

"Pakehas" writes:—In view of the fact that the Rural Workers' agitation is creating great discussion in the agricultural centres of New South Wales, and repeated statements are made by the farmers of the luxurious conditions in which the farm hand lives, perhaps the following details made by two farm hands, neither of whom is member of any union would be of interest:—The first matter we would like to deal with is the housing accommodation. We are well aware that we do not want a palace, but we would certainly expect buildings as weather-proof as those which are used to house the chaff. We have lived in several of these men's quarters and have seen many more, and they are all of a type. Our room is a hut about 16ft square, of pine boards, with broad daylight showing through between every board, with the floor of earth. When it rains blankets and clothing get wet through. For the Labour Government of this country to allow buildings of this kind to be put up is absolutely monstrous. The shearers' quarters are now under Government regulations to the best of our belief. Why not the Rural Workers? When men have got to sleep in quarters like these, how can the employer expect to get men to work with any heart. The more you do for them the more they expect, and if you suggest that you have done a fair thing when sundown arrives they are not satisfied. Our hours during harvest were up at 5, groom, feed, and harness horses, breakfast at 6; as soon as that is swallowed out to the paddock. Fifteen minutes for lunch during the morning, with an hour for dinner, 12 to 1, another fifteen minutes during the afternoon, and nominally to finish in paddock at sundown. After that the horses had to be brought in, unharnessed and fed. Even by knocking off promptly at sundown it is 8.30 before you have supper. This means a man has been actually working over 13 hours, and for this a farmer opens his eyes if you demand more than 7s per day. As far as meals are concerned we make no comment. One has his meals with the farmer, and, of course, some live better than others.

The farm hand's life is rough enough apart from their quarters, as they have neither the time nor the opportunity for any pleasure. If they want to get to town to buy an article or on other business they generally have to use shanks's pony, and lose two days' wages, if they are living any distance from town. Many of the farmers refuse to lend a trap or horse even to a respectable farm hand. We noticed the Scottish Commission's report about single men becoming depraved, with being herded together, and with nothing to occupy their minds, and we cannot help endorsing this statement.

The writers of this letter are men who are fond of the country and possessed of small means, and went on the land to gain experience before starting for themselves, and their opinions are hardly as biassed as those of typical members of the union.

GRADING FRUIT.

SINGLETON.—The value of grading fruit received a striking illustration at one of the union sales on Tuesday. There was much fruit of excellent quality forward, but most of it suffered in regard to prices realised from the want of grading. On the other hand, one grower's consignments were so perfectly graded as to quality and size that he secured prices considerably ahead of the ungraded products. This led the auctioneer to point out to growers that if they took the trouble to grade their fruit before marketing it they would reap the benefit in greatly enhanced monetary returns.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

BLACKTOWN.—The crop of passionfruit between Seven Hills and Kellyville has so benefited by recent rains that owners anticipate an increase of fully 40 per cent., while the quality of fruit is also improved.

COONAMBLE.—Mr. G. Valder, Chief Inspector of the Agricultural Department, arrived at Coonamble on Wednesday afternoon on one of his periodical visits to the experiment farm. He expressed himself well satisfied with the work done so far. Over 200 acres have been ploughed, and the plough is still at work. Next season there will be several hundred acres under crop on the farm. It has been decided to build the manager's residence of ash concrete in the centre block of the farm. Mr. Valder says he believes the cost will work out less than if the building be constructed of wood. The water supply is a trouble on the farm. Mr. Valder recognised the great value a bore on the farm would be, but said the question of putting one down had been delayed pending the solution of the casing difficulty. Mr. Valder said that on his return he would make arrangements for planting currajong, sugar gum, pepper, and other trees.

LITHGOW.—Wheat traffic, particularly from the far west, shows no diminution in volume. There is a revival in stock traffic, whilst brisk business is being experienced on the Mudgee line.

SINGLETON.—The recent rains, though too late for the early maize, have been beneficial in other ways. They served to give the grass a spring, and to impart an impetus to the late fruit crops, and have also facilitated planting operations. The lucerne crops are looking well, and so far the grape crop looks promising, so that the harvest should be a good one this season. A few more showers would not be amiss for the vines, while for the district needs generally some more good falls would round the season off and make things entirely satisfactory from the point of view of the rural producers.

WINDSOR.—Large quantities of stone fruit have been marketed during the past three weeks. Good quality fruit realised satisfactory prices.

PIPE-MAKING PLANT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of 10th instant appears a communication from Mr. W. Lowden, under the above heading, dealing with the Blue Mountain Shire Council.

The whole of the information relating to the pipe-making has been brought before the council, and surely Mr. Lowden could have made himself conversant with the subject before rushing into print with his insinuations and inaccuracies.

The pipes referred to have not been condemned at a recent test by the Government—although not fully matured and made of concrete, not reinforced, when tested on May 29 last, in the presence of Government officials, the tests were much in excess of what the Public Works Department stipulates for in their specifications for re-inforced concrete pipes. No cartloads have been broken in transit, and buried or used for rubble. The whole of the pipes manufactured have been, and are, required for almost immediate use, in addition to some hundreds more, which must be turned out shortly. The undertaking has been a highly successful one for the council and ratepayers, but this does not seem to suit Mr. Lowden, who rarely loses an opportunity of trying to belittle the shire council or its officers.

Application was made by the council to the Minister for power to trade, i.e., to sell pipes to neighbouring shires, municipalities, or even private persons, but until the present Local Government Act is amended this cannot be granted. There is no increasing stock, all on hand being required for shire use, and no devices have been resorted to in order to show an apparent saving, as insinuated by your correspondent.

G. J. WATERHOUSE,
Councillor, Blue Mountain Shire.

A ROAD PILLORY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you permit me to supplement the examples of bad roads given by Mr. MacLaurin and others by calling attention to the disgraceful state of all the streets leading up from Darling Harbour—King, Erskine, and Margaret streets especially are in an abominable state, full of holes, and mud, or dust, and it is really cruel to see the horses straining themselves to pieces up these steep hills, without having pits for the wheels to catch in to make matters worse.

The fact is, Sir, that all the macadamised roads are far worse made now than they were 30 years ago; stones of all sizes and shapes are thrown down, then a lot of mud is thrown on top, and the 'road' is left, or at best a toy steam roller is rolled a few times over it, and the result is what we see. I am told that a high price is paid for this worthless metal, that no self-respecting council would accept as a gift. Any practical road-maker knows that metal must be of uniform size and quality, and no mud or any binding is required if such be used.

I am, etc.,
RICHARD NORTH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I, for one, heartily endorse everything that Mr. Maclaurin says in reference to the scandalous state of roads, too numerous to mention. Whether it is faulty construction I know not, but I do know that since the advent of the motor car roads in all directions are worse than ever they have been known to be before. Maybe the roads are not made substantial enough in the foundations to stand such excessive weights, driven as they mostly are at excessive speed, of the motor car traffic.

I have noticed in different suburbs the experiments that councils have made to try to get at the bottom of this road trouble, both as regards economy and to save the dust nuisance. It is all very well for vehicle owners to make a noise about the state of the roads, still there is nothing can be done without money, not even road-making or repairing, and I would suggest that a Width of Tyre Bill be introduced to help the various councils to keep the roads in a perfect state. I know that I will call heaps of abuse on myself for this suggestion, but as I am a vehicle owner and driver you can see that I won't go scot free. If such a suggestion ever became law we would benefit for more reasons than one. First, there would be longer life to the vehicles; second, easier work for the horse; and, third, more comfort for the driver.

I am also a ratepayer, and, for the life of me, I can't see that the ratepayer should be taxed any more for the upkeep of the roads, when we, the drivers, receive the benefits. People will say that the various tradesmen's carts are for the convenience of the public. True, still, if the ratepayers were not there to serve how fares the tradesmen? Ask any conscientious tradesman which is the best district for trade, the thickly or sparsely populated one. Then, again, it will make the vehicle, the horse, or the harness last longer, irrespective of the extra comfort for the driver. That will do no one any harm. Go where you will within the metropolitan area and I think there is hardly a coachbuilder or harness-maker who has not got his hands full of work.

Then, last, but not least, what about the safety of the travelling public? Are they not worthy of some consideration? Who is liable for a smash-up or, perhaps, a fatal accident on these bad roads? I myself saw an accident on the Cook's River-road on Monday last that, had it happened in the night time, might have terminated fatally through the self-same thing, bad roads. The time is right here now when something might be done to cure this great evil, and I am sure there are thousands like myself who agree with a Tyre Bill being introduced, on consideration that the roads are kept in good order.

I am, etc.,

Forms for Companies can be obtained on application at the Stamp Duties Office, Phillip-street, Sydney, or at the Taxation Office, George-street North, Sydney.

All persons carrying on any business, including grazing or farming of every description (whether the land used in this connection be Crown Lease or Freehold), trade, or profession on their own account, or who are in receipt of income from rents of property, are required to furnish Income Returns irrespective of the amount of their income; but unless demanded by notice in writing from the Commissioners of Taxation, a return of income in the case of a person in receipt of salary or wages only, and who has not previously been a taxpayer, is not required if the gross annual amount of such salary or wages does not exceed £200.

All employers of labour, whether they themselves are liable to make Income Tax Returns or not, are required to furnish to the Commissioners of Taxation the name, occupation, and address of each and every employee whose salary or wage for the year 1911 aggregated £200 or upwards.

Special attention is called to the fact that owing to recent legislation ALL INCOME derived from GRAZING and FARMING of every description, or from RENTS of property, or from the USE, OWNERSHIP, or CULTIVATION of all classes of land in any way, is NOW LIABLE TO TAX, and notwithstanding that the land used in this connection may be subject to a LAND TAX, MUNICIPAL, or SHIRE Rate.

PUBLIC ATTENTION IS PARTICULARLY CALLED TO THE FOLLOWING FACTS, viz., THAT A PENALTY NOT EXCEEDING TWENTY POUNDS IS IMPOSED ON ANY PERSON NEGLECTING TO FURNISH THE RETURN required of him within the time-abovementioned, and that any person failing to furnish such Return is not relieved from liability to the penalty by reason only that a notice to furnish the Return may not have been received by, or that the prescribed form may not have been delivered to, such person.

All owners of taxable lands subject to mortgage should furnish particulars of every such mortgage, in order that they may derive the benefit of any deduction to which they may be entitled in respect of the interest on the mortgage of their lands, including improvements thereon.

Forms of the prescribed Return (Form K) may be obtained on application at the Offices of the Commissioners of Taxation, or the Commissioner for Stamp Duties, and should be furnished on or before the TENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1912, before mentioned.

L. S. SPILLER, R. N. JOHNSON, J. W. HOLLIMAN, Commissioners of Taxation.

N.B.—Particular attention is called to the observations and directions with the Forms of Return. (2-r1)

SOCIAL.

As usual at the beg of the year and during the next few su..er months, members of the "social" world are taking a holiday, and those who have not gone away from town are remaining quietly at home, and even "teas" and tennis parties are few and far between. This is as it should be during the hot weather, which is so enervating in Sydney at this time of the year, and hostesses are glad of a short respite from entertaining. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Chelmsford are enjoying their visit to the vice-regal country residence at Hill View, Sutton Forest, where they have had beautifully cool weather lately, and even cold nights.

Mrs. Dumaresq was amongst the passengers who arrived from England in the Themistocles, and is at present the guest of the Governor and Lady Chelmsford at Sutton Forest. Mrs. Dumaresq is the widow of the late Captain Dumaresq, a member of the pioneer family of Dumaresq, of St. Aubyns, Scone, New South Wales, and mother of Captain Dumaresq, A.D.C. to Lord Chelmsford. Many years ago Mrs. Dumaresq resided for some time at Tivoli, Rose Bay, and her Sydney friends will be pleased to see and welcome her once again.

By the last mail many letters were received from India, giving vivid descriptions of the Coronation Durbar at Delhi. A correspondent writes from one of the great camps not far from the King's, and all the Rajahs', and says it was a marvellous sight to see the 25 miles of camps outside Delhi. The jungle had been cleared, roads and bridges made, post and telegraph offices erected, and a large electric light power station. All the camps had gardens, and the "mess" houses had drawing-rooms, smoking and dining rooms, and verandahs, all prettily arranged with pot plants, palms, and curtains. The Rajahs' camps were most wonderful. The days were hot, but the nights cold, and summer clothes were worn in the afternoon, but furs and winter wraps were in requisition directly the sun went down. There were "huts" in some of the camps where fires were always burning in the evening, but in the King's camp it is said they were all under canvas, and felt the cold dreadfully. Our correspondent had been to the reception given for the King and Queen after they arrived at Delhi, and saw the procession of Rajahs and native chiefs in their carriages, followed by their retainers, which was wonderfully gorgeous. Polo seemed one of the chief amusements for the visitors, when no other official or social event was taking place, there being a fine polo ground, where after the game a band of 1000 performers played for an hour or so. The list of festivities included a garden party to be given by the King and Queen in the Fort on December 13, the day after the Coronation Durbar ceremony, which took place in the amphitheatre. The entertainment, we have since heard by cable, was also a wonderful sight. Their Majesties the King and Queen are now on their way back to England, and the Royal visit to India is to-day an historic event of the past, and one that will long live in the memory of those who were fortunate enough to witness and participate in any of the magnificent ceremonies connected with it.

Sir Edmund and Lady Barton left for Hobart on Wednesday last, and intends spending their summer holiday in Tasmania. Sir William and Lady Cullen and Lady Simpson are also enjoying a pleasant visit in Tasmania.

Mr. and Mrs. Henniker Heaton were amongst the passengers from England who arrived by R.M.S. Mantua on Thursday last.

Miss Sarah Macintyre arrived in Sydney on Thursday morning by R.M.S. Mantua, and is staying at Orielton, Ocean-street, Edgecliff, until her departure for England in March.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. D. White, of Bluff Downs, Queensland, are at present on a visit to Sydney.

The annual market day inaugurated by the Women's Working Guild in aid of All Saints', Sutton Forest, took place on Hillview grounds, kindly lent by his Excellency Lord Chelmsford, on Wednesday last. The Rev. A. C. Corlette called upon his Excellency to declare the market open, but Lord Chelmsford as a privilege asked his Lordship the Archbishop of Sydney to perform the opening ceremony. Favourable weather conditions prevailed, although the air was rather keen; but this did not prevent a large and fashionable gathering of visitors from all parts of the district. Amongst those present were noticed his Lordship the Archbishop of Brisbane, Captain Dumaresq, A.D.C., Mrs. Dumaresq, Captain D. Moleyns, A.D.C., Hon. Joan Thesiger, Hon. Anne Thesiger, Hon. Bridget Thesiger, Hon. Andrew Thesiger, Miss Rutherford, Lady Stephen, Mrs. Langer Owen, Miss M. Owen, Mrs. H. E. Kater, Mrs. Lang Campbell, Mrs. Rich, Mrs. Westmacott, Dr. and Mrs. Alsop, Mrs. Cordeaux, Mrs. Gerald Campbell, Mrs. Welby, Mrs. Tarrant, Mrs. J. A. Badgery, Miss Donkin, Mrs. E. H. Badgery, Mrs. de Mestre, Mr. and Mrs. Park, Miss Jackson, Mrs. W. Laidley, Rev. T. H. and Mrs. Dist'n Morgan, Miss Southing. The stalls and stallholders were:—Tea stall, Hon. Miss Thesiger and Mrs. H. Oliver Carter, assisted by Misses D. Nicholson, Sherwin, Brooke, Nellie de Mestre, Salway, Scott-Reid, and Tarrant; fancy stall, Mesdames F. G. White and T. Donkin, assisted by Mrs. Brown and Miss Donkin; guild stall, Mrs. and Miss Hunt and Miss Carter; produce stall, Mrs. Hodgson and Miss Cowley; sweets, Mesdames Arnold and P. A. Badgery; cake stall, Mesdames Garraway and Bowyer-Smith and Moffitt, assisted by Misses Richardson and Morrice (3); guessing competition, Miss Hunt; sheep-judging, Miss Enid Badgery. The proceeds amounted to over £80.

The Tirranna Picnic Race Club held their annual meeting on the Tirranna grounds on Thursday, 11th inst., many of the old families having left the district, the races were not so well patronised as on former occasions. Amongst the visitors were Dr. and Mrs. Robert Faithfull, Miss Faithfull, Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Faithfull, Mr. Campbell Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Gibson, Mrs. William Chisholm, Miss Chisholm, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, Miss Jackson, the Misses Cunningham, Mrs. Harry Chisholm, Miss Stella Chisholm, Mr. and the Misses Moriarty, the Misses Garland, Miss Eileen Keys, Mrs. Chisholm, and the Misses Chisholm, Mrs. and Miss Johnstone, Mrs. and the Misses Maddrell, Messrs. Edgar Maddrell, B. Osborne, S. Osborne, Mr. Gerald Massey, Mr. Twynam, Mr. Henry Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Gunn, and Mr. Austin De Lauret. The weather was perfect, and most of the ladies wore white muslin dresses. The annual ball in connection with the races took place last night.

The piece "Dame Nature," in which Miss Ethel Irving is at present appearing at the Criterion Theatre before crowded houses every evening, does not lend itself to such beautiful dressing, as the plays in which Miss Irving has previously been seen in Sydney. The play opens showing a scene at the cafe in the Paris salon on the day that the medal of honour is presented to the artist who is considered to have painted the best picture of the year. "Lolette" (Miss Irving) is seen sitting at one of the tables in a simple black and white checked silk voile, made en princesse, with panels of black silk down either side, and a Peter Pan collar embroidered with gold, her small black hat having a chou of cherry-coloured ribbon beneath the brim on one side. In the second act, where "Lolette" is holding an "at home" in her own house after her marriage with Robert Bertram, she wears a dainty little evening dress of soft white net embroidered with crystal beads, and trimmed, with bugle passementerie, and a short pale pink ninon tunic, also edged with bugle passementerie; a bandeaux of pale blue ribbon in the hair, and a single deep pink rose at the waist, giving an effective touch of colouring. Later Miss Irving appears in a dark sapphire blue velvet, the bodice and long close-fitting basque being edged with fur, and a small toque to match completes the costume. In the fourth and last act a house dress of dark amethyst crepe de chine, with ninon bodice and hip draperies is worn, relieved only with cream lace collar and cuffs. As the Princess de Chabran, Miss Violet Ley has the opportunity of wearing two beautiful evening dresses, one of fawn and apricot shot pannel velvet made en princesse, with a panel down the back, and a perfectly fitting tunic of silver beaded net finished with a handsome deep beaded fringe, the corsage having a bertha of precious stones, her cloak being of palest blue mirror velvet lined with white satin and bordered with irridiscent Oriental passementerie. Her other dress was of shell pink satin messaline, without any trimming save a row of pearls on her low corsage, and her pink ninon coat was trimmed with pale pink and pale green bugle embroidery, with charming effect, completed by a headdress composed of platinum bandeaux.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Strudwick, Isis, Chatswood, were tendered a farewell prior to their departure for Europe, on Tuesday, January 9, at the Australia. The guests of the afternoon, who for many years have taken an active part in Church and social matters, will be much missed from the district. Amongst those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Isley, Mr. and Mrs. T. Douglas, Mrs. and Miss Eliot, Mrs. and Miss Pilcher, Mr. and Mrs. Mace, Professor and Mrs. Peden, Mr. and Mrs. Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lavers, Captain and Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Backhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Carfrae, Mr. and Mrs. Farran, and Mr. and Mrs. Beeton.

The little ones at the Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children were recently made happy by a party given to them by Miss Laugher and some friends. Luxuries were handed round to the children in the surgical wards, who were also presented with toys, and the matron and sisters were also entertained.

Mrs. J. I. Steel, of Killara, North Shore, held her annual family gathering on Monday, at the residence of her second son (Mr. John A. Steel), Elmsmere, Burwood. The family numbers 65 in all, but several were far away, and could not be present, but a total of 59 children, grand-children, and great-grandchildren met for the occasion. A large tent was erected on the lawn, in which luncheon was served. Mr. Robert S. Steel, of Lindfield, proposed the health and happiness of the host and hostess. The only other toast was that proposed by Mr. Thomas R. Steel, of Killara:—"The health of the oldest and youngest present." Mr. Gavan Steel, Mosman, responded on behalf of his mother, being the oldest present, and also for his daughter, aged three weeks. Prior to their departure each guest received from the host and hostess a souvenir of the day.

The marriage of Miss Matte Roth, eldest daughter of Colonel Reuter Roth, D.S.O., and Mrs. Roth, Tusculum-avenue, Pott's Point, with Lieutenant Wilhelm Van Reimsdyk, of Padalarang, Java, Lieutenant to the Netherlands Indian Cavalry, took place quietly at St. John's Church, Darlinghurst, on Tuesday last, the ceremony being solemnised by the Rev. E. C. Beck. The bride wore a walking dress of cream Oriental satin, with an overdress of cream embroidered silk net, the panels being fastened down with crystal beads. Her large cream silk picture hat was trimmed with pink roses, and she wore a cluster of roses at her waist. Her bouquet of white and pink roses tied with pink streamers and her diamond earrings and diamond and pearl pendant were gifts from the bridegroom. Miss Olga Roth was the only bridesmaid and wore a pale saxe blue silk coat and skirt and pale lemon-coloured hat trimmed with pink roses and blue ribbons, and carried a bouquet of dark red roses tied with pale blue ribbons. MORE WONDERFUL CURES BY CLEMENTS TONIC

THE GREAT STANDARD MEDICINE.

CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"I wish to give you a testimonial, as I have benefitted much by taking Clements Tonic. I was recommended by a friend to try it, but I had tried so many things that I did not have any faith in it, but he persuaded me, and told me if I did not get any benefit from it he would pay the cost, as it had cured him of the same thing, Indigestion. I went to two doctors over it, but only got temporary relief.

"I am writing this to benefit anyone who is suffering from Indigestion, as I consider it is a great blessing, and I ONLY TOOK TWO BOTTLES, two years ago, and have had no sign of it returning since, and I CAN EAT ANYTHING AND ENJOY THE BEST OF HEALTH. A good MANY PEOPLE IN LITHGOW AND RYDAL KNOW HOW I SUFFERED, and now I feel like a new man.

"You can use this for any purpose you like, as I consider Clements Tonic a great blessing to anyone suffering as I did.

A SECOND TRIBUTE TO CLEMENTS TONIC.

19 Bourke-street, Launceston,
Dec. 7th, 1911.

CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"My restoration to health by the aid of Clements Tonic was little short of marvellous.

"For two years I suffered dreadfully from Neuralgia and Insomnia. The neuralgic pains were aggravated by my not being able to sleep. My appetite left me, and I became so weak that I was unable to work, my hands and limbs trembled and shook so, I thought my end had come. During that time I was under medical treatment. I also tried various remedies, and still kept getting worse. One day a friend gave me half a bottle of Clements Tonic to try. The result was so good that I took a course. My health improved rapidly, and I was soon free from my complaints and felt splendid.

"I am a native of this city, and scores of my friends can vouch for the truth of this statement. You may make what use you wish of this.

(Signed) SAMUEL COULTASS."

CARE OF ABORIGINES.

According to a report furnished to the Acting Chief Secretary, the Aborigines Protection Act, which came into force on June 1, 1910, has worked satisfactorily during the past year. A number of apprentices were sent out under the provisions of the board's regulations, and as to these encouraging reports have been received. Additional committees have been appointed at Angledool, Kempsey, Collarenebri, and Coonabarabran, to supervise the local camps, and considerable improvements have been authorised in connection with aborigines' camps in other parts of the State. The usual assistance was granted during the year to the aged and infirm and to children attending school. A special dinner was given to the aborigines on all the stations on the occasion of the King's Coronation, and there was similar festivity at Christmas.

BOTANIC GARDENS.

Mr. J. H. Maiden, Superintendent of the Botanic Gardens, writes:—

"During the last few years a large but not common Queensland tree has come into prominence because of the pleasing odour of its foliage, which has caused the leaves to be distilled for the sake of the oil which has been used for perfume purposes. I am referring to Backhousia citriodora, which is a close relation to our native Backhousia myrtifolia, common on the banks and creeks, but whose leaves are not so pleasantly aromatic. I have succeeded in cultivating the northern tree in Sydney after one or two failures, and it seems a difficult plant to obtain. A shrub of 10ft will be found about the middle of the long bed, No. 28, in the middle garden, just a few feet south of the dismantled palm house. It bears a profusion of pleasing white flowers, and it will be useful as a garden shrub in the warmer parts of New South Wales, quite independently of its economic value.

"On the other side of the same long bed is a gardenia, which is not very well known, because its flowers may be almost called inconspicuous in comparison with the large single and double gardenias which are cultivated by the florists. This particular gardenia is known as Amoena, and has small dull white, starlike flowers, and the plant itself is a neat, bushy, somewhat thorny, shrub of 7ft high. The plant is a native of China, the home of so many beautiful shrubs, and gardenias belong to the Rubiaceae.

"The well-known Russellia juncea has been flowering especially well this year. It is such a favourite that there are many specimens scattered throughout the garden, but there is an especially fine plant alongside that hothouse which is next to the shoe house. Russellia is pendant in habit, and bears a profusion of tubular scarlet blossoms. It comes from Mexico, and is a member of that family which includes the snapdragon."

THIRD TEST.

AUSTRALIAN COLLAPSE.

INNINGS YIELDS 133.

ENGLAND IN STRONG POSITION.

FOSTER'S SPLENDID BOWLING

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The third test match was commenced in perfect weather to-day. There was an attendance of about 8000, which can be regarded as good for an off-day. The gate takings were £350.

Included in the crowd were visitors from all States of the Commonwealth, and special trains were run from the different parts of this State. His Excellency the Governor (Sir Day Bosanquet) and party were present during the whole of the play.

The proceedings were full of incident, and therefore the people found plenty to engage their attention. Again the luck was with the Australians; Hill won the toss from Douglas, and elected to bat. Checkett had prepared a perfect wicket, and everything appeared in favour of the batsmen. The attack, however, proved too good, and Australia was out for the insignificant total of 133.

This is how the wickets fell:—One for 6, two for 6, three for 65, four for 84, five for 88, six for 88, seven for 97, eight for 113, nine for 122, and ten for 133.

Bardsley and Kelleway opened, but they did not stay long. Hordern was put in early, so that his hands would not be stiff or cramped for bowling, thereby robbing the ball of spin and bite. He defied the bowlers for a time, and Ransford was shaping nicely, when he had his left thumb badly injured by a ball from Foster, and had to retire. Armstrong assisted Hordern to stem the tide, and was top-scorer for the side with 33. Trumper was a long while making 26, but, like Hordern and Armstrong, he played soundly and with the object of getting the side out of a hole. Hill went in fourth wicket down, and, owing to the estrangement which had occurred between the captain and M'Alister over the picking of the team, his admirers hoped that he would be able to show a recovery of his old form. Smith, however, was on the qui vive, and when Hill played out to and missed a ball from Foster the bails were smartly flicked off before the batsman could regain his crease.

Hill was out for a duck, and Minnett, with the top average in first-class cricket this season, was looked to as a possible saviour of the side, but Foster secured him for nil also. Matthews, too, went cheaply. Some of the crowd urged the batsman to "hit." Cotter responded with several good strokes, including a sixer off Barnes, the best hit of the day. Barnes, however, then bowled him for 11.

Carter, with Ransford, who shaped well under his disability, were the last of the Australians. It was admitted that there was nothing wrong with the wicket, but Foster was wonderfully fit, and bowled in his best English form. He varied his pace, and swung the ball in the air cleverly. Barnes was very accurate, but was unfavoured by luck. Douglas and Hitch also did particularly well.

The ball from Hitch which secured Trumper's wicket was a beautiful one. Trumper appeared to get his bat tangled in his legs, and played against his knee, while the ball beat him badly.

Checkett had devoted special attention to the wicket. It had been rolled persistently all day Thursday, and while it had a hard, level face, it was sodden underneath. It had "dried out" beautifully, a perfect wicket, and all in favour of the batsmen. The Englishmen were quite at home upon it, and their opening betokens a big score.

Mr. Warner was present at the match, and he looks wonderfully improved in health.

IN THE FIELD.

Clem Hill won the toss for the third time in as many attempts, and as the weather and wicket were both perfect he decided to have first knock.

ENGLAND'S GOOD START.

As in the other two matches, Kelleway and Bardsley were the opening batsmen, Foster and Barnes being the bowlers. Each batsman got off the mark by scoring singles from Foster's first over, but Barnes' first was a maiden; so was Foster's second to Kelleway. Facing Barnes, Bardsley cut him for 4, making the total 6. Then the first disaster befel the Australians, as Foster clean bowled Kelleway. The Glebe right-hander had only scored 1. The Englishmen had made a splendid start, as the innings was only 12 minutes old.

Hordern was sent in early, his batting in the first two matches having earned the promotion. However, his association with Bardsley was of short duration, as the left-hander snicked one from Barnes, and wicket-keeper Smith made no mistake.

Two wickets for 6, and the pitch perfect. The experience of the Australians in the Melbourne match was being repeated. Ransford was next, and Hordern then hit a short one to leg off Foster. The googlie expert notched another single, then Ransford started his account with a hit to leg for 2.

RANSFORD RETIRES.

The batsmen were playing cautiously, and the runs were slow in coming, but Ransford moved forward by late-cutting Barnes for 3. Hordern, however, was treating the Staffordshire professional with great respect. Here Ransford (6) met with a misfortune, as a ball from Foster struck him on the thumb of the left hand, badly bruising the nail. He retired temporarily. The Victorian left-hander had opened confidently, and was shaping well.

Armstrong came out in Ransford's place, the score being 17. Hordern glanced Barnes to leg for a single, but a little later he cocked one up dangerously close to Douglas at short-leg. Then Armstrong had a narrow escape, as he returned one towards Foster, who fell in his attempt to bring off the catch. The two escapes caused a mild sensation among the spectators.

Armstrong raised a cheer by hitting Barnes to the leg-boundary, and driving him for 3, making the total 28, the result of 50 minutes' play. The big Victorian was batting very confidently.

The score reached the thirties, and at 33 the first change in the bowling was made, the English captain relieving Barnes. He commenced with a maiden. At 35 Armstrong called Hordern for a run, and, had not Rhodes returned the ball slowly, Hordern would probably have been run out.

So far, the bowling had been of excellent quality, and the batsmen earned their runs. The fielding, too, was smart and safe, and Smith was keeping wickets very ably. As a result of an hour's play 33 runs were posted—shortly before Hordern narrowly missed being run out.

At 38 another change was made in the bowling, Hearne going on in place of Foster, whose record was 11 overs, 6 maidens, 8 runs, one wicket—a performance reminiscent of Alfred Shaw, in the earliest of the test matches. Hordern (11) again had a narrow escape of being run out. Douglas's return just missing the wicket. The batsmen were courting disaster, but the gods were kind. The spectators were kept on tenter-hooks, for Armstrong played a ball dangerously close to Hobbs at cover; but the Surreyite could not quite reach it. The big man then chopped Hearne for 2 but Hordern was treating the googlies with great respect. Still, he was staying there. At the luncheon adjournment the score was 45 for two, Hordern being 11, and Armstrong 18.

So far, the game had sparkled with incidents, as besides two men being dismissed, there were several narrow escapes. The scoring had been extremely slow, 45 runs in 80 minutes, or an average of under half a run a minute. The English bowlers had clearly dominated the scene, the form of Foster and Barnes being in keeping with that displayed in the Melbourne test. The spectators had plenty to interest them before lunch.

On resuming, the attendance had increased appreciably, and their attention soon became riveted on the doings of the afternoon, which proved even more disastrous to the Australian batsmen.

ARMSTRONG'S DISMISSAL.

Foster and Barnes were again the opening bowlers. Armstrong cut Foster for two, driving him for four, and getting him away for a single. Fifty up—81 minutes' play. Hordern recommenced with two off Barnes, and Armstrong raised cheers with a neat square cut that reached the boundary. The Victorian, was now 31, and the total 62. Four runs later, however, Foster pierced Armstrong's defence, and the Victorian, who, with Hordern, had made a valuable stand, retired for 33 (four fours), made in 67 minutes.

Trumper was warmly greeted as he emerged from the pavilion. He opened with a single off Foster, then cracked Barnes to the off boundary, following it up with a single. Trumper monopolised the scoring. He drove Barnes, and by smart running four runs were got, but the Staffordshire man beat Hordern badly, but missed the wicket. He next raised a cheer by cleverly stopping an exceedingly hot return from Trumper, who shortly afterwards pulled Foster for one.

Hordern's time had now arrived, for he popped one from Foster up to Rhodes at short leg, and retired for 25, the result of sound, defensive batting of an extremely slow character, as he was batting 103 minutes. He had succeeded where batsmen of greater reputation had failed.

WICKETS FALL QUICKLY.

The fourth wicket fell at 84, and Foster's bowling figures were three for 23. Hill went in, but his stay was very short, as in swinging at one from Foster he missed it, and Smith stumped him very smartly. Once again the Australian captain had failed. He is undergoing a similar experience to that of Victor Trumper in 1907-8 against A. O. Jones's team. Hill's dismissal was a disaster which had not been expected.

Matthews, the Victorian, who was making his debut in test matches against England, received an ovation. Trumper welcomed him by getting Barnes for four. Matthews's first scoring stroke was a four off Foster, then a single, the spectators cheering encouragingly. However, he failed to add to his total, for he hit one from Barnes to deep mid-on, where Mead, running across, effected a splendid catch.

Seven for 97 was a very disappointing record from the Australian view-point, but the reverse side of the picture appeared delightful through English spectacles.

COTTER HITS A SIX.

Cotter was next, and, as usual, he adopted aggressive tactics. One ball from Barnes was lifted over the pickets—the biggest hit of the match—but the bowler had his revenge by clean bowling the Glebeite when he had made 11. Eight for 113.

The Englishmen were naturally elated at the success which had attended their efforts; and they clustered together at the fall of each wicket. Carter joined Trumper, who had surveyed the scene of disaster from "the other end." Carter commenced slowly but soundly, his first run being got off Foster. The bowling was particularly difficult to negotiate.

Ten runs had been added when Hitch relieved Foster, and his first ball spreadeagled Trumper's wicket. The famous batsman had paid a high compliment to the English bowlers by batting 65 minutes for 26 runs.

Ransford, whose hand had been badly hurt, now reappeared, the score being nine for 123. Hitch's side-stepping run caused much amusement to the spectators. Just before the tea adjournment Douglas relieved Barnes (three for 69), but no separation was effected, the score being 128, Ransford 7, Carter 3.

On resuming only eight runs were added when Carter was caught by Gunn off Douglas. The Australian rout was complete. Ransford finished with 8 not out. The English bowlers had again triumphed on a perfect wicket, and performed even better than in the Melbourne match. Foster's five for 36 was the outstanding feature of the out-cricket. The fielding of the visitors was also very good, but with the batsmen on the defensive they had less to do than usual. The Australians batted 3 hours 17 minutes

The Australian innings recalled an English comment made on an historic occasion upon an Australian team in England, that their batting was like that of boys on a village green.

ENGLAND BATTING.

Hobbs and Rhodes opened the Englishmen's innings at 4.57, to the bowling of Cotter and Hordern. Macartney fielded in place of Ransford. Hobbs scored a single off Cotter, and a two off Hordern. Three singles were obtained off Cotter's second over. Hordern's bowling was being played confidently. Hobbs reached double figures whilst Rhodes was scoring two (13 minutes). The Surrey champion cover-hit and straight-drove Cotter for four, the latter being smartly run. In half an hour 28 runs had been scored, then Hobbs cut one from Cotter high over Trumper's head at third man, but it fell safely.

Kelleway went on in place of Hordern, who having sent down six overs for 12 runs, changed ends, Cotter (none for 17) retiring. The change made little difference, as runs were got fairly fast. Though Rhodes was 45 minutes making double figures, 40 appeared in 48 minutes. Matthews now relieved Hordern, and appealed unsuccessfully for lbw against Hobbs (27). At 6 o'clock the score was 49, Hobbs being 29, and Rhodes 20, which showed clearly that there was nothing wrong with the pitch.

The Australians fielded smartly, and Carter kept wickets excellently. So far the position greatly favours the Englishmen, who with all their wickets intact require only 85 runs to gain a lead on the first innings.

(Before Mr. Acting Justice Rich.)

STAY OF EXECUTION.

LEE CHUN V SHANNON.

Mr. Delohery, instructed by Messrs. S. F. Blackmore and son, appeared for the defendant in the action and moved for a stay of execution. Mr. Gosling (of Messrs. Priddle and Gosling) appeared for the plaintiff to oppose, and submitted several preliminary objections, but said that if the defendant gave security to the satisfaction of the Prothonotary for the verdict and costs, or paid the amount into court, he would not oppose the application. Mr. Delohery said that the defendant was prepared to furnish security within a reasonable time.

The action was one in which the plaintiff recovered a verdict against defendant for £227 5s 5d for money advanced in respect of certain brickworks, and defendant now desired that execution on the judgment should be stayed.

The application was granted on condition that defendant gave security for the amount of the verdict and costs within five days to the satisfaction of the Prothonotary.

FRANCE AND GERMANY.

With the resignation of the Ministry in France coincidently with the general elections in Germany, the international situation at the present moment commands unusual interest. We are not yet out of the wood so far as the Morocco affair is concerned. Morocco is responsible for the resignation of the French Ministry, and in the German elections, which took place yesterday, the Moroccan tangle played no small part. But the German people were excited by other things as well. Well-informed writers have predicted a heavy blow to the Government. Whether that prediction is verified, or whether the Government remains as strong as, or possibly stronger than, before, we shall very soon see. We shall know the general result from the news of the first elections, though the position may be somewhat altered by the second ballots, which take place a fortnight hence. The German Reichstag numbers 397 members, about one for every 132,000 inhabitants. The total number of electors at the time of the general election of 1907 was 13,350,008, and the number of actual voters 11,303,483—all males over 25 years of age having a vote. The election of 1907 was memorable for the severe set-back to the Social Democrats, who, going to the country with a total of 82 members, returned with only 43. At that time Prince Buelow, the then Chancellor, suddenly found himself in an advantageous position for attacking the Socialist party, whose arrogance had firmly consolidated the "Buelow block"—the Conservative-Liberal alliance formed in 1906, when the Centre, or Clerical, party refused to vote the colonial estimates, and went into Opposition. One of the peculiarities of the German Constitution, which has undergone no alteration since 1871, when the States of Germany entered into their "eternal union," is that Chancellor and Ministers are not elected by the people's representatives, but by the German Emperor. The Reichstag can neither appoint, nor dismiss, Ministers; nor does the Emperor choose them from that Assembly. Members of the Reichstag may influence a Government, but they can have no part in it. So it is that the bureaucrat Ministers do not directly take an active part in the elections. But in 1907 there was a notable departure. Herr Dernburg, the Minister for the Colonies, who was not a bureaucrat, but an "outsider," went into the fray and stumped Germany, exciting enthusiasm for the colonial cause, and inflicting on the Socialists a severe defeat.

Many things have happened since then. There is no Dernburg this time. There is no Buelow. There has been another shuffling of the cards, and once again, under the new Chancellor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, we have the old alliance of Conservatives and Clericals, by far the two strongest parties numerically, fighting against the National-Liberals, the Freisinn (Radicals), and the Social Democrats. The transformation of parties took place in the summer of 1909, and it led to the retirement of Prince Buelow. "I determined to retire," he said, "because, in consequence of the attitude of the Conservative party in opposing the Government in regard to the death duties, a political constellation was produced, which, to the exclusion of the Liberal parties, brought the Conservatives into the closest alliance with the Centre and the Poles, and thereby made the Centre once again the controlling party." This combination between the Centre and the Conservatives is known as the "blue-black block," and there is much popular discontent with its alleged reactionary character. That was one of the facts that Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg had to face in this election. There has also been much discontent in Germany with the Empire's protectionist system, and also with the Government's foreign policy. The three principal Opposition parties united in blaming the Chancellor and the "blue-black block" for the heavy burdens, which were put on commerce and industry in 1909, while land and invested capital were spared. Other complaints were that Bethmann-Hollweg had re-established the yoke of the Catholic Centre on the Lutheran majority, and that the promise to broaden the reactionary Prussian franchise had not been fulfilled.

Herr Bebel, the leader of the German Socialists, a remarkable man in many ways, confidently asserted some time back that the party would come back from the elections of 1912 not only with its old number of members, but with over 100. Events have certainly favoured the Socialists. For one thing, the protectionist issue has been one of the foremost. Despite the demands of nearly all the German municipalities, the Conservative agrarian Government has refused to lower the import duties. A fierce agitation has raged on the subject of the high price of food. The Chancellor declared that the Government would stand or fall with the battle-cry, "Protection for the nation's workers." The German workman, as is also the case in France, gets lower wages than in England, though the hours of work are longer and the cost of living is higher. Electoral reform is one of the leading planks in the Socialist platform, and another is the reform of the Constitution in the direction of establishing a Ministry responsible to the Reichstag, and amenable to the pressure of an adverse majority. In connection with all these things a very heavy vote against the Government may be expected. It is quite possible that the domestic interests of the people overshadowed their concern for international relations, but the chief interest of the elections for us lies in their effect on the present unsettled condition of international affairs. Much depends upon the new Reichstag and the personnel of the new German Ministry. Much depends also on the personnel of the new French Ministry. There is good reason for anxiety on the part of other nations. It needs only a slight contrary wind to fan a flame that may imperil the peace of Europe.

AUSTRALIA AND CRITICISM.

There are few weeks in which Australia and Australians are free of judgment, either from the world outside, or from within. Sometimes it is the considered judgment of intelligent observation. Sometimes it is the mere impressionism of half-knowledge. We have been upborne recently, for example, on a wave of national enthusiasm in respect of a series of achievements in sport. In a way those achievements have been remarkable enough, but the tendency is to find in them a national significance wholly without warrant. No amount of sporting conquest is of much real value to us after all. The evolution of games has attached to some of them a fictitious interest, by which the great public at disposal of them has been confused into regarding them as national portents. We are all lovers of sport, and no one is in the least likely to dispute its place in the economy of things. But efficiency in sport cannot and does not replace inefficiency in the really national affairs. It is a truism, of course, to say that British sport and sportsmanship have long been credited with playing a great part in the serious business of British national development. But there is some confusion here also. The sporting spirit which breeds valuable instincts in a people is one thing. The acclamation of sport as a national asset, while the real national assets of the country, of commerce, of industrial development, are left to the hazard of time and chance, is quite another thing. Criticism of us has always an easy task in establishing its argument on our sporting successes, for it has merely to contrast with them our political life, our standards of culture, or our languid concern in the peopling of our empty spaces.

But perhaps it is the quality of our public life which is most obviously open to the attack of adverse comment. In truth, criticism of Australia on that score is assured of acceptance by Australians themselves, for few of us would be found disposed to satisfaction at the calibre of our politics. At best they are dully unimaginative, with an occasional fine flight of national aspiration, which, however, as in the case of defence, is by way of being thrust upon them by unescapable necessity. The simple truth of the matter is known of all. The politics of Australia are given over to the inadequate direction of men who have been swung by the pendulum of circumstances into undeserved prominence. We have no quarrel with the critics in respect of our politicians. But we join issue with criticism when it measures the future of Australia by those who now enact Australian laws. Australia is far greater than its politicians, and the prosaic ineptitudes which make up so much of their legislation are but a temporary mischance. The future of Australia may be trammelled by them, but not for long; for the future of Australia is a giant-awakening, and a bursting of bonds, and a sweeping of the poorly partisan errors of the present into their appropriate void. The proof of that is at our hand. It is manifest in the calibre of the country. Not even the fiercest critic will be found, if he really knows Australia, to question the possibilities of its sun and its soil. Its soil is a vast-spread area of unsurpassed fertility; its sun is a generous impulse of benefaction constantly at call of that fertility, and needing only the help of man to transform the seeming waste into a granary of the world. That basis of productive certainty is sufficient in itself for the building of a great nation. And when our critics measure Australia by the politicians of Australia, they are inclined to forget the quality of the men who are outside politics, but whose influence upon this foundation stage of its structure has been and still is inestimable. National life, after all, does not begin and end with politics. The political life of England is immeasurably a finer thing than our own, but outside and far from Westminster, the national life of England has been built up for centuries by innumerable abilities and immeasurable energies. The life of Australia is rich in similar endowment. The pastoral pioneers of the past were often politicians also, but the great pastoral industry of the present has at its service men whose powers cannot be discounted because they are not in the glare of political publicity. Their achievements are sufficient demonstration of calibre. And how else is the progress of Australia in every department of commercial activity to be explained if not by the presence everywhere of gifts of brain and mental aptitude equal to a very great burden of responsibility, and skill and insight and resource. The innumerable avocations of business life are served by men whose calibre is undoubted, while as to the specifically cultured professions, a high standard of equipment is widely at service of the community. All this is representative life in far greater measure than our political manifestation of ourselves, and it is the effect of these standards upon the national future, and not the lesser standards of the politicians, which is moulding Australia. Criticism of Australia, thus, is too hasty when it regards our politics as our all. In any case, moreover, criticism, like conclusions, summings-up, verdicts in general, is merely a groping after some haven of finality of judgment. It takes its inch of foothold to be truth, but as like as not it is error. It is too often at the mercy of generalisation, selecting from an illimitable field by leaving out of count a vast array of qualifying detail.

THE HOBART CONFERENCE.

There must be a sufficient explanation of the way in which the great Labour Conference at Hobart has contradicted itself. By one resolution it has decided against unification, and by another that the referenda shall be resubmitted for the decision of the electors of the Commonwealth. Nothing could have been clearer as a result of the referenda campaign last year than the feeling of the people of Australia that to give the Federal Government what it demanded would be equivalent to abolishing the States. The questions to which affirmative answers were required proposed, among other things, to take all industrial matters into the care of the Commonwealth, and, in effect, to hand over the railways to the domination of a tribunal sitting in Melbourne. Moreover, the request that anything should become a monopoly when declared to be one by the Federal Parliament would have removed all limits from the power of the present Government; and neither State activity as representing the public, nor private enterprise in a thousand different directions, would have been free from interference and absorption. All this is ancient history. We went through the mill last year, and the grinding gave no comfort to Mr. Fisher and his colleagues. But while the straight-out proposal for unification was rejected by the Hobart Conference, the roundabout referenda have been endorsed—despite all that Mr. M'Gowen could say. It cannot be urged that the conference was not warned of the mind of the States on the matter. The delegates needed no warning. They know well enough that the referenda, if passed when resubmitted, will bring about the practical annihilation of the States, and the vote of April 26 cannot be easily forgotten. But something happened in the conference to swing the members round, and we remember that previous conferences have been distinguished by the same curious revulsion. In the one held in Sydney Messrs. M'Gowen and Holman carried their resolution against the referenda, but before the conference rose they had to give in, and bound themselves to keep in line, or at any rate not to take the platform in semi-revolt.

We may surmise that Mr. Watson has again been able to make his knowledge of how to manage meetings and men felt once more, and his influence as an extremist is apparently as great as was his power as a moderate. This curious factor should always be kept in mind. Mr. Watson has become a "whole hogger." He leads the section which would wipe out the States and bring in socialism with a rush. His persuasive methods, too, remain as potent as ever; and where persuasion fails he brings an unrivalled knowledge of the rules of debate, and of the finesse which counts when a majority is doubtful, to reinforce his reasoning. So it may have been explained that the referenda to be resubmitted will be perfectly harmless, and that the parts which seem dangerous may be rejected. We can quite imagine that there would be a repetition of the wheedling which saved a dangerous situation in this State when the Customs tariff was increased without warning or warrant, and when Labour electors were told that it was intended to secure the new protection. Manufacturers were not to get the benefit of advanced duties, but the masses, who work in factories. As the new protection is still a bait in the referenda proposals of the Federal Government, it is possible that the old ground was covered afresh, and that at last the voting went as Mr. Watson and his friends decided. But what will Mr. M'Gowen, and those who see with him, now do? Will they again get meekly to heel? State Ministers know well enough what lies ahead. Are they still prepared to surrender all their powers and prerogatives to the Commonwealth? Meanwhile Mr. Fisher can say that what he swore would happen will come to pass. The referenda will be resubmitted, and this time the people are to swing round and vote "Yes." We shall see. It would not be surprising if a strong solid "No" were again recorded, to find the Prime Minister still stubborn. Nothing but a smashing blow at the next general election will convince him that he cannot browbeat Australians into breaking up the Constitution.

To-day's "Herald."—"Home Rule in Peril" is one of Sir Henry Lucy's headings in "Life in London" (page 7) this week. A Reform Bill forecast by Mr. Asquith has altered the outlook, and anything may happen. Diplomatic interviews and the recording of conversations are discussed, and Sir Henry has some interesting notes about the informal discussions which often happen to be specially important. Rev. Stacy Waddy, of King's School, Parramatta, has sent a fourth contribution on the Durbar (page 7), and some of the details of the entry of the King-Emperor are rather startling. It is a very graphic account of a magnificent ceremony. The last of the articles on the Condominium appears on page 7, but this time it is not the Court so much as the country in which the Court sits which engages attention. A volcano is the principal item. An interesting contribution on Adam Lindsay Gordon from our London representative will be found on page 4. A contributor who has travelled as he writes takes us "Round the Continent" (page 5), and the vastness of Australia is well indicated. Papua (page 5) is the subject of a contribution by Mr. R. A. Goodyear, who has intimate knowledge of the possession, and speaks with authority about its labour conditions. "In the Garden" appears on page 5, as also do "Science Notes."

"Sunday Off."—Since the privilege of "Sunday off" was conceded to the police force Mr. Flowers (the Minister for Education) has watched closely to see what effects it produced. He is well satisfied. There have been complaints at Newcastle, but Mr. Flowers has no official knowledge of them. "Some of the bitterest opponents of the Sunday off scheme," he remarked yesterday, "are now beginning to realise the advantages of it, and speak favourably of it. The innovation was not decided upon suddenly. It was under careful consideration for a long time. The system has worked successfully in London, and there is no valid reason why it should not work successfully here. It will, of course, take some little time to meet increases in the staff rendered necessary by the new system and by rapid development in many parts of the State. Besides, a very high standard, physical and mental, has been very properly set in the police force, and that adds to the difficulty of getting a sufficient number of men. The success of the arrangements has exceeded anticipations."

Checking Sand Drifts.—Our Maclean correspondent writes:—"On many of the sandy areas along our coast extensive movements of sand, under the influence of the wind, offer a serious problem, alike to the Public Works Department and to individuals who own property in the vicinity of these drifts. Instances can be pointed out in which ridges or irregular hillocks of sand have advanced several chains within a few years, overwhelming railway lines used in connection with the harbour works, attractive and valuable seaside allotments, and even portions of the harbours. The planting of suitable varieties of pine and other trees has been recommended as a check, but in many cases the movement of the sand is so incessant that trees of any kind cannot get a start before they are overwhelmed or uprooted. Some time ago Marram grass was brought under the notice of the Works Department as a means of checking these sand drifts. It was tried at Iluka, on the north side of the Clarence River entrance, and is proving a success there. An area was planted there about nine months ago, when there was a particularly heavy movement. It has taken root well, and its effects in fixing the surface have been well demonstrated in the strong north-east winds of the past few weeks, to which the area was fully exposed. The grass bears transplanting well, and large areas of it could be put down at very little expense if the plants were available."

Workers for Northern Territory.—In response to an advertisement for a dozen bush workers for the Northern Territory a couple of hundred men, mostly newcomers, presented themselves at the Immigration Bureau yesterday morning. The men are required for clearing the area to be used for the Federal experimental farm, and are offered 10s per day, with 12 months' work guaranteed and free transport. The terms were evidently considered very satisfactory, for exceptional keenness was displayed by the applicants, and those unsuccessful went away looking very disappointed. The lucky ones, who were selected by officials of the Immigration Department and by Mr. Bulley, the newly-appointed manager of the experimental farm, leave next Wednesday by the Eastern, by which boat Mr. W. H. Clarke, the new Director of Agriculture for the Northern Territory, and Mr. Bulley will also travel.

FISH SUPPLIES.

PERTH, Friday.

The Colonial Secretary, Mr. Drew, replying to a deputation which asked for financial assistance for the Australian Fish-Canning and Packing Company, to be established at Shark Bay, said he would recommend the running of boats to bring fish from Shark Bay to Perth, but unless the company would enter into an agreement to supply fresh packed fish in the Perth market at fixed rates, the Government could not grant it financial assistance.

STATE SESSION.

THE PROGRAMME.

RECESS BEFORE DISSOLUTION.

When the Premier returns to Sydney, the Government will come to a final decision as to the work to be submitted to Parliament upon the session being resumed next month. Mr. Holman said yesterday it was proposed to give up the remainder of the session primarily to land legislation, the measures to be submitted including an amending land bill, a consolidating bill, and a declaratory bill. Outside of land legislation, there will be a bill dealing with the savings banks, a workmen's dwelling bill, measures dealing with a greater Sydney, and a greater Newcastle, and the Supreme Court and Circuit Court Act Amendment Bill. The financial measures introduced by Mr. Dacey will be carried to completion.

"If," said Mr. Holman, "we can get these measures through, we shall be in a position to arrange for a substantial recess, to give members a chance to recuperate. We ought to be in a position to close the session by the end of March. By this time the redistribution of seats will be completed, and it may be thought advisable before the House adjourns to make some statement about the dissolution. The House is entitled to some recess before the next election is sprung upon us.

"I have felt the strain of the last year's work, and my colleagues have felt it in the same degree, that the breakdown of the health of Mr. Estell, the Government whip, under the strain of the session, is the last illustration we have of the really ruinous exactions made on the health of members by the perpetual fighting of the last 12 months. Until about three months ago, I had hardly a moment's respite since the year opened. During the last three months I have not worked so cointinuously simply because I could not. My colleagues generously took off my hands work I was unable to do."

MURRUMBURRAH FIRE.

OVER-INSURANCE DENIED.

"EVERY PRECAUTION EXERCISED."

The assertion made by Mr. John Bourke, the Coroner at Murrumburrah, in the course of his finding in respect to a local fire, to the effect that the prevalence of incendiarism was largely due to stock and premises being "over-insured by greedy companies and incompetent agents," was yesterday denied by several of the large Sydney companies.

It was stated in refutation that over-insurance is never permitted wilfully; and, as a matter of fact, every possible precaution is taken to avoid it. The leading firms deny that they or their agents give countenance to such practices, and whenever cases of over-insurance do occur they are due either to misrepresentation or to a combination of circumstances which make it easy for an error to happen, even when the greatest care is exercised.

"I am quite sure," said Mr. Kelso King, of the Mercantile Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Ltd., "that no insurance company would knowingly over-insure any property, and if over-insurance did occur it would be due to misrepresentation or to inadvertence of some description. In my own case I employ expert inspectors, and they always exercise every care that over-insurance does not happen.

"The general custom is to examine all properties when the applications come in, and to adjust any errors which may have taken place. I may say that the desire is to do everything possible to avoid over-insurance by taking precautions to rectify any error that might reasonably be expected to escape the eye of any man but an expert.

"I am quite sure that over-insurance is not general, and whenever it does occur it is due to misrepresentation or to accidental circumstances."

PERSONAL.

The Attorney-General left by express last night for Melbourne and Adelaide on business connected with the Premiers' Conference. Mr. Holman is feeling the strain of last year's work, and is in indifferent health.

The State Treasurer, Mr. J. R. Dacey, and Captain Hacking, Superintendent of the Navigation Department, passed through Coraki yesterday from Ballina, where they held an inspection of the lighthouse. They went on to the Clarence River.

Nurse Oakes, matron of the Children's Hospital, Brisbane, has been appointed matron of the Launceston General Hospital in succession to Nurse Milne, resigned. Miss Oakes received her training in the latter institution.

The Rev. Dr. Jefferis, who for many years was minister of Pitt-street Congregational Church, has been spending a few days with members of his family in Sydney. He will occupy his old pulpit to-morrow, prior to leaving for Tasmania.

Mr. W. C. Kensington, Under-Secretary for Lands in New Zealand, will retire at the end of February on superannuation. He has occupied the position for 11 years. Mr. Kensington entered the Government Service 47 years ago. He fought in the Maori War, and received the New Zealand war medal.

Mr. Hugh Pollen, Under-Secretary to the Department of Internal Affairs, one of the oldest and most respected members of the New Zealand Public Service, has died, aged 61 years.

Professor Kernot, of the University of Melbourne, arrived in Sydney yesterday on a short visit.

Mr. L. H. Nathan, chairman of directors of S. Hoffnung and Co., London, arrived by the Malwa on Thursday on a six months' business visit to Australia.

The Lord Mayor (Sir Allen Taylor), acting upon medical advice, intends to take several weeks' holiday, beginning from next Saturday. It is probable that Alderman Milner Stephen, vice-president of the finance committee, may be selected as Deputy Lord Mayor at the council meeting on Tuesday next. Sir Allen Taylor has had a strenuous time in connection with the city resumptions, the programme for which is still under way.

At the last meeting of the board of directors of the Benevolent Society Dr. E. Selwyn Harrison was appointed physician to the Royal Hospital for Women, with the particular charge of the consultation for infants.

Miss Rosina Pinhey, an operatic soprano of this city, who sang for a year or two in Italy under the name of Rosina Sydna, sails for New York by the Marama on Monday. Miss Pinhey, who has entirely recovered the use of her beautiful voice during her year's stay here, will now resume her artistic career abroad.

On the retirement of Mr. Robert L. Elphinston from the service of Hill, Clark, and Co., Limited, the directors and members of the staff presented him with a gold watch.

Captain R. Holman, D.S.O., of the instructional staff, Australian Light Horse Corps, who has been stationed at Sydney, is leaving for Canada this week as an exchange officer. He takes the place of Lieut.-Colonel C. J. Reade, C.B., who has been appointed staff officer and D.A.A.G. for Western Australia.

At the residence of Mr. F. J. Cato, of Hawthorn, Melbourne, yesterday Dr. Karl Kumm, the African explorer, was married to Miss Frances Gertrude Cato. After the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Kumm left for London, via Honolulu and America, travelling by the Sydney express.

The friends of Mr. J. M'Farlane, M.L.A., member for the Clarence, have subscribed £170 as a testimonial in recognition of his services to the electorate during representation of over a quarter of a century.

The hon. secretary of the Swedish Chamber of Commerce, Mr. C. A. F. Ullberg, is leaving to-day for Europe, and will at the same time visit Sweden in order to bring Swedish manufacturers into direct touch with the chamber. His functions will be carried out by Mr. Nils Ljungberg, attache of the Swedish consulate.

FRENCH POLITICS.

THE CABINET SCANDAL.

M. CAILLAUX'S DILEMMA.

SENSATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE.

PARIS, Jan. 11.

All the colleagues of M. Caillaux in the recent Cabinet, with the exception of M. de Selves, who was Foreign Minister, have written expressing their confidence and approbation.

M. Caillaux was interviewed by the "Echo de Paris."

In the course of the interview, M. Caillaux said that, seeing the difficulty of securing a Minister of Marine in place of M. Delcasse, who had agreed to succeed M. de Selves as Foreign Minister, he insisted upon President Fallieres giving a guarantee that the new Foreign Minister would be sheltered from all interference.

He asked the President for a declaration that the Foreign Affairs Minister would not be expected to continue the policy resulting from the Franco-German agreement.

THE PLOT THICKENS.

FURTHER DISCLOSURES.

PARIS, Jan. 12.

The "Debats" publishes correspondence showing that, under the pretext of a railway concession to a Franco-German group of financiers, M. Caillaux, when Finance Minister, proposed to transfer the whole of French Equatorial Africa's outlet to Germany.

M. Cruppi (recently Minister of Justice, and formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs), the correspondence shows, rejected the scheme, and hence was not retained as Foreign Minister in the Monis Cabinet.

It is further stated that M. Caillaux conveyed to the German Government his willingness to float a loan for the Bagdad railway on the Paris market, and also approved of the appointment of a German every three years to the Presidency of the Ottoman debt.

Finally, it is declared, M. Caillaux came to a general understanding with Germany on the political question, and that all this was done while the Moroccan question was unsettled, thus tying the hands of the French Government.

THE SENATE INQUIRY.

M. CAILLAUX PROTESTS.

A dossier presented to the Senate Committee which is inquiring into the scandalous state of things alleged included M. Caillaux's negotiations with Baron von Lancken, Councillor of the German Embassy, wherein the Councillor expressed surprise that the French Minister of Foreign Affairs had rejected certain German proposals, in view of the fact that an eminent French personage, meaning M. Caillaux, had made much larger proposals to Germany.

M. Caillaux protests against the authenticity of the document, which M. de Selves insisted upon including in the dossier.

CAUSTIC COMMENT BY THE "TEMPS."

The "Temps" blames the Chamber of Deputies for the crisis, which, it says, is practically the same Parliament that sacrificed M. Delcasse because he forgot Germany.

The journal accuses M. Caillaux of rectifying that omission.

THE SEINE IN FLOOD.

NAVIGATION SUSPENDED.

PARIS, Jan. 12.

The Seine is thirteen feet below the 1910 flood level, and is rising rapidly.

Navigation has been suspended.

PERSIAN AFFAIRS.

TEHERAN, Jan. 12.

The Commission assisting M. Mornard, the new Provisional Treasurer-General, has resigned.

IMMIGRANT ARTISANS.

THE VICTORIAN AGENT.

INUNDATED WITH APPLICATIONS.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

Mr. S. Whitehead, officer in charge of the Victorian Government Labour Bureau, has received over two thousand applications, largely from men seeking employment in the building and engineering trades. He has made a good selection of the men required in all trades, and has arranged berths for them from the middle of February to the end of June.

The Women's Department of the Labour Exchange has arranged with Miss Cuthbertson (also a Victorian Labour Bureau officer) to advertise Victoria's requirements in all the Labour Exchanges.

The Chamber of Commerce at Luton has passed a resolution protesting against Victoria attempting to secure skilled straw hat hands.

Miss Cuthbertson will visit Luton next week.

[Mr. Whitehead and Miss Cuthbertson were sent to England by the Victorian Government, the Victorian Trades and Labour Council concurring, with a view to securing the services of 1140 artisans and 1100 female operatives.]

LABOUR UNREST.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.

It is denied in Westphalia that the German miners are arranging a strike in sympathy with the British coal miners.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

The General Federation of Trades Unions has doubled the levies on the affiliated unions in order to support the cotton operatives who have been locked out.

The accumulated funds of the federation amount to £66,730, compared with £162,000 in 1909. The payment of 2s 6d to the weavers is absorbing £17,500 weekly.

The Cotton Manufacturers' Association has issued a manifesto in which it denies that the cotton manufacturers are undesirous of a settlement of the cotton trade dispute.

They only ask, it says, that, as non-combatants in a quarrel between unionists and non-unionists, their financial interests shall remain unaffected.

RECENT PAPAL DECREE.

APPLICATION TO IRELAND.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

The "Methodist Times" insists that the Government must obtain a satisfactory declaration from the Papacy whether the recent decree forbidding laymen to proceed against priests in State law courts will be applicable to Ireland.

It is impossible, the paper adds, to accept the statement of the Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, as the final word.

FIGHTING IN BRAZIL.

FEDERAL AND STATE CONFLICT.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 11.

Owing to the Government of the State of Bahia disobeying a judgment of the Federal Court, Fort Sao Marcello bombarded and destroyed the Government building at Bahia—the second seaport in Brazil.

The State Government refused to act on the Federal Courts habeas corpus in favour of certain Opposition deputies.

The bombardment destroyed two houses.

A Federal warship has been sent to Bahia.

[According to the constitution adopted by the National Congress on February 24, 1891, the Brazilian nation is constituted as the United States of Brazil. Each of the old provinces forms a State, administered at its own expense, without interference from the Federal Government, save for defence, for the maintenance of order, and for the execution of the Federal laws.]

HOME RULE.

DEMONSTRATION IN BELFAST.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

Mr. Bonar Law, M.P., Leader of the Unionist party, will address a demonstration in Belfast on April 9.

The demonstration will include a march past similar to that on the occasion of Mr. A. J. Balfour's visit in 1892.

Two thousand policemen will be in the vicinity of Ulster Hall during the visit of Mr. Churchill (First Lord of the Admiralty), and the garrison will be confined to barracks.

ADVANCED LIBERAL VIEW.

LONDON, Jan. 12.

Mr. J. M. Robertson, M.P. (Advanced Liberal), speaking at a meeting of the National Liberal Club, said that he was a Home Ruler, but a Federalist.

If, he said, Ireland were given fiscal autonomy, the Federal system would be impossible, because there was no saying what the Tariffites would do with the clear field that would be established.

LEGALISING GAMBLING.

BILL IN PORTUGAL.

LISBON, Jan. 11.

Parliament and the press are favourable to a bill which has been introduced by the Government to legalise gambling by opening luxurious casinos in the chief towns, and granting licenses for them to the highest bidders.

A British syndicate, with a capital of £1,000,000, has offered to build casinos in Lisbon and Cintra similar to Monte Carlo.

[Recently a player cheating in a luxurious underground gambling saloon at Braga, Portugal, led to a fight. The proprietor of the saloon extinguished the lights. When the lights were again turned on, it was found that two men had been killed and several wounded.]

SECTARIAN STRIFE.

SERIOUS CONFLICT IN PORTUGAL.

LISBON, Jan. 11.

The Republicans at Outairo destroyed a much-revered image of Our Lady of Lourdes in the neighbouring village of Assentis.

Two thousand Catholics marched to Outairo, and a fierce fight took place. Five combatants were killed, and 40 seriously wounded.

Cavalry and infantry were called out, and eventually restored order.

BILLIARDS.

STEVENSON v GRAY.

AUSTRALIAN LEADING.

LONDON, Jan. 11.

Scores in the match between Stevenson and Gray, at the close of to-night's session, were:—

Gray	14,585
Stevenson	14,570

The English player has lost ground, and Gray has now a slight lead of 15 points, whereas, at the conclusion of the previous evening session, Stevenson was 252 to the good. The Australian made a break of 489, of which 477 were off the red. Stevenson had a run of 243.

INMAN v LINDRUM.

In the match 16,000 up, level, Inman maintains his advantage; but the Australian has recovered a couple of hundred points. The scores now stand: Inman 5336, Lindrum 3163.

The Chinese Brigadier-General rebelled, seized the arsenal, razed the fortress, and arrested the authorities.

Three-hundred and fifty Manchus were killed in the engagement which followed, including two governors. A school, in which were 57 pupils, was burnt.

Proclamations were issued, announcing the establishment of Republican Government, and guaranteeing order.

RUSSIAN NEGOTIATIONS.

PEKING, Jan. 12.

The Revolutionaries at Shansi have entered Honan.

The Government, realising that the Peking-Hankow railway is menaced, is concentrating troops from Hanyang and Hankow to attack the Revolutionaries.

In view of the present internal troubles, the negotiations with Russia over Mongolia have been transferred to St. Petersburg. It is understood that China is prepared to discuss railway proposals, but will not recognise the justice of Russia's other claims.

Two policemen entered the hotel, whereupon the highwaymen fired at them, seriously injuring both.

The robbers escaped, but a sheriff's posse is pursuing them.

AMERICA TAKES A STAND.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.

Mr. Harry Waider, secretary of the Western Lawn Tennis Association, announces that United States players will cease to be contestants for the international trophy, unless the Australians agree to play on American soil for the Davis Cup.

Mr. Waider added that he believed this statement to be on behalf of the lawn tennis players throughout the country.

[Mr. T. H. Hicks, hon. secretary New South Wales Tennis Association, stated last night that he was much surprised at the cabled announcement, and he was inclined to the opinion that there was some misunderstanding. The rules provide that the challengers must meet the holders on their soil, unless, of course, they agree to other arrangements.]

MOTOR CAR COLLISION.

A collision, attended with fatal results to Mr. J. Hitchcock, occurred on Thursday night between two motor cars. One car was proceeding towards the city from Newtown, and when at the intersection of Darlington-road and Golden Grove-street, Darlington, collided with another car coming in an opposite direction.

As a result of the impact, both cars were badly damaged, and Mr. James Hitchcock, of Petersham, one of the occupants of the city-bound car was thrown on to the road, sustaining concussion of the brain. None of the other occupants were injured, and Mr. Hitchcock was conveyed by the Newtown Ambulance to Prince Alfred Hospital.

The car going towards the city was owned and driven by Mr. Frederick Bushby, of Dulwich Hill, and he was accompanied by a Mr. Dawes and Mr. Hitchcock.

The other car was owned by Mr. Ernest Atkinson, of Surry Hills, and was driven by Mr. Walter Atterton.

The injuries to Mr. Hitchcock were more serious than was at first supposed, and he died at 11.40 a.m. yesterday.

The deceased gentleman was 46 years of age, a native of Parramatta, and resided with his wife and family at 47 John-street, Petersham. He carried on business as a land and estate agent, and was very popular, not only in Petersham, but in the surrounding districts. He was prominently identified with local racing, and quite recently secured a lease of the Wollongong showground for the purpose of pony racing.

LABOUR PLATFORM.

RE-ARRANGED.

LAND TAX CONTINUES.

HOBART CONFERENCE.

FAIR RENTS AND PRICES.

HOBART, Friday.

With a rush the Interstate Political Labour Conference concluded its business to-day. Nothing came of the proposals which were made to create an executive that would have authority to act in certain directions for the next three years. The feeling was fairly general that a body with limited powers should be established, but a difficulty was presented when its composition was considered. While some members thought that it was advisable to have a body elected that would be practically the masters of the Federal Parliamentary Labour party, the great majority were not prepared to go so far as this. The Federal Attorney-General (Mr. Hughes), in a letter to the conference, suggested that the Parliamentary Labour parties in each State should interpret the will of the conference for themselves. In the confusion of ideas which existed it was evidently thought that it would be better not to disturb existing arrangements. These simply provide that the political Labour executives of the States in which conferences are held shall make all arrangements for them.

FIGHTING PLATFORM.

Some alteration in the relative positions of the plans of the fighting platform have been agreed upon. The policy of maintaining a white Australia stands first, while the maintenance of the graduated tax on unimproved land values occupies second position. The referendum has been placed third, and then follows new protection, nationalisation of monopolies, and industrial arbitration.

Mr. Fisher commended the platform drafting committee for its work. The party, he said, must stand first for the white Australia policy, and only second in importance was that of the land tax. It was fitting that the referendum, new protection, nationalisation of monopolies, and industrial arbitration should be placed high up. They ought to declare to the Commonwealth the value which was attached to the realisation of what was desired in these directions next.

The big expense which is occasioned by trade unions taking cases into the Commonwealth Arbitration Court was referred to at the meeting of the conference on Thursday by Mr. J. H. Coyne (Q.). He desired that this should be reduced by prohibiting lawyers appearing in the Court for either party. A point was given to Mr. Coyne's case by reference to the Australian Workers' Union action some months ago, in connection with which the expenses were said to have been £26,000. Fifteen voted for the motion to prevent lawyers taking part in Court cases. This was a majority of those present, but not a majority of the credentialled delegates, and the motion was lost.

COURT DELAYS.

In connection with industrial legislation, Senator Givens proposed that another Arbitration Court Judge be appointed in order to more expeditiously cope with arbitration cases and to avoid serious delays and consequential expense to the unions.

Mr. Fisher pointed out that the Government did not appoint Judges to any particular Court. The Chief Justice allotted the Judges to the Court for which he considered they were best suited. If the number of High Court Judges was not sufficient, the conference ought to indicate that there should be an increase.

An amendment by Senator Needham, proposing that one Judge of the High Court should be appointed as President of the Arbitration Court, and be relieved of any other judicial function, was negatived, as was the motion by Senator Givens.

TOO RADICAL.

Some members of the conference have displayed much skill in defeating the more radical "comrades," who have no scruples in openly declaring themselves on touchy topics. The Western Australian representatives have distinguished themselves by their freedom of thought and speech. If they could have had their way the non-labour press, as well as the Labour press, would have been admitted to the proceedings.

On Thursday Mr. J. C. Cornell, who has been recognised as the ringleader of the radicals, submitted a motion declaring that under present economic conditions six hours should constitute a day's work, and that the principle should be stated as a plank in the Commonwealth platform. It was claimed that the matter was one that should be considered at a State conference, and by this means its discharge from the business sheet was obtained.

FAIR RENTS AND FAIR PRICES.

Another proposal put forward by Western Australia, and defeated, was in relation to the enactment of laws for the fixing of fair rents, and fair prices. Almost every Trades Hall Council in Australia has at one time or another made a declaration favouring control in this direction. The Western Australians consequently considered their course was clear.

Mr. Watson, in opposing the motion, said the cause of high rents was that too many people were competing for the same house. The only way to deal with the matter was to make land cheap, increase the number of houses, and compete with landlords. As to prices, the State must be introduced into competition as a monopoliser.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

The official report of the day's proceedings is as follows:—

A resolution providing that where possible all articles required for Federal use shall be of Australian growth or manufacture, was agreed to. In regard to a proposal to have elective Ministries added to the fighting platform, Senator M'Gregor said the principle was already recognised as far as Labour organisations were concerned. The motion was lost. Another proposal, to have nationalisation of inventions made part of the platform, was also defeated.

Mr. Fisher moved for the formation of a Federal executive. He said that sometimes conflicts arose between Federal and State parties, and no body existed which might intervene. It was advisable to have some regular body that could also deal with oversea correspondence relating to Labour matters and business for conference.

Mr. J. C. Watson agreed with the principle of having an executive, but it should be loosely formed. It should not be on the lines suggested by the last Brisbane conference.

Mr. H. Lamond contended that a conference elected for other work should not assume powers to frame rules for an executive of Australia. He suggested that secretaries be appointed to deal with the agenda paper. This was necessary when it was considered that organisations could submit papers, as were presented to a Sydney conference, relating to the best place for the establishment of a village cabstand. Mr. Elmslee, M.L.A., and Mr. D. Bowman, M.L.A., supported the proposal.

Mr. Fisher appealed to the conference not to turn it down.

A majority voted for the motion, but the necessary number of votes of credentialled delegates were not received.

Mr. Watson proposed that the executive of the State in which the next conference is to be held shall have power to deal with the agenda paper, but not to delete items submitted, and also have power to call special conferences on the undertaking of four States, and to deal with oversea correspondence.

THE PLATFORM.

On Mr. Watson's motion, the conference adopted the committee's report to place the planks of the platform in the following order:—

(1) Maintenance of white Australia.
(2) Maintenance of land tax.
(3) Effective federation for the inclusion of referendum proposals in the Constitution.
(4) New protection.
(5) Nationalisation of monopolies.
(6) Arbitration Act amendment.
(7) Navigation.
(8) Commonwealth freight and passenger steamers.
(9) Restriction of public borrowing.
(10) General insurance.
(11) Establishment of sugar refineries.

Mr. Stewart (Vic.) moved,—"That the Defence Act be amended to set forth clearly that the object of the citizen forces is to defend the Commonwealth against aggression, and that no person enrolled be compelled to bear arms against any workers engaged in industrial disputes, notwithstanding anything contained in the oath of allegiance."

Mr. Watson opposed the motion on the grounds that order must be preserved, but he stated that very many employers invited disorder.

The motion was agreed to.

A motion by Mr. Watson urging people to embrace the next referendum as an opportunity of enlarging the Constitution was carried.

SHOOTING THE BREAKERS.

COLLISIONS IN THE SURF.

ARE RESTRICTIONS NECESSARY?

The ordinary bather who patronises the ocean beach is finding the expert surf-shooter a source of danger. Given a big swelling breaker, the surf-shooter comes inshore upon it with the precision and force almost of a torpedo. Steering is out of the question with him, and if he hits an unobservant bather amidship, the bather is apt to come off second best.

The more venturesome of the surf-shooters delight in swimming to the first breaker, and, meeting the wave as it rises, shoot in on it right to the beach. To become perfect in the art requires a considerable amount of practice, and the amateur attempting to shoot the breaker often finds to his discomfiture that the breaker dumps him with great force on to the bottom. Surf-shooting has its pleasures and dangers.

In the crowded surf the large army of shooters are a continual source of danger to women and children, who only venture into the water at a short distance from the beach. At Manly recently a complaint was made by a gentleman, who alleged that one of the shooters in his recklessness ran right against a lady friend of his, giving her a nasty bump. As a rule the unfortunate victims who receive the bump smile through their tears, and look upon the incident as a pure accident. The gentleman in question, however, further ventilated his grievance, and suggested that the town clerk take the necessary action to stop what he regarded as a dangerous pastime. To do so would call forth a storm of indignation from the majority of surf-bathers, who enjoy the delights of riding on the breakers and racing an opponent to the shore.

A better means of guarding against the danger, it is said, would be to restrict surf-shooting to a particular area, where the crowds are less numerous.

CONGESTED STREET.

A DISGRACE AND A MENACE.

LORD MAYOR SPEAKS OUT.

A deputation representing all sections of the mercantile and shipping community waited upon the Lord Mayor (Sir Alfred Taylor, yesterday, to urge the immediate alleviation of the congestion in Sussex-street.

Alderman Arthur M'Elhone introduced the deputation and emphasised the imperative need for some scheme being devised to cope with the enormous and ever-growing traffic in that thoroughfare. The loss to mercantile and shipping companies, he said, was enormous. Whilst it was fully recognised that what had been done by way of a new street at Woolloomooloo would give enormous relief there, he ventured to say that for every vehicle that would go out of Woolloomooloo there were hundreds and thousands going out of Sussex-street. It was almost impossible for business to be done, or for merchants to get their goods in a reasonable time. So great was the delay that the Master Carriers were charging demurrage for goods shipped through Sussex-street.

The Lord Mayor, in reply, regretted the short-sighted policy in the past, which had made little or no provision for the inevitable expansion of the country. He foresaw that before long every inch of the water frontage from Lane Cove to Circular Quay would be needed for wharfage, and provision ought to be made for ingress and egress. He would not hesitate to say that the conditions of Sussex-street were a disgrace and a menace to the welfare of the community. It was not a provincial matter, and must be grappled with in the interests of the country generally.

The City Council could effect a very decent improvement, provided the Harbour Trust Commissioners were prepared to meet their obligations by wiping that little block from the intersection of Erskine-street right up to in front of the Union and North Coast wharfs, on which were situated four hotels. The compensation very often in such cases was enormous, but in works of the kind projected money must not stand in the way. Most of the land necessary for the widening of the street was the property of the Harbour Trust, and the responsibility for the congestion must rest with the Harbour Trust. The council, however, was prepared to give a fair contribution towards the undertaking. On no account must the cost of the undertaking stand in the way, but it must be equally borne by those people who helped to contribute to the congestion, and he referred particularly to the Harbour Trust Commissioners.

In conclusion the Lord Mayor said arrangements had been made for the deputation to wait upon the Harbour Trust Commissioners on Monday next, and he would be happy to form one of the deputation, and do all he could to induce that body to recognise not only the absolute necessity of the undertaking, but of its responsibilities in the matter.

UNION OF ACTORS.

ARTISTS THREATENED.

MANAGERS MAKE A STAND.

A meeting of theatrical managers was held yesterday afternoon at the offices of Messrs. J. C. Williamson, Ltd., called for the purpose of discussing the projected union of actors. There were present—Messrs. Hugh J. Ward, Geo. Tallis, Clyde Meynell, Wm. Anderson, Allan Hamilton, Reynolds Denniston, Geo. Marlow, Geo. Willoughby, J. C. Leete, Joe St. Clair.

It was stated that the managers had been approached by representative actors, who took strong exception to the intimidating terms of a circular mailed to them by the persons organising the union, who, it was claimed, were not bona fide actors. A paragraph in this circular read as follows:—

"The union has received promises of very powerful support, and will protect its members; but those artists who refrain from joining until the battle is over will have no right to complain at finding the union hostile to them."

This, it was stated at the meeting, was viewed by many actors as an uncalled-for threat, and coming from without the profession was regarded as a gratuitous insult, which they deeply resented. The communication had been addressed both to Australian and imported artists, with a request for 2s 6d, the amount of the entrance fee to the proposed union. A curious fact associated with the demand, as far as it concerned the imported artists, was that the first object of the union, as set out in the circular, was to stop the importation of artists from abroad. The managers had been asked by members of their companies to protect them as far as lay in their power, from being further harassed by letter, or importuned in the streets for the half-crown subscription. It was urged that the profession did not desire to be associated in the public mind with the members of the executive, either collectively or individually.

The matter was discussed at length at the meeting, which decided to take a stand on behalf of the theatrical profession, and in the interests of the public. It was pointed out that when it was all summed up it was the public that decided whether an aspirant for a stage career was acceptable or not as an actor or actress. So far as could be ascertained from the names of those moving for an actors' union the public had given them all a very emphatic negative. The managers, therefore, had on the first law of nature, that of self-preservation, no alternative but to pass this negative on. But it was stated with a perversity scarcely human that a number of persons still persisted in calling themselves actors. Apparently they took the double negative—the public's and the managers'—as an affirmative.

The conference affirmed the sympathy of managers with practical unionism. All branches of stage industry that could be so organised had been met without opposition, and all reasonable demands had been conceded. There was, however, no desire in the profession for a union, and from the feeling of actors there certainly was marked distaste for anything of the kind under such auspices as that of the present movement.

A leading legal firm was instructed to inquire into and contest the registration.

SQUANDERING MONEY.

£12 IN 24 HOURS.

A case came before Mr. Wilkinson, D.S.M., yesterday, at the Water Police Court, in which a man named Samuel Palmer, 59, was called upon to answer a charge of drunkenness. Sergeant Drew informed the magistrate that the previous day at the Central Police Court accused was fined for a similar offence, and at the time had £60 in his possession. When arrested again the amount had shrunken to £48, showing that in less than 24 hours the man had spent £12. Accused, who pleaded guilty, was fined 20s, or in default 14 days' imprisonment.

STRIKE OR LOCKOUT?

TROUBLE AT METTER'S STOVE WORKS.

THE RIGHT OF DISMISSAL.

Trouble has been brewing for some time amongst the employees at Metters' stove-works, and it has at last come to a head. The men employed have taken exception at the "speeding up" principle which they maintain exists, and in consequence of the dismissal of an official from the union have refused to work. The men claim, however, that the present trouble is a lockout, as the management of the company took drastic action in closing the works, owing to the reluctance of the men to subscribe to certain conditions.

The men state that the firm recently imported fitters for the work on the ground that there was a shortage of labour, and now desire to put off some fitters owing to lack of work. About 250 hands are involved in the dispute.

The manager, Mr. Spring, declined to be dictated to as who should be dismissed, and as a deadlock had been reached the firm closed down the works so far as stove makers and fitters were concerned.

"Owing to the stoppage caused by the refusal of our moulders to use Lithgow iron that is lying in our yards," said Mr. Spring to a "Herald" representative, "we found it impossible to provide sufficient castings to keep our staff of fitters all employed. We therefore decided to reduce the number of fitters on the work where the castings were shortest, and a fitter whose work was found to be the least satisfactory was put off. His records were placed before the men, but they took exception to his dismissal, owing apparently to the length of time he had been in the company's employ. The union then took the fitters, to the number of about 40, from their work, stating that they would not return until they could all be re-employed as a body, notwithstanding that there was work available for all except this one man.

"Resenting this arbitrary dislocation of its business the company decided to discontinue work in the foundry pending a settlement of the trouble."

DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

CHILDREN'S EVIDENCE.

MOTHER STRUCK WITH BILLET OF WOOD.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An investigation was made by Mr. Kerang, Coroner, to-day into the circumstances surrounding the death of Margaret Swift, which occurred on January 4. Her husband, Alfred Thomas Swift, who is under arrest on a charge of having unlawfully wounded his wife with intent to murder her, was present.

Reginald Sydney Swift, 11 years, a son of the deceased, said that on Sunday, December 31, he was in the yard milking cows. His sister Ivy, his father, and his mother were there all milking cows. When finishing milking he heard his father talking. He looked round, and saw his father get up from the bail, pick up a piece of wood, and throw it at his mother. The piece of wood hit her on the side of the head, above the left ear.

Ivy Adelaide Swift, 12 years of age, said she heard her father say to her mother, "You are not milking quick enough." She saw her father then pick up a piece of board, but didn't see him throw it. She saw her mother get up. Witness went to her mother, and saw her head was bleeding. Witness asked her mother not to go on with the milking, but she continued. When witness went to the house she found her mother lying down. She had a piece of rag over her head to stop it from bleeding. It bled nearly all that day. After her father had finished at the cow yard he went into his bedroom. Her mother had nothing to eat on Sunday nor on the Monday. She got up a little on Sunday, but did not work. Her father did not go into the bedroom to speak to her mother on Sunday. He went in on Tuesday. This was the first time to witness's knowledge that he went in to see her mother. When he went into the room and spoke to her mother on Tuesday her mother could not say anything. Her father took her mother away in a buggy that day to a doctor. On Sunday and Monday witness attended to the hurt on her mother's head, cutting away the hair, and treating it with glycerine and oil.

The medical evidence was that death was due to a fracture of the skull and inflammation of the membranes of the brain.

The Coroner committed Swift for trial on a charge of manslaughter.

POWER PLANT FAILS.

UNSATISFACTORY TRIALS.

LITHGOW, Friday.

It is reported here that the official trials of the power plant in connection with the small-arms factory have been most unsatisfactory.

The generators are reported to be defective, and when the current is put through them they become exceedingly heated. The governing of the engines is still unsatisfactory, and in many other respects there are stated to be defects. The total equipment of the factory has been landed, and only power deficiency stands in the way. Yet this is the most important point of the whole affair, for until it is remedied no start can be made at the factory. All the machines are erected, the gauges and tools will come to hand and be ready for fitting next week, yet nothing can be done and no hands employed until the power plant is ready.

It would be inadvisable to start the machines with a power plant that provides an unsteady drive, for this would mean the risk of breaking valuable parts in the various machines.

A message from Melbourne appeared in Wednesday's paper to the effect that the official trials at the factory had been unsatisfactory, but it has not transpired what steps will be taken to remedy the defects of the power plant. The plant was manufactured at the Government Dockyard, Cockatoo Island, and if it had proved satisfactory a start might have been made at the factory within a few days, for in addition to the completion of the plant, stocks of materials have been laid in.

SOLDIERS SLANDERED.

CALLED "HIRED MURDERERS."

VIGOROUS DEFENCE BY SENATOR PEARCE.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Mr. Thomas, Minister of External Affairs, and Senator Pearce, Minister of Defence, addressed a large meeting in the Town Hall last night on political matters generally.

Senator Pearce, however, said he had come to Broken Hill specially to deal with the defence question. It had been said he was prepared to use the defence forces to shoot down strikers. He gave that the lie direct. He did not introduce compulsory training. It was a plank of the party platform, and he intended to stick to his party and carry it out. The defence policy was the Labour party's policy. The Government was establishing a naval course. Previously officers in the navy were taken from the leisured classes, but the Labour party had made the examination a competitive one, and allowed the worker an equal chance with the leisured class. The statement had been made that men were forced into the Australian Army.

A voice: Hired murderers.

Senator Pearce: They're not hired murderers.

A voice: They're forced to serve.

Senator Pearce: They are made to perform a duty which they owe to their country. Japan to-day was an arsenal from beginning to end—for what? For international arbitration? No! For something in the future. Every country in the world bar this favoured land had felt the curse of war upon its shores. What guarantee had they that peace would continue. Australians must be prepared to fight for a white Australia. That time might come, and men must be trained for it. No white man worthy of the name could refrain from defending his country and his womenfolk against the Asiatic. Industrially and politically the Asiatic was far behind Australia, and men who were Australians did not or should not want to be brought down to the level of the Asiatics. Australian compulsory training was a trifle compared to the autocratic conscription of European countries.

MR. SPEAKER.

FORMULATES CHARGES.

SUSPENSION OF THE HANSARD CHIEF.

ALLEGED DISOBEDIENCE AND DISLOYALTY.

AN EMPHATIC DENIAL.

HOW HANSARD IS EDITED.

Mr. Speaker yesterday formulated his charges against the principal shorthand writer, and gave his reasons for the suspension of that officer. The offences of which the latter is alleged to be guilty are disobedience, wilful insubordination, disrespect, petulance, flouting authority, offensive language, disparaging and belittling remarks, presumption, superabundant correspondence, disloyalty, treachery, wastefulness, ill-temper, and the giving vent to unbridled opinions upon Mr. Speaker.

Judge Backhouse constituted a Royal Commission to inquire into the suspension of Mr. Robinson, and conducted the inquiry in the Executive Council chamber, in the Chief Secretary's office.

Having heard Mr. Speaker's condemnation, the principal shorthand-writer was called upon, and he gave a categorical and emphatic denial to the charges. So far from being disobedient, he was implicitly obedient. He was never guilty of insubordination, nor disrespect, nor treachery, nor presumption. He and his staff were thoroughly loyal. In proof whereof he quoted flowing testimonials from Premiers and Speakers of the Assembly for the last 30 years, and concluded by asking Mr. Willis to explain how it was that the alleged demoralisation should have been coincidental with his advent to the Speakership.

When the Royal Commission met the commissioner stated that he had received the charges formulated by Mr. Willis against Mr. Robinson, and the best way would be for Mr. Speaker to be sworn, and then give his evidence.

Mr. Henry Willis, member for the Upper Hunter, and Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, being sworn, stated that he made the following charges against the principal shorthand writer:—

THE CHARGES.

1. That on the 11th December ultimo, Mr. Charles Robinson was supplied with a Memorandum of Instructions for his guidance in conducting the business of shorthand writing and recording "Hansard" debates on the Assembly side of Parliament.

2. That in disobedience of the directions given, Mr. Robinson wrote a letter to the Acting Clerk on the 11th December ultimo, reflecting disrespectfully upon me, the official head of the Assembly "Hansard" service.

3. That the letter referred to appeared in the public press, thereby publishing the fact that the principal shorthand writer (Mr. Robinson) flouted my authority in wilful insubordination.

MINOR COMPLAINTS.

Other grounds upon which I have cause for complaint:—

1. Mr. Charles Robinson disobeyed the following direction: "Mr. Speaker has desired Mr. Mowle to intimate that he does not propose to entertain any correspondence from the principal shorthand writer, and that officer should communicate with the Chief Clerk viva voce," and thereupon he wrote a petulant letter to the clerk couched in language offensive to me. This letter was published.

2. Mr. J. B. Laing, second shorthand writer, at Mr. Robinson's instance, wrote to him on the 11th December ultimo, a letter purporting to be a verbatim report of an interview with myself, in which Mr. Robinson's continuance in office is mentioned. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Robinson wrote a letter to the acting clerk on the 12th, stating: "I am left to be informed by a subordinate that Mr. Speaker contemplates my dismissal." This letter was published.

3. A letter was written by Mr. Robinson to Mr. President, dated 14th December ultimo, containing disparaging and belittling remarks upon my instructions issued to him as my public servant. This letter was published.

4. Under the same date (14th December) Mr. Robinson wrote a lengthy presumptuous letter to Mr. President, offering in detail an unasked for opinion on my official communication to Mr. President, respecting the management of Parliamentary business affairs, for which we are responsible to Parliament. Mr. Robinson's unbridled opinions of myself are grossly insubordinate. This letter was published.

5. Mr. Robinson wrote unnecessarily to the acting clerk on the 15th December ultimo, relating to myself and my management of departmental affairs. The letter contained an outburst of ill-temper, and was disrespectful and wilfully insubordinate. This letter was published.

The foregoing letters were written after my memorandum was issued, dated 11th December, but prior to Mr. Robinson's suspension by me in my official position as Minister of the Assembly "Hansard" service.

(Sgd.) HENRY WILLIS, Speaker.

11th Jan., 1912.

Most of the letters complained of by Mr. Willis have already been published in the "Herald." These were presented to the Commissioner and read by Mr. Willis, who pointed out the various portions to which he took exception. In a few preliminary remarks Mr. Willis said that it might facilitate matters if he detailed what led up to the suspension. The complaints he made had arisen through his coming into the Speakership and wishing to introduce an improvement on the present system of reporting the debates in Hansard. He had nine years' experience in the Federal Parliament, and he had taken the precaution of sending to Melbourne to find out the system in vogue there. Then he prepared a memorandum for the President of the Council, and embodied as much as was applicable of the old arrangement—which had become out of date—and had introduced as much of the Federal system as was necessary. He had an opportunity of speaking with members and ex-Speakers of the Assembly, and they also thought the present system unsatisfactory; so he decided to improve it by the adaptation of the Federal system. The State system had been started 30 years ago, and things had much changed since then. In order that there should be no confusion in the future he thought it would be better to begin de novo. His decision gave Mr. Robinson considerable annoyance. In the Assembly he had raised the question of privilege at the instance of members of the Opposition, and also Mr. M'Court, whose advice and guidance witnesses had. It was a breach of privilege for Mr. Robinson to place the matter before the House in the form of a letter to Mr. Cann.

Mr. Willis then detailed the objections to Mr. Robinson's methods of reporting the debates. In his speech there were 11 interjections, some of which were uncalled for, and very rude, and which were not replied to. Those interjections should not be reported, and he made it clear to Mr. Laing that that was one of the things he objected to. It was clear that Mr. Robinson knew of what he wished to be done, yet his proposed improvements were checked. He issued the instructions to Mr. Robinson on December 11.

"As to the correspondence," said Mr. Willis, "I do not intend putting them all in."

Mr. Robinson: I should like them all in, your Honor.

The Commissioner: You will have the right to put any others in you like.

Mr. Willis: There is a great deal of tautology and much redundancy in them.

The Commissioner: I shall have to look at them if I want to.

Mr. Willis: On December 11 Mr. Robinson wrote to the Chief Clerk, in which he said,—"The Speaker was pleased to express his great displeasure at the manner in which the proceedings of Parliament have been reported in the official debates, also that he proposed to put Mr. Laing in my place, or to send to the Federal 'Hansard' for a man to take charge of this department," and "on 25th October I was summoned to attend Mr. Speaker in his room, and on telling the Speaker that it was my duty to report every hon. member Mr. Speaker told me 'that the interview was closed,' and I was dismissed with every mark of displeasure." I take exception to that letter, as it would raise a storm of opposition in the House. I did not insist in the alteration of Colonel Onslow's speech, though I still think it was incorrect. There had been some feeling in the House. It was not befitting the high office that an old servant should make disrespectful references to the Speaker.

The Commissioner: "What portions are disrespectful?"

Mr. Willis: "I take it that there was some subtlety in the two paragraphs. Why drag to light indicents that had occurred in private conversations. I also take exception to the tone running through it. I object to the paragraph where he states that I contemplated his dismissal. I said that if he would not carry out my instructions Mr. Laing would do the Assembly and he (Mr. Robinson) would do the Council. It seemed to me that he was insubordinate, and I had to make a stand so that the department could go on without friction. Previously when a proof was received if a member told him to make a correction Mr. Robinson would say his staff was excellent, and they did not make mistakes. For nine years in the Federal Parliament I had always made corrections, and I continued the practice, but Mr. Robinson was very rude to me. My new instructions will overcome that in future."

A PASSION FOR LETTER-WRITING.

"Mr. Robinson," said witness, "frequently wrote very long letters. One went into 12 pages of foolscap. I set my face against that, and decided that the Clerk of Parliament should be head of the staff. As Speakers come and go, there should be some continuity. Things should be run on business lines, and carried on in a businesslike way. The 'Hansard' proofs should be sent to the Speaker, who is the editor of 'Hansard.' Everything in dispute should be sent to him in the interests of decency and correct report. Mr. Robinson took exception to this. It seems to me that his opposition to my bringing this in was insubordination. I was responsible, and it was his duty to carry out my wishes. But he said to me that the old system had been his system for 30 years. It was cantankerousness and insubordination. The principal shorthand writer is an officer under the Speaker; he should obey instructions, and the Speaker would take the responsibility."

The Commissioner: His letter appeared in the public press?

Mr. Willis: Yes; he prepared it for publication.

The Commissioner: But he was not responsible for its being published, for it was laid on the table of the House.

Mr. Willis: He wrote in order to get publicity in the public press. He succeeded in getting the letters read before the Council. The letter to my clerk found its way to the President, and ultimately to the press. It took a circuitous course.

Mr. Willis then dealt with the second ground of complaint. He instructed Mr. Robinson that he would not have any more written communications from him, but should communicate viva voce. "But," continued witness, "there was a perversity and disinclination to carry out my wishes. On December 13 he wrote to the Chief Clerk:—

In view of the steps which have been taken to strip me of the authority conferred upon me as the head of the shorthand-writing department by the Governments, the Presidents, and the Speakers of the Legislative Assembly during the last 32 years, and that I am left to be informed by a subordinate that Mr. Speaker contemplates my dismissal, I regret that my attempt to remove injurious suspicions and my request for trial before condemnation are not deemed worthy of notice. In making that request, I believed I was asking for what is freely conceded to all classes of public servants, and to the employees of such special bodies as the police and railway departments.

PETULANT AND RESENTFUL.

"Such things had not come under my notice," continued Mr. Willis. "I made no such sweeping condemnation. I held him in high esteem, and did not hesitate to tell him that I valued his services. I did not threaten to have him removed. But I took exception to that letter as being insubordinate and petulant, inasmuch as he resented authority. And he continued writing letters, though I had directed that the system should cease."

NAPOLEONIC METHODS.

"In view of this," added Mr. Willis, "I wished to know if Mr. Laing could carry on the work, and I had a long interview with him. Mr. Robinson's letters were so many and so long. I once remarked that Napoleon had said that if a letter were left for a fortnight it would answer itself. I may also have referred to Napoleon's methods of dealing with matters. But Mr. Robinson referred to that as if I were a very austere man, ready to ride over everyone, which is not the case. I had no desire even to step over him; but I could not be frustrated by any officer. But to dismiss Mr. Robinson would be the last thing in my mind. Why were the letters committed to paper? There was the desire to cause trouble. He was grossly insubordinate, and prepared a batch of letters for publication."

"Now one officer of his staff was away sick, but no intimation was given to me. This was an unbusinesslike way to treat the head of the department. Then there was the interview between Mr. Laing and myself, when Mr. Laing was asked if, in the event of Mr. Robinson getting leave of absence, he could undertake the control of the staff. Evidently Mr. Robinson resented that. But it was quite unnecessary that he should have been upset over that. My communication to the President showed that Mr. Robinson would not be dismissed. He could carry on in the Council the old system to which he was wedded, while Mr. Laing would conduct the new system in the Assembly. The member of the Federal staff I had in mind was Mr. Robinson's own son. I would have liked his son to be his successor if any change had to take place. I was not antagonistic to him at all, and did not desire his dismissal. I only desired to introduce the new system that was urgently required.

"Now, with regard to my third charge, there is a disposition on the part of Mr. Robinson (according to his letter of December 14 to the President) to think that I assumed control of the staff and ignored the President's authority, which was equal to my own.

The Commissioner: You would be practically the Minister with regard to the services in the Assembly, while Sir Francis Suttor would be the same in the Council.

EVILS OF DUAL CONTROL.

Mr. Willis: Yes. The staff is under our joint control, but I contend that the joint control is unworkable, inasmuch as I suspend an officer, and the President refuses to concur. An officer might throw a bottle at my head, and I would not be able to dismiss him. I am responsible, and I must have the officers carry out my directions. Mr. Robinson set to raise the ire of the President at my assuming control of that part of the service. It was Mr. Robinson's duty to carry out my instructions, and not comment on them. But in his letter to the President, Mr. Robinson referred in a disrespectful manner to the Speaker, and his remarks were disparaging and belittling to his superior officer. It was a presumptuous letter, and his unbridled opinions of me were grossly insubordinate. It was presumption on the part of an officer to write long comments and express unbridled and unfavourable opinions of my acts and administration. This most unbecoming language of Mr. Robinson was calculated to cause public disfavour of my actions, not knowing the facts.

Mr. Willis read the letter written by the principal shorthand writer, which he thought were disrespectful and insubordinate. He quoted the letter to the President, and the remarks about Dr. Blackwood, which were as follows:—

I am not, as far as I am aware, personally known to Dr. Blackwood, nor is Dr. Blackwood personally known to me. He was for some years in practice in the district where I live; and I do know that he was regarded as a man of eminence in his profession—beloved by many, and respected by all. That Dr. Blackwood should be of that order of medicos who are said to barter certificates of illness at the rate of 7s 6d a piece is to me unthinkable; and yet Mr. Speaker may have information which may lead him to believe that he was justified in stigmatising Dr. Blackwood's certificate as "the so-called certificate," and in representing him, under the specious guise of "benevolence," as colleaguing with Mr. John Ramsay to exploit the Public Treasury of £150. I anticipate that if Mr. Speaker should permit himself to make further inquiry he will find that someone has misled him into what appears to me to be casting an unmerited slur upon Dr. Blackwood—not to say doing a cruel wrong to Mr. Ramsay. I have known Mr. Ramsay 22 years. He has never been a shirker, still less a malingerer; and it is my conviction that, assessing his work on the basis of an eight hours' day, so far from being a pauper, I could have properly asked that he should have 12 months' leave on full pay, and that even then the Government would not have fully paid him for his unrequited overtime.

He, Mr. Willis, characterised the above as a most improper paragraph to write. He had never charged Dr. Blackwood with selling his certificates or anything of the kind, though it had seemed to him an improper way for the certificate to be given. He made no charge against Dr. Blackwood or Mr. Ramsay. But Mr. Robinson's remarks were calculated to damage Dr. Blackwood, and damage Mr. Speaker. Other statements in the letter were grossly insubordinate. Mr. Robinson had shown that he could defy the Speaker, and belittle him, so that his office has become a byword and a reproach.

"With regard to 'Hansard,' the inefficiency of the work can easily be seen. Instead of exercising their literary faculties, there were repetition and redundancy. I find my instructions were not carried out. I took the trouble to see if the debates were being condensed, and they were not. I issued instructions that they were to be condensed by two-thirds. There was the debate on the Estimates.

ATTACK ON MR. SPEAKER.

"Most of it was opposed to Mr. Speaker, I turned up the daily papers—I do occasionally read the papers—and most of what was painful and disreputable was not in 'Hansard.' I thank Mr. Robinson for seeing that the pages of 'Hansard' were not disgraced like the pages of the daily press. But I was displeased to find that Mr. Robinson was disinclined to carry out my wishes. He complained and whined that his duties were so long and arduous, yet he found time to write all these letters, which indicate the frame of mind he was in. He was insubordinate and petulant.

HOW "HANSARD" IS EDITED.

"With regard to 'Hansard,' I did take out something that was obscene. I took out something that was not said by me. It was the phrase about a rowdy house. I never used the phrase that Parliament was a bawdy house.' It is a most disgusting phrase. If I had said it then my alterations would have amounted to bowlerising 'Hansard.' But the Speaker's word can be taken. Even if the exclusion of the remarks left a hiatus in the report, it does not matter. I took it out. In the House of Commons similar action has been taken, so I followed precedent. My instructions to Mr. Robinson were followed by an outburst of ill-temper, disrespect, and insubordination. That very night his letters were laid on the table of the House. If he knew they were to be published he was guilty of insubordination and of belittling the Speaker.

The Commissioner: When did you suspend him?

Mr. Willis: My suspension of Mr. Robinson had not then taken place. When they were placed on the table, the newspaper men were rushing in all directions for them.

This concluded the case for Mr. Willis. Mr. Robinson then cross-examined the Speaker.

Mr. Robinson: Was I suspended because the President would not confer with you?

Mr. Willis: You were to be suspended until the President had conferred with me; then you would have been given an inquiry.

Mr. Robinson: Your letter said nothing about an inquiry.

Mr. Willis: I made a memorandum to that effect.

Mr. Robinson: I never saw anything of it.

The cross-examination was lengthy, and during its course the Speaker admitted that he made absolutely no charge against Mr. Robinson as to his ability or the manner of carrying out his work, but only as to his insubordination, etc.

Dealing with the editing of "Hansard," Mr. Willis said that in his speech in the country he did not use the expression "pack of ruffians;" that was why he took the phrase out of "Hansard." He did use the word "ruffians," though.

The cross-examination repeatedly led the pair into the realm of staff policy, and the Commissioner repeatedly reminded Mr. Robinson that he was not there to decide such things. Whether the Speaker's system was right or not did not matter. He had to decide if Mr. Robinson had carried out the orders he had received from the Speaker.

MR. ROBINSON'S REPLY.

AN EMPHATIC REFUTATION.

Mr. Robinson, being sworn, said:—

"If I understood your Honor correctly, on the day upon which you opened His Majesty's commission, you stated that you would deal with this case on grounds of equity, and would not insist upon the technical safeguards, which surround the admission of evidence in the ordinary administration of justice. I am in a somewhat peculiar position, inasmuch as I have been in a place where it was obligatory on me to exercise discretion, and where, therefore, my conduct must be judged by the fairness or unfairness with which I have acted in any given case. I have always felt that I was under strict accountability to the Presidents and Speakers under whom I have served; that my tenure of office depended upon good behaviour. For the first 31½ years of my service I was not blamed, still less suspended by any President or Speaker. That I take to be proof of good behaviour for that period.

"My first introduction to the present Speaker was about May 1911. On May 18 Mr. Willis spoke at length on the Address in Reply. On May 23 an incident occurred, in which he interjected, while the Rev. T. S. Crawford was speaking, and after some exchanges, said, 'I daresay "Hansard" will correct that.' Before the time Mr. Willis said "I daresay 'Hansard' will correct that" I had closely examined Mr. Willis's corrections, and, finding that the note of the reporter who transcribed that part of the speech was identical with my own, I had decided not to accept Mr. Willis's correction. Doubtless Mr. Willis expected from his experience as a member of the House of Representatives in the Commonwealth Parliament that "Hansard" would accept his corrections. Whether I erred or not, I had no animus against Mr. Willis; I simply did what I thought was fair to him and what I believed it was my duty to do. I think three, perhaps four, interviews followed. We were unable to see the matter in the same light, and he threatened me with the action which he took on June 7, when he tried to ventilate his grievance, and in revising the "Hansard" report deleted a certain sentence. I see from the debate of June 29 Mr. Willis appears to have thought I had imputed intoxication to him, but I had never for a moment thought, nor do I think now, that Mr. Willis could ever have been truthfully reproached with that form of excess. Mr. Willis and I had an interchange of views on this subject. I expressed my desire to meet his wishes in any way I could. He offered to write what he said he did say on the condition that I first promised to accept what he should write. I told him I thought that an unfair stipulation, and refused. Mr. Willis thereupon, in writing, protested, as he said, at the "request of a number of members," against the "garbling of his personal explanation." I deny that I "garbled" the honourable member's speech. What I did was entirely in the interest of his own good reputation, and if I had done what he wanted me to do I should have simply made him ridiculous.

A BID FOR LIBERTY.

"Having been under Mr. Willis's screw four or five times, I determined to make a bid for liberty. I could not afford to have the spirit of the staff cowed by (as I regarded Mr. Willis's letter of June 8) premeditated insult. To escape private pressure I wrote my letter of June 15 to Mr. Speaker Cann in the hope that he would get it laid on the table of the House. I believe, although on this point I cannot fully trust my memory, I urged Mr. Speaker Cann to take the course he did take, which produced the debate of June 29 on the question of privilege moved by Mr. Henry Willis, and the alleged unsatisfactory report of which made it imperative that Mr. Speaker Willis should provide me with new instructions, and which has culminated in my suspension. I cannot see that my letter to Mr. Speaker Cann could possibly under the most strained construction be held to imply a reflection or a censure of any honourable member. My sole object was to inform honourable members of the conditions under which the staff worked, so that honourable members might themselves judge if any or what step needed to be taken to secure the integrity of their own record, the record which is designed primarily to acquaint the electorate from which Parliament springs and to which Parliament appeals with what is said and done in passing laws, and which incidentally may at any time become the safeguard of an honourable member's reputation and the test of the manner in which he has discharged his trust, as disclosed by his voice and his vote in the House.

AN UNEQUIVOCAL DENIAL.

"I deny, without the slightest reservation or equivocation, that up to that time I was influenced by animus against Mr. Willis in anything I wrote or said; and I make the same denial to the same imputation in reference to all that has taken place since he assumed the Speakership. After Mr. Willis became Speaker I was summoned by him from time to time to his room. Mr. Speaker had noticed sheets of paper in the hands of honourable members—Dr. Arthur was particularised—the same in appearance as those supplied to him as 'copy' for the correction of his rulings. In compliance with his request for information, I told Mr. Speaker that in the early stages of 'Hansard' I had thought it was prudent that no MSS. reports or proofs should be supplied to honourable members, lest it might give rise to unnecessary debate in the House, and because it was desirable that 'Hansard' should be kept quite away from party strife, and should, if possible, not even be mentioned before the report had been completed and was available at all. Experience soon showed that honourable members advocating the construction of railways or some local improvement wanted advance proofs for publication in the local press. I found that honourable members seeking advance information were invariably willing to comply with my request that such information should not be used for party attacks, and after reference to the Speaker it was ascertained that there was no objection to this convenience being extended to honourable members. It was so extended as a matter of course without individual reference to him in each case, and so the practice had been firmly established for many years. Mr. Speaker Willis asked me to stop it, and I at once stopped it, telling applicants after that that it was not in my discretion to comply with their request, and suggesting that application should properly be made to the Speaker. Subsequently Mr. Speaker summoned me to his room to ascertain if effect had been given to his instruction, and I told him that it had.

IN THE SPEAKER'S ROOM.

Several other interviews took place in Mr. Speaker's room, when Mr. Speaker was pleased to inform me of his views in regard to the reporting of interjections and questions. I pointed out to Mr. Speaker that it was the common practice of Ministers to answer questions, and I therefore did not anticipate that the number of questions would be lessened. He then stated that he intended to speak with Ministers on the subject, and anticipated that when he had done so the questions would largely cease. In various interviews which took place I informed the Speaker that some of the changes he desired, especially that of supplying excerpts, would be a convenience to the staff, and I admitted that the non-reporting of interjections and questions would relieve them of some of their most difficult work, but at the same time I honestly showed him what my views were as to the non-reporting of interjections and questions, so that he might form his own conclusions upon a full knowledge of my experience whatever it might be worth.

Mr. Speaker Willis decided to give me verbal instructions on these points on November 17, which, having been reduced to writing by me, and sent to Mr. Speaker on November 18, and which written instructions not having been repudiated or amended by him before 4 p.m. on 21st inst. were made binding on the staff on the first meeting day next ensuing—viz., November 21. Your Honor can see my letter and these instructions in the council's correspondence. The President did not desire that any change in this regard should be made in the report of the council, and that is the reason why I allowed by limitation "Legislative Assembly only" to stand.

Mr. Speaker continued to be harried by numerous questions and observations on the part of the Opposition, and other interviews in his room followed. I listened with respectful attention to all Mr. Speaker had to say. I told him that I was not more responsible for the objectionable questions than the chair upon which he sat; but I held the opinion that it was not my duty to act unless upon a positive instruction, and that I was entitled to have that instruction initialled by him. Your Honor will see by reference to the enclosure that on November 21 I expressly directed the staff in these words:—"Corrections bearing the initials of Mr. Speaker in the MSS forwarded to him are to be sent direct to the printer." That was, they were to be accepted without reference to me. The only instruction, whether by initials or signature, which I have ever received from Mr. Speaker Willis is that given on December 11. That instruction also I obeyed instantly.

AN EMPHATIC REFUTATION.

I emphatically deny that I have treated Mr. Speaker Willis with disrespect, and I emphatically deny that I have ever knowingly been guilty of insubordination. I may be in error in believing that Mr. Speaker Willis wanted me to do on my own responsibility what he was not willing to do on his responsibility. I admit to a caution amounting almost to distrust; but at the same time I did not and do not now impute to him any intention other than was consistent with a desire on his part to preserve decorum in the House, and "to raise the tone of the debates."

As Mr. Speaker Willis has thought fit to charge me with treachery to him in the typewritten communication which he sent to the "Herald" and "Telegraph," and which those journals published on January 4, and which on January 6 he thanked them for publishing—those communications being identical one with the other in all respects—I feel that is due to myself to inform your Honor that in several of the interviews which I was required to have with Mr. Speaker Willis in his room I felt that my loyalty to him required that I should point out to him the importance of his promptly reading the reports of his rulings sent to him for revision in order that any correction might be incorporated in the proof issue. I showed him that as everything he did was being critically scrutinised from an adverse point, he would probably be consulting his own convenience by making the first publication of his rulings as accurate as they could be made. He has very persistently accused me of disloyalty. In this connection I respectfully invite your Honor's attention to the proof of my loyalty contained in the printed correspondence. There I took every course I honourably could to protect him.

I now ask your honour to remember that December 11 was the day upon which Mr. Laing wrote at my request what he had verbally informed me before, viz., the particulars of his interview with Mr. Speaker Willis; that December 11 was the day upon which I wrote my letter to the "Chief" Clerk, despatching it to him so that it could have been in his hands at 3 p.m. on that day; that December 11 was the day upon which at 4 p.m. I received Mr. Speaker Willis's instructions; that all those matters are included in the correspondence laid upon the table of the Legislative Council, and ordered to be printed on December 15, and thereupon became public property; and bearing those facts in mind, it was on December 19 that Mr. Speaker Willis wrote his minute stating that "the letter referred to has appeared in the public press, thereby publishing the fact that the principal shorthand writer flouts my authority in wilful insubordination."

IMPLICITLY OBEDIENT.

"I affirm that I have not published anything in the press; that the document which was, or may have been published in the press, was a public document; that I have not disobeyed any direction of Mr. Speaker Willis, but that on the contrary I have instantly and implicitly obeyed every direction (verbal, though most of them were) given me by Mr. Speaker Willis; that I have obeyed them both literally and in accord with their true intent and meaning so far as the grammatical construction of his language admitted of the discovery of that meaning; that I have not written any letter to the Chief Clerk 'reflecting disrespectfully upon Mr. Speaker Willis as the official head of the Assembly;' that my letter of December 15, so far from containing any such reflection as alleged, is, on the contrary, a perfectly respectful document, dealing with matters of public importance which, as the head of my department, I should have failed in my duty if I had not written; and that there is no ground upon which to truthfully base Mr. Speaker Willis' assertion 'that the principal shorthand writer flouts my authority in wilful insubordination.'

"I now desire to answer Mr. Speaker Willis' assertions contained in his letter of December 11, 1911:—

(1) "The unsatisfactory methods now followed with regard to the reports of Parliamentary debates." My reply is that Mr. Speaker Willis only discovered that he believed the methods, whatever he means by that word, were unsatisfactory on December 11; that he has not proved that the 'methods' are unsatisfactory; that I believe them to be satisfactory for the simple reason that no other honorable member has told me orally or in writing that he thinks them unsatisfactory; and that they are and must be the methods under which all Parliamentary debates are and have been reported.

(2) "The business methods of the Parliamentary reporting service are antiquated, and cannot continue." My reply to that is that I am not responsible for them; they are the result of the experience of the Treasury Department for more than 50 years, and they must have been very carefully scrutinised when the Audit Act was passed a few years ago.

(3) "Perfunctory performance of business." This I replied to in the first paragraph of my letter to the President, December 14, page 20.

(4) "Mr. Speaker's objection to being addressed by the principal shorthand writer." My reply is that it is incumbent upon the principal shorthand writer to address communications from time to time to Mr. President and Mr. Speaker, and so long as I hold the office of principal shorthand writer I see no way of escaping the obligations which it entails.

(5) "Appointment of additional shorthand writer." My reply is that I cannot refuse to accept the duty which Parliament imposes upon me in the reporting of the debates, select committees, etc., and I respectfully invite your Honor's attention to my letter of December 5, which sets forth the grounds of my recommendation. Mr. Speaker's action upon this matter will contribute very materially to the realisation of the anticipation which I expressed in the closing words of the letter, viz.:—'I would gladly abstain from asking for an additional appointment if it could be avoided, and I only do so now from the well-grounded fear of a complete collapse if such an appointment should be delayed.' The position has become more acute since then, and I feel sure that unless quick action be taken, Parliament, on its reassembling, with business before it of transcending importance in respect of taxation, industrial and other legislation will find itself deprived of any serviceable record of its proceedings. The staff cannot work miracles, however great Mr. Speaker's repugnance to me may be.

(6) "The business arrangements of the staff are in a muddle of inefficiency." If there be any ground for this statement, that can only be truthfully expressed by adding the words "since the 11th December."

(7) "In conducting a large spending department there must be supervision," etc. My reply to that is on record, where it is shown that the "large spending" for which I am personally responsible has amounted to 3s 2d for each of the last three years.

(8) "Mr. Robinson's recommendation to reduce his estimate by £100 a year convinces me, in the light of events, that the business side of the office is not working smoothly." My reply to that is that I did not make the recommendation alleged; that I wrote down the amount only because Mr. Speaker required me to do so, and I invite your Honor's attention to my explanation of my action, which I think fully substantiates my assertion.

(9) "Insubordination."—My reply is that I know of none.

A DEPARTMENTAL LEPER.

I know turn to Mr. Speaker's minute, laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly on December 18, when he commended the following statements to the consideration of the House as showing the need for legislation to define his authority over the staff:—

(a) I know of no justification for this charge. I say it is simply untrue. Mr. Speaker, as far as his authority extends, has made me a departmental leper, and by some strange perversity of misapprehension tries to treat me with less justice than is accorded to an ordinary criminal. He could, if he chose to have read my letter to the chief clerk on December 18, which was available for him to read 12 hours before he launched this fresh batch of charges, have known that it is untrue. But he makes it a departmental crime for me to write to either him or his chief clerk, and he suspends me for having written to his chief clerk in disregard of his alleged instructions that the method of communication shall be viva voce. I asked for confirmation of that remarkable instruction, which, if acted upon in any other department of the Public Service, would bring about chaos, but no such confirmation was given.

(b) "Insubordination," "aversion to change."—My answer to this oft-repeated assertion is that I know of nothing to justify it.

(c) "Speaker's official communications are common property of staff." My reply is that I have had two sets of verbal instructions from the Speaker, and one under his signature. I am at a loss to know how men are to carry out instructions unless they are given to them—to hear them or to see them. There are no other official communications as far as I know which are the common property of the staff.

(d) "The head of the room has informed me that members of Parliament declaim, gesticulate, and strut in high dudgeon about the room," and that "the Speaker's official communications are opened indiscriminately by underlings." This I regard as a calumny on members of Parliament, and an intentional insult to the shorthand writers. I most positively assert that I never informed the Speaker as alleged, and I know of no facts which could be tortured into even a remote resemblance of what is here alleged on my authority.

(e) "Said proofs cannot be produced." I believe the Speaker, by "proofs" means the slip of MSS copy from which he erased Colonel Onslow's speech. It was in the hands of the chief clerk at 9.15 on Monday, 18th December, 12 hours before this allegation was made.

(f) "Ineptitude." I know of none.

(g) "Individuals appear undisciplined." Whatever the staff may appear to be, there is not one of them who is not a self-respecting gentleman; not one who ever hesitated to work until he dropped at his post; not one against whom any word of disparagement has ever reached my ears; not one of whom I am not proud to be a colleague.

(h) "Waste is apparent." Not to me. This huge spending department has, taking an average of the last 10 years, spent for all purposes, stationery and office requisites, notebooks, writing paper, typewriting machines, etc., exactly £13 6s 9d. Use, not waste, is apparent to me.

(i) "Insubordination triumphs." Seeing that it was said to be "dominant" at the start, it perhaps is not remarkable that insubordination should be triumphant at the finish.

SOME TESTIMONIALS.

I am unwilling to ask any honourable member to testify, other than those who have had the control of the department. If he were living, the first witness I would call would be Sir Henry Parkes, who, on 10th March, 1880, spoke as follows:—

The work had received as high testimony of approval from the honourable member for Yass Plains as it could well receive, and he did not know that it was possible for him to say anything in support of it beyond what the honourable member had said. He believed that the work might be compared with the same work in any other colony, and that it would suffer nothing by the comparison. . . . Mr. Robinson was probably the most efficient shorthand-writer we could obtain for any money whatever; he was a gentleman of very considerable attainments in other respects, and was singularly fitted for his post by his correct judgment. Sir Henry Parkes also said: "I believe myself that on the whole the reports have been quite as good as the reports of the Imperial Parliament."

Mr. W. J. Trickett, M.L.C., writes as follows:—

January 9, 1912.

Dear Mr. Robinson,—I am very sorry to know that, after so many years of public service, you should find yourself in "troubled waters," and I now write to afford my humble testimony as to your efficiency and that of the Hansard staff, over which you have so long presided. I can claim to have had a closer intimacy with and a better opportunity than any public man now living of experiencing and appreciating your own work and that of the Hansard staff; and I say with the greatest confidence and pleasure that the work has been, not well, but most satisfactorily, performed.

His Honor Sir Edmund Barton writes as follows:—

"High Court of Australia,
"6th January, 1912.

"Dear Mr. Robinson,

"It is with pleasure that I testify to the efficiency of yourself and the staff of 'Hansard' during the time of my Speakership. Throughout those four years I had abundant opportunities of observing the quality of the work done, and the success of 'Hansard' in making a faithful and impartial presentation of the debates in the Legislative Assembly. It was, and is, my conviction that it would be scarcely possible to improve the quality or to enhance the success. The work also went on most smoothly, and there was not any occasion on which I should have been justified in complaining of the reports on the score of fullness, fairness, or accuracy. May I add that on many occasions on which you submitted questions concerning the reports for my opinion you evinced an anxious desire for the faithful discharge of your trust, and that in all our official relations your courtesy and your loyalty to Mr. President and myself were not less marked than your respect for Parliament as represented by the holders of its chief offices."

The late Mr. Speaker, the Hon. J. H. Young, said (May 15, 1888):—"I think honourable members will be of opinion that the duty has been discharged with a great deal of discretion by the gentleman who is at the head of the staff, and with a great deal of ability. I think it would be very difficult to find any person in the country who could conduct the publication of the debates as well as it is done now."

The late Speaker, Sir Joseph Abbot, said, on November 26, 1890:—"I am prepared to speak of and bear my testimony to the efficient manner in which the principal shorthand writer discharges his duties."

The late Honourable R. C. Baker, of South Australia, who said, vide official record of the Debates of the Australasian Federal Convention, Sydney, 1897:—

It would not be proper for me to sit down without giving my meed of thanks and acknowledgement to the "Hansard" staff for the splendid manner in which they have performed their duties. It has been perfectly marvellous that after a long debate, extending in some cases nearly up to midnight, we should have received before we met again next morning splendid reports of the speeches which have been made—reports which in most cases required no alteration at all, and which in many cases were, perhaps, improvements upon the speeches which had been made.

The seventh witness whom I would call if he were not in New Zealand would be Mr. ex-Speaker M'Court, who on November 1, 1905, said:

So far as the reports of the speeches of members in "Hansard" are given, they are as true and correct as human heads and hands can make them.

The eighth witness whom I would call completes the period from 1879 to 1911—32 years. That witness is Mr. ex-Speaker J. H. Cann, who writes as follows:—

I beg to certify that I have always found you loyal and efficient in your work, and, may I add in reference to your staff, their fidelity is undoubted, backed by industry and general efficiency. During all the years of my experience as member, Chairman of Committees, and Speaker, I don't think I have had to ask for corrections in "Hansard" exceeding three times in 19 years. I should be only too willing to tender evidence to that effect if required.

If these be deemed too partial witnesses, it is for Mr. Speaker to produce testimony in conflict with theirs, and at the same time to explain why such demoralisation of the staff, as he has described in his letters to the President, and in his minute to the Assembly (not taking into account his communications to the press), should have set in with such violence since his advent to office."

His Honor: Do you wish to add anything to the statement you have just read, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: No, your Honor.

His Honor: Do you wish to cross-examine Mr. Robinson, Mr. Willis, on any matter contained in the statement he has just read?

Mr. Willis said he did not think he would occupy much time. He thought that the whole statement was beside the mark.

His Honor: As I intimated on several occasions to Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Willis: I have only one or two questions to ask. There are one or two reckless observations made. In his statement Mr. Robinson makes the very strong and convincing admission that he had much to do with the correspondence before its publication—it remained with him to have it typewritten ready for publication in the press. Is that your admission, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: It was brought to Mr. Garland.

Mr. Willis: On Friday night it remained with you to have it typewritten ready for publication in the press—that is a very strong admission. Is that your admission, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: Most assuredly, Mr. Speaker, it is quite right.

Mr. Willis said that Mr. Robinson had denied the statement he had made that he had told him that "members strutted in the common room in high dudgeon." "Did you not," continued Mr. Willis, addressing Mr. Robinson, "make that statement to me?"

Mr. Robinson: I did not, Mr. Speaker. I think you are mixing up a letter I wrote to you on that subject on December 18. I never mentioned Mr. Fitzpatrick's name but I may have referred to Mr. Price over the incident.

Mr. Willis said that Mr. Robinson had told him that in his room. He had said that Mr. Fitzpatrick had taken up a newspaper cutting to the room, and that he wanted it included in his speech. Mr. Robinson also said that they frequently came up and "strutted in high dudgeon."

His Honor: Do you remember that, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: I think Mr. Speaker must be recollecting a conversation with somebody else. I most positively did not say anything resembling that.

Mr. Willis (to Mr. Robinson): Did you not say that that quotation was taken to you upstairs?

Mr. Robinson: No; that was never discussed between us in your room.

Mr. Willis said that he distinctly remembered Mr. Robinson coming to his room on Saturday evening, December 16, and using those words. He read in the "Sydney Morning Herald" a short reference to something he attached to Colonel Onslow's speech and his removal. It upset him, because he knew he had not done anything like that.

His Honor: Did you see Mr. Speaker on December 16, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: Yes, and I kept a record of what passed between us on that occasion.

Mr. Willis: I also committed to paper what took place at the meeting, but, after all, there was not much involved in it but a flat denial.

His Honor: Do you wish to call anyone, Mr. Robinson?

Mr. Robinson: I desire to call no evidence.

Mr. Willis: I have also finished, and have no intention of calling anyone.

His Honor, addressing Mr. Robinson, asked if he did not wish to call the President of the Legislative Council, remarking that he did not see that that gentleman could throw any light on the matter.

Mr. Robinson said he did not at the moment think of calling anyone.

Mr. Willis said that the lucid way in which his Honor had dealt with the matter obviated the necessity of taking any circuitous course. He did not intend to call Mr. President.

Mr. Robinson: I may desire to ask a question or two after I have perused Mr. Speaker's evidence.

His Honor: Very well, we can sit and finish on Monday. If either you, Mr. Speaker, or you, Mr. Robinson, care to then address me, I shall be glad to hear you. If you elect to call any evidence please give notice of your intention to-morrow.

The proceedings were then adjourned until Monday at 10.30 a.m.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Horse-racing at Warwick Farm and pony and galloway racing at Victoria Park provide outings for metropolitan sportsmen this afternoon. Victorian racegoers assemble at Sandown Park, and Brisbane sporting folk will be catered for by the Albion Park Jockey Club.

Metropolitan sportsmen visiting Warwick Farm this afternoon on the occasion of the January reunion will be accommodated with special trains, starting from the Central Railway Station at 11 a.m. (horses and attendants), 12.22, 12.40, 12.51, 12.56, 1.6, and 1.20 p.m., the 12.51, 1.6, and 1.20 trains stopping to pick up passengers at Strathfield and Granville, and the 12.22 at Granville only. The track is reported to be first-class going, having benefited by the late rainfall, and all the arrangements at the trysting place are up to the regular standard. The sport promises to be of a highly interesting character, as quite a number of horses engaged in the principal handicaps of the A.J.C. Anniversary meeting are likely to be out under silk. Racing commences at 2.10 p.m. with the Flying Handicap, in which the situations may be occupied by Precious, Marnghi, and Pride of Murillo, O.D.V., Blue Pet, and Golden Light may pass the post as named for the Farm Stakes, while Fortius, Malt Blossom, and Kyloe may fill the places in the Liverpool Mile. The Juvenile Stakes wears a very open appearance, but Warman, Regula, and Firm should have most to say towards the finish, and they may pass the post as named. The honours in the Warwick Handicap may be divided by Chaste, King Bee, and Orea, while Osterley, King Haut, and Milfoil may claim the judge's attention at the finish of the Welter Handicap.

Followers of pony and galloway racing will be furnished with an outing this afternoon at Victoria Park, where a most interesting bill-of-fare is down for discussion. Large fields are assured, and as the entrants include the elite of the "small horses," exciting sport may be anticipated. The pleasure of the outing will be enhanced by the presence of Mr. L. de Groen's Vice-Regal Band, and in all other respects the management has made provision for a large gathering. The usual transit arrangements will be in vogue, special services from Circular Quay and the Central Railway Station landing passengers at the racecourse gates, while the ordinary service to Zetland will also be available. The first race is timed to start at 2.15 p.m., and the results may be anticipated as under:—Flying Welter: Gainful, Yandon, Last Chance. Fourteen-one Handicap: Native Rose, Iona, Mabel D. Maiden Handicap: Sirwilian, False Gun, Settle. Fourteen Hands Handicap: Asphodel, Lady Beauchamp, Firebell. Fourteen-two Maiden Handicap: Lady Aloma, Some Day, Received. Victoria Park Handicap: Grandois, Harwood, Simiola. Encourage Stakes: Lady Clarette, Newzil, Judge Me.

Anniversary Meeting; True Form, Multipotent, Gleesome, and Harvest Lady, out of the A.J.C. Sires' Produce and Champagne Stakes, 1912; and Piastre and Foremost out of the A.J.C. St. Leger Stakes, 1912.

Walcha Jockey Club's race meeting to be held on February 21 and 22 has been granted registration by the A.J.C.

Malt Rose and May Dance were yesterday scratched for all engagements in connection with the Warwick Farm January Meeting.

MOTOR CYCLE RECORD.

The number of motor cycle enthusiasts who waited around the Sydney G.P.O. yesterday morning to see the arrival of the Melbourne-Sydney motor cycle record rider were disappointed; but not more so than Mr. J. A. Fair, who had to abandon his attempt at Gundagai. Right up to Albury he was going well and in the first 131 miles he was 1h 40m ahead of his schedule time. From there on, the rough state of the roads, and meeting with a mishap, sent the schedule to pieces, and when he reached Gundagai he decided to close down.

BOWLS.

PENNANT AND B CHAMPIONSHIPS. FIRST ROUND TO-DAY.

The great contest in bowls for the year will open to-day, when the first round of the pennant and B championships will be played. These championships have a wider scope this year for the whole of the Newcastle and Maitland clubs will take part, also those clubs situated in the South Coast and western country towns. The pennant will be confined to the clubs of Sydney, and the eight Northern District Association Clubs. The whole of the clubs have been divided up into districts. The winners of district sections will be drawn to play with each other on neutral greens, and the winner will hold the district club championship, also the district shield. Then the clubs holding the district championship will be drawn to play with each other, and the winner of the final will be the winner, not only of the pennant and the shield, but will be the champion club of the State.

The rules to apply to the contest are much the same as in former years, but as there is some misunderstanding about substitutes, the committee yesterday decided that if a team turns up one or more short they cannot play a substitute or substitutes, except from members of their own club, but may go on with the game with what men they have, each man playing only two bowls. If a member of such club is present, and asked to play to complete the shortage, in any rink after the cards have been drawn, he must take No. 2 position. If a member of the team as per the card attends after the game has started he takes the position assigned to him on the card.

No provision has been made in the laws of the game of bowls adopted by the A.B.C. regarding the use of thread to define the boundaries of the rink, and the opinion is that these cannot be used.

INTERNATIONAL TENNIS.

OFFER TO ENGLISH TEAM.

There seems every probability of Australia and New Zealand receiving a visit from a representative English lawn tennis team this year.

The Australasian Association met last night to consider the offer of Mr. Wallis Myers to bring a team, consisting of C. P. Dixon, A. E. Beamish, F. G. Lowe, and himself, to Australia towards the end of the present year.

After the matter had been fully considered it was resolved to offer the visiting team one-half of the profits of a tour of eight weeks' duration, with a guarantee of £400, and to inform Mr. Myers that the tour might be extended to 12 weeks to provide for the visit of the team to New Zealand. This offer was made subject to the team coming with the sanction of the Lawn Tennis Association of England.

The council decided to withdraw from affiliation to the English Association. This step was taken in no spirit of hostility, but chiefly for the reason that many of the regulations which are binding upon affiliated associations are not suited to Australasian customs and conditions.

CALENDARS
be all gone.
In a few days grocers will have given them all away, and then there will be no more. It is not because we consider them of any great value that we suggest you ought to get one from your grocer, but because they are artistic and pretty, and because we think you'll find one useful to refer to through the coming year, and because every time you have occasion to refer to it we trust you will remember us and our very good Tea.
The "ROBUR" Tea Co.,
James Service and Co., Proprietors,
360 Kent-street, Sydney.
P.S.—For general everyday use we recommend the No. 1 Grade. It is a good quality tea, with a nice flavour, and very saving.—Advt.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

Very little movement has taken place in the pressure systems during the past 24 hours. The high pressure which on Thursday covered the greater part of the continent has only advanced between 100 and 200 miles eastward, which accounts for the persistency of the southerly winds. The centre of the "high" is now situated about Adelaide.

Another Antarctic disturbance is shown on the chart to be situated over the goldfields of Western Australia.

CASUALTIES.

FALL OVER CLIFF.

Frederick Monday, a mason residing at Nelson-street, Burwood, was working on a building in Victoria-street, Bellevue Hill, yesterday, when he fell over a cliff surrounding the walls of the property—a distance of 25 feet. He was taken by the Civil Ambulance to Sydney Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from injuries to the head, and was admitted for treatment.

FELL OFF A TRAM.

Rachael Glass, aged 66, residing in Mary-street, Newtown, was dismounting from a tramcar on Thursday night in King-street, Newtown, when by some means she fell and struck the ground heavily. She was conveyed by the Newtown District Ambulance Brigade to her home, where Dr. Fitzgerald attended to her, and found her to be suffering from concussion of the brain. There was an open wound on the head, necessitating a couple of stitches.

STRUCK BY A LIMB.

WARWICK (Q.), Friday.

John Courtney, aged about 30, was engaged with another employee on Mr. C. E. M'Dougall's Lyndhurst stud farm on the irrigation plant. He went down a rather steep bank to release the belting, which had become jammed, jocularly remarking it would be funny if he slipped into the creek. Just as he was about to adjust the belt a large limb of an oak tree struck Courtney, knocking him down. The limb of the oak tree fell across his chest. He died a few minutes later. He was a recent arrival from New South Wales.

A Waverley ratepayer writes drawing attention to the state of disrepair of Chesterfield-parade, Clifton-street, and a lane in the vicinity, their rough state being hard upon horses.

THE PROFESSIONAL VIEW.

Business in the investment market has been fairly active during the week at prices that show no improvement, while in some cases a decline had to be registered. In view of the interest that has been taken in the discussion on the responsibilities of auditors, we propose to pursue the subject further. So far we have largely confined ourselves to the legal aspect, and defined the limitation of responsibility as the courts have defined it. It must be admitted, however, that there is in existence in professional circles a code of professional morality which stands on a higher plane than the decisions of the courts, be they ever so august. Judge-made law, like legislation, is apt to lag behind the practical needs of the commercial community. We have a striking illustration of this in our own Companies Act, a copy of a measure that was first placed on the Imperial Statute Book in 1862, and which has now become entirely out of date. We have seen that, according to the decisions of the highest tribunal in the Empire, whose judgments are irreversible, except by that higher body, the court of Parliament, the responsibilities of auditors are strictly circumscribed. They are permitted under the law to turn the blind eye to the manipulations and falsifications of officials, as long as there is no obvious fact calculated to arouse suspicion, and this no matter what fearful losses have been incurred through their wilful default and neglect. Now let us consider the professional view. All accountants and auditors will accept Mr. F. W. Pixley, F.C.A., as their mouthpiece. As an ex-president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants, and as a writer of some distinction on professional subjects his authority is such as will scarcely be challenged. Well, it is some time now since Mr. Pixley gave us the benefit of his views on this important subject. He divides the subject of responsibility into two parts:—

1. Embracing certificates attached to the prospectuses of new ventures and
2. Certificates appended to the accounts of existing companies.

As regards the first section of the subject, Mr. Pixley very properly remarks that responsible auditors ought to make inquiries into the character and standing of the vendors and promoters of a new company, whose prospectus they are asked to certify. He goes on to say that their duties are not confined to mere arithmetical statements, and that it is "extremely improper" to give certificates with the object of inducing the investment of capital. We are told that it is wrong to give a certificate in a prospectus of average profits over a series of years when those profits have been on a declining scale, although it is permissible when profits have been increasing. The reason is, of course, that in the first case the important fact is concealed that the business has been falling off. In such cases the only safe attitude for the investing public where average profits are given without explanation is to assume that they have either been stationary or have declined. As regards entirely new ventures, such as a company formed to exploit a patent process, it is laid down that, while the accountant may justifiably certify to the financial results of experimental working he must not commit himself to future estimates, and should leave such prophecies religiously to the framers of the prospectus. It is well that the public should know that, when an accountant commits himself to estimates of this nature, he is violating the honourable code of his profession. On this part of the subject Mr. Pixley concludes: "Before any prospectus involving capital containing a professional accountant's certificate is issued it ought to be approved by him in its entirety so that he may satisfy himself, not only that his certificate is correctly inserted, but also that no unwarrantable deduction is made from its contents which might mislead an intending investor."

As to point No. 2, i.e., the certification of balance-sheets of existing concerns, Mr. Pixley begins by quoting with approval certain judicial dicta such as that auditors are not bound to exercise more than reasonable care and skill, and are not to be held liable for failure to detect ingenious fraud. But he does not omit to point out on the other side that auditors must inquire into the substantial as well as into the arithmetical accuracy of a balance-sheet, and although it is usually impossible to check every item in the books, he must, as far as possible, ascertain whether the books show the true position. An auditor, in short, is, or should be, something more than a mere checking clerk, and when stock-in-trade is in question, he should be allowed to consult expert valuers.

It is a matter of common experience that in connection with companies whose business is declining it is highly desirable at times to readjust the goodwill valuation so as to bring it within reasonable distance of the real position. This is, however, in Mr. Pixley's opinion, not a question for the auditors unless they are specially consulted on the point, for as the law stands, the goodwill of a company is regarded as fixed capital, and it is not necessary to make any allowance for depreciation in respect thereof before ascertaining the amount of profits available. The auditor is not there to direct the financial policy of the company; that duty devolves on the board. On the question of secret reserves, Mr. Pixley is of the opinion that the duties of an auditor are to the company as an institution and not to its individual shareholders, consequently secret reserves are: "Right and proper, and tend towards the maintenance of a company as a permanent institution." He is, however, careful to qualify his remarks by the stipulation that these reserves must be honestly made in the interests of the company, and he goes on to say: "For directors to create secret reserves with the object of withholding profits legitimately earned from distribution to the shareholders so as to induce them to dispose of their holdings and acquire such holdings for themselves, is as flagrant an act of dishonesty as can be conceived, and should auditors have any reason to believe that reserves are being created through improper motives, they should protest against this, and if necessary, report to their shareholders." In this contention we believe every reasonable man will agree.

The sales of Funded Stock were effected during the week at somewhat reduced rates, both 3½ and 3 per cent. being each 10/ lower. Bank shares were in good request, N.S.W. being 7/6 and Commercial of Sydney 5/ higher. City Bank (new) eased /3, others being unchanged. Steam shares moved off fairly well, Balmain New advancing /1½, Port Jackson /6, Union /3, while Illawarra were /3 easier. Gas shares were quiet, Australian being 5/ better. Breweries had moderate attention, Tooth's being /3 and Castlemaine and Wood Bros.' /6 lower, while Perkins' rose /6 and Tooheys /6. Insurance and coal shares sold slowly at late rates. Among miscellaneous securities Marchant's rose 2/6, J. D. Williams /9, Hydraulic Engineering and Hercules /3, Goldsbrough, Mort /6, Dalgety's 2/, A.B.C. /1½, Henry Jones Co-operative /4½, W. H. COMMERCIAL.

BRANBAGS AT 5/.

The desired goal of the importer has been reached. Branbags closed firmly yesterday at 5/ per dozen. Early in the day 75 bales were sold ex the Janus at 4/10½. At midday another 25 bales in the same boat were obtained at 4/11, but at 5 o'clock in the afternoon there were apparently no sellers under the even money. Reports from Melbourne indicated that stocks there were in strong hands at 5/1. Adelaide was also 1d higher than Sydney. The season for cornsacks being over, several houses were said to be anxious to clear, and consequently a few cheap parcels were on the market. Woolpacks were neglected.

Continued activity was noticeable in imported wire-nettings. It was stated that to land 42 x 1½ x 17 in Sydney on the present c.i.f. quotations would cost £30 per ton. Fencing wires moved out in average quantities at unaltered rates, while orders from the country for all shelf lines were numerous.

San Francisco shippers advise that supplies of all descriptions of coffee are extremely small, everything pointing to the high prices ruling until the new crop is available, in March. On spot this line was good property. Mocha bringing to 1/9 per lb. Ginger was slightly easier, owing to the dulness after the holidays, and small lots of whole bleached were to be had at /9¼. Tins of loose ground were offering at /11; preserved commanded from /8 to /8½. Stacks of flake tapioca were not large, and as shipments to arrive show higher costs it was decided to increase the spot value. Accordingly 28/ per cwt. was the generally accepted quotation yesterday.

There was not much merchant business passing in general grocery lines, although a few small orders were received from the other States. Forward quotations for Californian prunes have gone up something like 100 per cent. on the opening rates. This is, of course, due to all the available stocks being out of first hands. Consignments which have come forward are in excellent condition, and it is claimed that record values are being realised. Salt salmon was dearer, the best price for barrels being /5¾ per lb. The Lenten season will soon be upon us, and it is thought that stocks will not be sufficient to fill all requirements. Tref. sardines were moving well, but, according to an authority in the trade, the demand is slowly but surely going on to the smoked fish, which are smaller and more tasty. Reports to hand from the other side indicate that the summer pack is the smallest for several years. The season's fishing in Spain and Portugal was poor, the fish being large, coarse, and unsuitable, particularly for the smallest tins, while in France the situation was even worse. It is claimed that the statistical position is stronger than many realise. Should this be so, it will become very evident when the demand improves.

Competition at the tea auction was keen, and full rates were realised. Privately there was a fair trade passing, and some 300 packages of Ceylons, Indians, and Javas brought the vendors to /10½ per lb.

Oils were quiet. Castor again attracted attention by reason of its comparative scarcity, and 75 half-cases were sold at 3/3 per gallon, an increase of /1 on the last transaction reported. Further inquiries were abroad for whitelead, 7 tons of second brands realising £35 per ton. Linseed oil was also in fair request, and at least 100 drums of B. and S.'s raw, to land ex the Port Pirie were placed. All makes of kerosene were up. Snowflake, ex store Sydney and Newcastle, commanding /10¾ per gallon. Light of the Age brought the same figure.

AVERAGE METAL PRICES.

The Australian Metal Company, Ltd., have received a cable from New York, giving the average prices of the following metals for December:—Electrolytic copper, 13.552 per cent. at 4.8617dol.=£62.4401 per ton; silver (fine), 54.905 per cent. at 4.8617dol.=/27.1039 per ounce; silver (standard), /25.349 per ounce.

WHEAT STANDARD.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At a meeting of the corn trade sectional committee of the Chamber of Commerce, held to-day, it was decided to strike the f.a.q. wheat standard for the season 1911-12 on January 26.

The following cable message, received from the London Corn Trade Association, was read at the meeting:—"Notice.—Policies of insurance tenderable under contracts dated on and after March 1 next, must cover risks of strikes, riots, and civil commotions, as Lloyd's standard policy will exclude above."

BREADSTUFFS.

AN EASIER MARKET.

The wheat market in Sydney yesterday was dull, neither shippers nor millers being anxious to do business, advices from the other side showing that the demand for Australian grain was quiet on receipt of more favourable crop reports from the Argentine. Local millers were prepared to give to 3/8 per bushel, but 3/7½ was shippers' limits. Freights continued abnormally high.

Flour was still unaltered, new at £8/15/, and old at £9 per ton.

WHEAT LOADINGS AND STACKS.

During the week ended January 6, 1912, the quantity of wheat despatched from country stations was 238,606 bags, compared with 269,013 bags for the previous week, and 340,996 bags in the same period last year.

Since the commencement of December to January 6 there were despatched from country stations 1,185,635 bags, compared with 987,358 during the same period of the previous season.

DAIRY.

MARKET QUIET.

The market was quiet in the dairy section of Sussex-street yesterday.

An improvement was noticed in the quality of the butter. The market remained steady at 126/ for selected grocers' brands. Supplies, however, are falling off, owing to the continued dry weather. Prices are likely to advance if the dairying districts are not favoured with rain. It was reported that a Melbourne buyer representing a London firm was busy in the "street" endeavouring to purchase medium qualities of butter at 120/, but on account of the present scarcity, and the price offered, his endeavours were unsuccessful. Very few export buyers are operating at the high prices now ruling.

New-laid eggs sold well at late figures. It was reported from three houses that choice graded lots brought 1/3, but other firms could not obtain more than 1/2. There is still a large supply of Adelaide eggs on the market, and these are responsible for the low prices ruling for railways, and northern rivers. Not more than a hundred cases of eggs are expected by the Burringbar from the Clarence.

Bacon commanded ready sales. The market was heavily supplied with second qualities, whilst choice lots were not plentiful.

Other products moved off freely at late rates. Following quotations were current:—

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

A DULL MARKET.

The market for forage and grain in Sussex-street yesterday was unaltered from its state of dulness. There were no arrivals of chaff, hay, or straw. A small quantity of the last-named commodity was due from Tasmania by the Wakatipu yesterday. The next shipment of chaff is expected by the Victorian steamer Chillagoe on Monday.

Although the association price of bran and pollard has been fixed at £5 and £5/10/ respectively, the merchants who have these two by-products experience no difficulty in obtaining an extra 5/ per ton.

Grain continued scarce. Maize undoubtedly commanded more interest than any other commodity. A sale of prime dry yellow maize was effected at 4/1½, whilst another lot of similar grain was under offer at the same price. Sales were reported at 4/2. Many sellers were asking 4/2½ and 4/3, but buyers were unwilling to operate at these figures.

Onions were scarce, and as much as £16 was asked for the few lots offered. Tasmanian potatoes stood at nominal values. A few Melbourne tubers went from second hands at £10. A quantity, consisting of 65 bags of Clarence River potatoes, went from seller to buyer at £9 per ton.

Thirty-five trucks of firewood were auctioned. Prices ruled a shade lower on account of the sale being near the end of the week.

RAILWAY MARKET.

CHAFF UNCHANGED.

POTATOES REMAIN FIRM.

A fair quantity of forage and grain was auctioned at the railway produce sales yesterday. Buyers were numerous, but the bidding seemed tempered by a general note of caution. For instance, the rapid "nods" on chaff noticeable on Thursday yesterday gave place to slow, but solid, bidding. Maize is still selling well. Holders were loth to part with their consignments unless at top value. Wheat appeared to have eased slightly, owing, perhaps to the good quantity offering. There was keen competition for potatoes, and their sale showed a decided all-round firmness.

Although Thursday's top price of 6/ was not secured for wheaten chaff, a parcel from Ganmain brought 5/11, and several lots of prime quality sold at unchanged prices. One truckload, however, was passed in at 5/9. Oaten sold reasonably; 5/10 was realised for a prime quality lot, but 4/ to 5/1 represented the auction value for ordinary stuff. Firm prices ruled on lucerne chaff, one choice load bringing 5/7.

The hay market was brisk. Some nice Mudgee bales of lucerne went at 5/3 and 4/6. Oaten hay was good buying. The seller of a Blayney consignment refused a bid of 6/, but another sale was made privately at 6/6.

Maize from Mudgee went under the hammer at 4/3; while another load was passed in at 4/1½. Oats realised 2/9 and 2/9½. Wheat was plentiful; 14 trucks were offered, which probably accounted for the listless demand. Rates ranged from 3/4½ to 3/6.

Potatoes went like hot cakes. Taken all round this market was firmer, a more general disposal at from 9/6 to 10/1 being apparent.

The following produce was manifested to arrive:—Potatoes, 10 trucks; chaff, 53; hay, 12; maize, 7; oats, 3; wheat, 6.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In order to emphasise the difficulty that exists, despite statements to the contrary, at present we have a family of 11 who arrived at Sydney yesterday by the Themistocles. The father, a native of Surrey, England, is a skilled bricklayer, formerly a master contractor, with 20 years' experience in the building trade. He has through our agency obtained employment. Owing to his large family we have so far endeavoured in vain to obtain any suitable accommodation for them. Here is a case of temporary accommodation sorely needed. This is one of a type of many families we have reluctantly been compelled to prevent coming here for several months past.

Some two years ago we suggested to the Government that the labour depot at Randwick might be utilised for providing temporary accommodation for new arrivals, as nearly all the necessary equipment for such a purpose was there. We are pleased to note that the Government now contemplate doing something to meet the difficulty and would strongly urge that the Minister who has this subject under consideration should ask the Director of Labour to furnish a report as to whether the Bunnerong buildings could not be immediately utilised for this purpose.

I am, etc., HERBERT E. EASTON,
Hon. Secretary British Immigration League.

MINING.

MOUNT MORGANS FALL. BRITISH FLUCTUATE.

GOLD AND TIN SHARES SLUGGISH.

The striking feature of the market yesterday morning was the discrepancy between the cabled quotations of the London Stock Exchange on Thursday and those ruling locally for British (old) and Mount Morgan shares.

In the opinion of several operators, very little reliance can be placed on the London Stock Exchange quotations cabled daily to sharebrokers of the Adelaide, Melbourne, and Sydney Stock Exchanges. Complaints in this respect are frequently made by members of the latter body, and possibly the same is the case in Adelaide and Melbourne.

A leading shareholder cabled to London on Thursday to sell a large parcel of a certain stock "at best," and received a reply yesterday morning that there were sellers but no buyers of the scrip, yet the cabled quotations received this morning gave a middle price, in which the London buyers offered /9 more than the Sydney seller was prepared to take. This is only mentioned as one of the many instances in which local operators, on cabling selling orders to London based on the latest quotations of the London Stock Exchange, have found it impossible to do business, except at a big reduction on the price mentioned in London.

On the other hand, it should be stated that instances have occurred (in the British, old, recently) where Australian selling orders were executed in London 1/ to 1/6 higher than the prices asked by the colonial seller. In that case the London operator caught the market on the crest of the wave.

Owing to the manner in which British (old) shares jig nearly every day, it is becoming a good jobbing stock, but in consequence of its rapid fluctuations in the Melbourne and Adelaide markets, especially the latter, it has to be watched very closely. In the morning they started at 46/, an advance of /9, moved up to 46/3, then gradually dropped to 44/9 at noon. B. H. Junction, pref., and B. H. Junction North sold on the easy side, the same being the case with North Broken Hill, but B. H. Souths (contg.) commanded strong support at £6/5/. Other Barrier scrip was rather sluggish.

Both gold and tin shares were very little in demand, and not one sale was recorded. Mount Elliotts were unobtainable at advanced rates. Hampdens were firmly held, but Mount Morgans made another serious fall from 46/ to 43/9, though London on Thursday reported the middle quotation at 47/, which would probably mean—buyers 46/9, sellers 47/3. Undoubtedly, the weakness in the shares is due to the fact that the last dividend of 1/ per share—absorbing £50,000—paid on January 2, came out of the reserve fund. Naturally enough, the fact that the directors were compelled to trench on the reserve fund for the payment of a dividend, is regarded with disfavour by operators, hence the retrograde movement in the shares.

As a glance at the list of Stock Exchange sales will show, the market, so far as concerns the amount of business transacted, was deadly dull in the afternoon. British (old) shares continued to fluctuate, and, although a little of the leeway was made up, the price was 1/ under the opening sale of the day. Broken Hill Junction North again sold on the down grade, the weakness being attributed to a belief that a large parcel of shares may possibly be thrown on the market, as the result of the recent death of a large holder of the scrip. Mount Morgans steadied on the pronounced retrograde movement of the morning, whilst Hampdens firmed a shade. Both gold and tin shares were again neglected.

MINING IN THE STATE.

WOLUMLA, Friday.

The New Venture Syndicate has shipped 43 tons of stone to Cockle Creek. The last parcel of 32cwt of ore treated at the same works returned £200 clear of expenses. The prospectors tributers' parcel of 42cwt of stone treated at the Cockle Creek works returned 3oz 8dwt gold and 8oz silver per ton. The private property lease has been re-pegged and applied for. The title will be contested at the next warden's court, to be held in February.

DUBBO, Friday.

A well-known prospector, Mr. Joseph Ives, who represents a strong Victorian syndicate, paid Dubbo a visit, and spent several days prospecting for alluvial gold. It is stated his efforts have been successful. It has been long known that alluvial gold deposits were to be found in this district, but up to the present no effort has been made to locate them. From all accounts, the syndicate contemplates putting in up-to-date machinery when they get into thorough working order. It is ascertained that the company's prospector is highly pleased with his visit, as he has discovered very valuable indications.

WELLINGTON, Friday.

Application was recently made for the suspension of the labour conditions on the Federal mine, and the warden allowed a month to the holder of the leases to enable him to decide what action he was going to take in connection with the mine. A further application for suspension was made at the last sitting of the Court, but was refused, the warden stating that it was no use making a further application to him. If the leases are abandoned, it is understood that a syndicate will be formed to take over the mine.

MOUNT CUTHBERT MINE.

A DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The annual meeting of shareholders in Mount Cuthbert Company was held to-day. Mr. Pigott, chairman of directors, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, said the mine itself had come up to expectations. There were two large ore bodies, one known as the east, and one as the west. The distance between the two ore bodies lessened as they went down, and the manager believed that they would eventually meet. It was intended to carry on the mine more vigorously. They wished to sink the shaft to a greater depth, to enable this development to be carried out. It was necessary to raise more money, and the board was now considering a scheme that would shortly be placed before the shareholders for their approval. The motion was carried unanimously.

LABOUR TROUBLES.

WHARF-LABOURERS.

LISMORE, Friday.

On Wednesday the wharf-labourers struck work, demanding 15d an hour ordinary pay and 21d for overtime. They declined to wait for a meeting of the board in Sydney on Friday. The Ramornie arrived last night and the North Coast Company consented to pay 15d ordinary, offering 18d overtime, which the men accepted, pending the result of to-morrow's meeting, and resumed work.

MOUNT ELLIOTT STRIKE.

SELWYN (Q.), Friday.

It was rumoured that an offer of settlement had been made by the chief engineer in connection with the trouble at Mount Elliott mine. It was to the effect that the company reinstate three drivers out of five affected, the company to nominate one, and the union ballot for the other two, the said drivers resuming work to sign an agreement to do other work when not hauling. The union refused to accept this, as the latter clause was the cause of the whole trouble. A conference has been asked for.

INCOME TAX.

ASSESSMENT RETURNS REQUIRED.

Under the Income Tax Act of the M'Gowen Government income from all sources becomes liable to taxation, and every person whose gross income exceeds £300 must furnish a return. The tax is levied on the amount of income—(1) According to any person, wheresoever residing, from any profession, trade, employment, or vocation carried on in New South Wales; (2) accruing to any person from any salary or allowance (except travelling or forage allowances) derived from any office or employment in the Public service of this State, and upon every pension and allowance; (3) derived from pastoral, grazing, and farming pursuits; (4) derived from rents of property, or from the use or ownership of land in any way; (5) derived from mining operations; (6) accruing from any kind of property (inclusive of rents), or from any other source whatsoever in New South Wales. Two duties are imposed upon taxpayers. First, to obtain forms for themselves, and furnish proper returns to the Commissioners of Taxation, not later than February 10; and, second, to pay the tax when due, and this without any other application than the assessment notice. For neglecting to furnish a return within the prescribed time there is a penalty not exceeding £20, and for wilfully making any false statement to evade assessment or taxation a penalty of up to £100 is provided, and treble the amount of the tax found to be due will have to be paid. On page 2 of the form that has to be filled in will be found a list of the statutory deductions allowed. The taxpayer, in preparing the return, must state what he claims in this respect, but the deductions will be made by the Commissioners. They should not be made by the taxpayer. The attention of taxpayers is directed to a notice by the Commissioners published in another column.

AMUSEMENTS.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"Dame Nature" has been drawing crowded houses at the Criterion Theatre all the week, and will, no doubt, run out the diminishing farewell appearances of Miss Ethel Irving, which that accomplished artist is devoting to the pathetic impersonation of the mirth-loving, impulsive, loyal, and finally despairing Lolette. Playgoers are also seeing the last of Messrs. Stephen Ewart, Plimpton Wilson, Miss Violet Ley, and other favourite artists of the English company. J. C. Williamson, Ltd., will open a new dramatic season on February 3 with "A Fool There Was."

PALACE THEATRE.

The brilliant comedy "A Woman of No Importance," which recalls one of the many fine productions of the old Brough days, will be staged by Mr. Allan Hamilton at the Palace Theatre to-night, under the joint direction of Messrs. Harry Plimmer and Paul Latham, and with new scenery by Harry Whaite. There will be matinees every Thursday of this famous play, with Mr. Harry Plimmer as Mr. Kelvil, M.P., Mr. Reynolds Denniston as Dr. Daubeny, D.D., Mr. Harry Sweeney as Gerald Arbuthnot, Miss Lizette Parkes as Miss Worsley, Miss Beatrice Day as Mrs. Allenby, Mr. A. E. Greenaway as Sir John Pontefract, Miss Valentine Sidney as Lady Hunstanton, Miss Beatrice Usher as Lady Stutfield, Miss Tempe Pigott as Lady Caroline Pontefract, and Miss Ena Collins as Alice.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"The Quaker Girl," a new musical comedy by James T. Tanner, composed by Lionel Monckton, which is still running in London at the Adelphi Theatre, will be produced for the first time in Australia at 7.45 to-night at Her Majesty's Theatre. Mr. Wybert Stamford will direct the stage, and Mr. Fritz Hart the music, and the full strength of the J. C. Williamson company will include:—Tony Chute, Leslie Holland; Captain Charteris, Andrew Higginson; Chief of Police, Paris, Fred. Leslie; Prince Carlo, Frank Greene; Nathaniel Pym, C. R. Bantock; Minister of State, Ian Maxwell; William (waiter), Arthur Hunter; Jarge (village crier), Arthur Lissant; Jeremiah, Bertie Wright; Phoebe, Jessie Lonnen; Princess Mathilde, Olive Goodwin; Diane (Parisian actress), Nellie Wilson; Mme. Blum, Florence Vie; Mrs. Lukyn (landlady), Nance Maher; Rachael Pym, Nellie Calvin; Toinette, Connie Milne, and Prudence (the Quaker Girl), Blanche Browne.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Next week "The Girl in the Train" will enter the seventies without any signs of age or weakness, successive audiences filling the Theatre Royal with an enthusiasm which suggests the possibility of a century run—in this city, however, very rarely achieved. The Dutch story is full of fun, and in the Divorce Court gives scope for legitimately humorous character-acting on the part of Mr. W. S. Percy as the president, and Mr. Jack Cannot as the car conductor, whilst Dr. Leo Fall's charming music is vivaciously rendered by Miss Florence Young, Miss Arundale, and Mr. Talleur Andrews. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

ADELPHI THEATRE.

The George Marlow Dramatic Company will reopen their season at the Adelphi Theatre to-night with Mrs. Morton Powell's new sensational drama, "A Girl's Temptation," showing life at a mill, a sweater's shop, temptation, betrayal, desertion, and the prodigal's return, all illustrated by scenes from the brush of Alfred Clint, junior, and H. Grist. In the new play Mr. Cecil Mannering will appear as the prodigal son of a millionaire (Mr. P. Vincent Scully), Mr. Vivian Edwards as a mill-manager, Mr. Crosbie Ward as a German sweater, Miss Alice Deorwyn as Mrs. Stirling, Miss Harrie Ireland as Lady Constance Heathfield, and Miss Louise Hampton as Kate Stirling.

The Allen Doone Company, under the direction of George Marlow, Ltd., which has just concluded a successful season in H. M. Theatre, Brisbane, returned to Sydney on Thursday. The company will leave for New Zealand by the Moana to-day and open a tour of the Dominion in Christchurch on the 24th instant. Mr. S. Grant went in advance to New Zealand. Mr. D. Neven, who went from Melbourne to Brisbane to manage the company there, will remain at the Adelphi Theatre, Sydney, as business manager.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

At the Tivoli Theatre, both afternoon and evening to-day, the Rickards Company will be joined by Pastor and Merle, singing, dancing, and tumbling eccentrics. Bert Levy, the brilliant art entertainer; Chas. J. Johnson, coloured cakewalk champion; Henriette and Selwyn, 'cello, piano, xylophone, and violin duettists; Carlton Max and his automaton Jerry; Clarke and Mostyl, patter comedians and dancers; Emerson and Baldwin, sensational club jugglers; Miss Ray Jones, Tom Dawson, Miss Fanny Powers, Vaude and Verne, and many other artists will assist. George the First, the trained chimpanzee, is a popular feature.

NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE.

A sporting novelty, "Whizzing the Whirl," will be one of the new attractions at the National Amphitheatre this afternoon and evening. In this will appear Dana Royal, the undefeated champion whizzer of the world, and Bert Loftus, the champion of London. Prizes are to be given for lady and gentlemen amateur competitions. Miss Millie Doris, noted for "My Hot-cross Bun," begins to-day a brief farewell. The many contributors to a strong programme will include Cavalieri, the Howard Brothers, Hayden's Marionettes, the Delaflores, the Ferron Trio, and the National Duo.

MLLE. ANTONIA DOLORES.

Mlle. Antonia Dolores, who reached Colombo on her homeward voyage on December 22, writes an interesting letter of farewell to her many admirers in Sydney:—"After a residence of eighteen months at the Antipodes, since November, 1910," continues the French soprano, "five times I have been touring Australia, and have always felt very happy amongst Australians. The friends I have learned to love so well, more than anything else, the friendly attentions from the press of Australia have made me feel at home in the country, smoothing the sometimes thorny path of an artist's career. Accept, then, the consideration of my deepest gratitude, until my return about two years hence." Mlle. Dolores will spend her first few weeks in Europe studying new songs in Paris.

WEST'S OLYMPIA.

The management of West's Olympia will make a change of programme to-night, when they will present, for the first time in Sydney, a stirring dramatic story entitled "Gipsy Blood." This melodrama was photographed in Copenhagen under unique circumstances, the actors and actresses joining a real gipsy caravan for two weeks in order to learn their habits and customs. Miss Asta Nielsen, the Bernhardt of Denmark, who was such a conspicuous figure in the "Great Moment," plays the leading character most artistically. There are many sensational incidents connected with the drama, which is finely mounted. Other films will help to make an excellent programme. De Groen's Vice-regal Military Band will play the incidental music. There will be a matinee to-day.

THE GLACIARIUM.

At the Glaciarium this evening another of West's fine exclusive films will be shown. "Gipsy Blood," a grand spectacular melodrama, will be screened for the first time. The principal character will be played by Miss Asta Nielsen, a Danish actress, who will be remembered as having made a big success in the "Great Moment." Miss Nielsen is a typical, "wild, dark-eyed daughter of the roaming race," and gives a superb interpretation of a very difficult character. The whole of the company playing in "Gipsy Blood" travelled for a fortnight in a gipsy caravan in order to become acquainted with the ways of the people they are supposed to represent. Additional films of merit will be screened, and De Groen's Band will play the incidental music. There will be a matinee to-day.

SPENCER'S PICTURES.

Good films and good incidental music are maintaining the popularity of Spencer's Pictures at the Lyceum Hall, which has been visited by large crowds during the week. The attraction is a fine adaptation of Alexandre Dumas's popular work "The Three Musketeers"—a picture which faithfully reproduces the exciting adventures of the trio and their dashing young comrade, D'Artagnan. Another noteworthy series is that illustrating the Delhi Durbar, which shows clearly that the Gaekwar of Baroda turned his back on the enthroned King and Queen. Three strong dramatic subjects are "Her Sister's Children," "The Sheriff's Decision," and "Love's Victory." In addition, there are "Their First Divorce Case," "The Widening of the Rhine," "Bobbs as Temperance Reformer," and "Tontolini and the Donkey." There will be a matinee to-day, commencing at 2.30. On Monday evening next a thrilling exclusive drama, entitled "The Altar of Sacrifice, or Twixt Love and Law," will be presented.

LYRIC AND COLONIAL THEATRES.

The J. D. Williams management is shortly about to produce some special features at all their theatres, which were arranged for Australia by Mr. Williams during his recent tour, and are said to combine the best work of all the leading makers of the world. The programme for next Monday at the Lyric Theatre will contain "Pathe's European Gazette," "Tolino as a Jerry-builder," an excellent comedy, "Ninety and Nine," an interesting domestic melodrama, views of the hot springs at Arkansas, Panoslino, the story of a puppet, a remarkable production by the Cines Company, and "Bill Minds the Baby," a comedy by the Lux Company. At Colonial No. 1 will be seen the "Gaumont Graphic," "An Up-to-date Painter," an interesting comedy drama, "Mother Edwards's Cat," a laughable comedy, "Maud Muller," a beautiful pictorial reproduction of Whittier's well-known poem, travel studies of life amongst the Murats, "The Battle," founded on a thrilling episode of the American Civil War, and "Ted and the Two Bachelors." "Pathe's Australian Gazette," "Taking Uncle for a Ride," a farcical comedy, "The Copperhead," views of the Turko-Italian war, "Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn," and "Tweedledum in Love with a Singer," will be shown at Colonial No. 2.

VICTORIA THEATRE.

An excellent programme is being presented at the Pitt-street Victoria Theatre. The star film is "The Anonymous Letter," but other popular pictures are "Darling of the Mine," "Lou and the Lady," and "He was a Millionaire."

CORONATION THEATRE.

The management of the Coronation Picture Theatre are maintaining a good programme. The principal feature is "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which is proving a strong attraction, large audiences being the rule.

The programme at the American Picture Palace includes "Love's Victory," "The Cage of Infamy," "The Conspirators," "The Bald-headed Soldier," "His First Girl," and "Gambling with Death."

PRINCESS THEATRE.

Crowded houses continue to be the average at the Princess Theatre, where J. C. Bain's Advanced Vaudeville Entertainers have won their way thoroughly into popular favour.

"EAST LYNNE" AT THE STANDARD.

"East Lynne" is now the attraction at the Royal Standard Theatre, where the emotional drama was successfully revived last night with Mr. John Cosgrove as Archibald Carlyle, and Miss Alice Collins as Lady Isabel. This revival, which also included Mr. Chas. Stanford as Levison, Mr. Milton Moss as Lord Mountsevern, Miss Rita Aslin as Cornelia, and Sarah Dunstan as Little Willie, was not ineffectively rendered as regards the central characters, and was warmly received by the audience.

BAND ASSOCIATION.

The New South Wales Band Association are holding their annual championship contest on the Sydney Sports Ground during Anniversary week, commencing January 24, and concluding on January 27. Twenty-three first-class bands will compete. Mr. Christopher Smith, bandmaster of the Royal Berwick Burn Band, will adjudicate, and will conduct a massed band performance at the conclusion of each session.

DISTURBING A CADET DRILL.

Before Mr. Wilkinson, D.S.M., yesterday, at the Water Police Court, George Robertson, 21, was charged with having behaved in a riotous manner in the Domain on Thursday last. It was stated by the arresting constable that about 9 p.m. on Thursday a number of cadets were being drilled by their officers, when accused commenced shouting out, and as the officer gave his orders he repeated them in such a way as to disconcert the youngsters undergoing their compulsory training. "The conduct of the accused," added the officer, "attracted a crowd of hoodlums, who appeared to be highly amused." His senseless conduct cost him £2, with the alternative of 21 days' imprisonment.

ANIMALS FOR THE ZOO.

At the last meeting of the Zoological Society's council it was reported that the steamer Janus was bringing a large collection of animals for the gardens.

This shipment will include deer, monkeys, cranes, flamingoes, jabirus, adjutants, toucans, etc. The society has been offered a chimpanzee now being exhibited at the Tivoli Theatre.

The matter of the new site was reported as being almost settled.

SEAWEED NUISANCE.

DOUBLE BAY'S DISABILITIES.

For many years Double Bay, which possesses a beautiful beach, has, so far as its water frontage is concerned, provided a prominent example of the disadvantages of divided control. For years past the festering heaps of seaweed, left on the beach by the tide and wind, have gained for it an unenviable reputation by reason of the stench, which not only pervades the beach, but invades the locality hundreds of yards in shore.

The Woollahra Council has by no means been forgetful of its responsibilities in this regard, and, spurred on by frequent complaints from residents, has taken such steps to abate it as municipal ordinances permit; but the results of the municipal efforts have not been satisfactory. The seaweed is still swept in, and the winds from the north heap it up on the beach, where it festers. The council is, according to Alderman T. Magney (Mayor), powerless to deal effectively with the nuisance without the assistance of the Harbour Trust, whose administration lies from high-water mark seaward.

The Harbour Trust has accordingly been importuned by the council on frequent occasions, the last of which was about three weeks ago. A deputation waited on the Trust, and the fact was impressed upon it that the council had no power below high water. The Trust felt that if the council's application to have the weed collected and towed out were granted it would establish a precedent; and, as a result, it would be inundated with similar requests from numerous sources. The expense would be enormous. It was, therefore, forced to refuse. The Trust was, however, willing to tow the weed out to sea if the residents would find a punt and fill it. This matter is now under consideration.

Another factor, which it is claimed militates against the sanitation of the beach, is the outfall of the storm-water sewer, which empties on the eastern end of the bay. The Mayor points out that this is a Water and Sewerage Board matter. No sewage, however, is let into the sewer, it being merely a huge drain for drawing off the surplus rain water. The council has approached the board, but in the opinion of the Mayor the only effective way of ridding any nuisance that might be caused by the sewer would be to extend the channel 200ft into the bay.

The Government has also been approached with regard to the construction of a sea wall. Rushcutter Bay, it is pointed out, has been entirely converted from a pestilential swamp, especially at low tide, by means of the sea wall. Such a wall would be a bar to the collection of seaweed on the beach, and would provide in Double Bay a delightful promenade to one of the admittedly most beautiful beaches in Sydney's harbour. As matters stand, however, it is feared that unless drastic alteration is made in matters of control, or Government assistance towards a seawall is granted, Double Bay will, for a long time, retain its unenviable reputation so far as the sanitary condition of its beach is concerned.

BUILDING MATERIALS.

WUNDERLICH ART METAL CEILINGS.

Wunderlich Ceilings are permanently beautiful. And permanently cheap! They cost comparatively little at the outset, and, as THEY NEED NEITHER UPKEEP NOR REPAIR, the first cost is the last. They pack flat in small compass, therefore transport costs little, 180 sheets, sufficient to cover 240 square yards, weigh only 10cwt.

The full instructions contained in the illustrated catalogue (which is posted free, on request), enable the local tradesman or handy man to fix the ceilings. This permits the beautifying of country homes equally as readily as City Buildings. Cracked plaster or warped wood need not be removed. The Ceilings may be placed over them. This not only hides the disfiguring plaster and wood, but prevents any possibility of the plaster falling. Wunderlich Ceilings are Australian-made, of finest British Sheet Steel. The quality is guaranteed uniform. Protect yourself—look for the Wunderlich Trade Mark on every sheet.

COOPER'S GRAND HOTEL, MOUNT VICTORIA,

BLUE MOUNTAINS, N.S.W.

FOR SALE AS A GOING CONCERN, in conjunction with

COOPER'S FAMOUS LINE OF COACHES,

TO THE JENOLAN CAVES, Renowned the World Over.

THIS WELL-KNOWN and FAVOURITE FAMILY HOTEL, originally the Mountain Home of the late Hon. J. FAIRFAX, occupies a truly delightful position on an eminence within a couple of minutes' walk from the Railway Station, away from the noise of, yet in full view of the trains. THE BUILDING is of attractive elevation, with Tower and stands in large pleasure grounds, among a profusion of well-grown and pretty shade trees and shrubs, and is approached from the main road by gravel paths and drives.

THE BUILDING is principally of brick on stone foundations, with iron roof, and contains very large and spacious accommodation arranged to the best advantage for the easy conduct of the business and the comfort of a very large number of Visitors and Guests.

ON THE GROUND FLOOR ARE:—Spacious verandahs on 3 sides, Main Entrance Hall, Ladies' Writing-room, and Commercial-room. Very large and handsomely decorated dining hall, Bar with separate entrance, Smoking-room, Office, 3 Bedrooms, spacious kitchen with large cooking range, also small range, storerooms, billiard-room with Alcock's table, cues, and stand complete, men's dining-room.

THE UPSTAIRS is approached by handsome staircase through the main hall, and contains 3 Balconies, about 20 rooms, with Ladies' and Gentlemen's bathrooms.

The adjoining Building, which is approached by a covered way, contains about 16 rooms, with large Drawing and Music Rooms opening on to wide verandah on two sides. Ballroom 50ft x 30ft, with Stage and Dressing-room. Spacious lavatory accommodation.

The following conveniences are also in full working order:—Stand of 24-400 gallon tanks, with hot air force pump (Rider-Ericsson Engine), with Engine-house, 2 underground tanks, hot-water service of copper pipes throughout main building, septic tank providing splendid sanitary system. Acetylene gas service throughout. There are Swimming Baths, with running stream of fresh Mountain water close to the property.

THE OUTHOUSES comprise large Coachhouse of iron, Men's rooms, Stables with water tanks, feed-rooms, Painting and Workshops, fowlhouses and runs.

THE HOTEL IS WELL AND FULLY FURNISHED, everything selected and well-thought-out for the comfort of guests; the dining-hall and reception-rooms being spacious, and at the same time luxurious and cosy. The many bedrooms, some of which open to verandah and balcony, containing all and more than is necessary for Visitors.

THE LAND surrounding the Hotel contains about 3½ ACRES, with large frontage to MONTGOMERY-ROAD, CARRINGTON-AVENUE, and a lane, and is laid out with Tennis-court, Pleasure Grounds, Flower and Vegetable Gardens, Paths, Swings, Stabling, Paddock, etc.

ADJOINING is a MAGNIFICENT BLOCK of about 3½ ACRES FRONTING BELL-ROAD, opposite the Railway Station. Well suited for subdivision purposes, having extensive and uninterrupted views. This Block is a valuable adjunct to the property, providing for extension if necessary in the future, which will probably be required. The Engine-house, with Cottage at the corner of Montgomery-road and Carrington-avenue, stands on another block of about 56ft 2in by 160ft.

TITLE TORRENS.

The Coaching Plant, in good working order, comprises about a dozen vehicles, capable of seating from 2 to 12 persons each, about 30 horses, with Harness, and every necessity, is well known to those who have been carried comfortably and expeditiously to the Jenolan Caves.

The Property only comes into the Market on account of Mr. Cooper desiring to retire from the active management, after many years, of conducting the business. In the hands of an energetic manager, this Sale offers an exceptional chance of acquiring a profitable and prolific enterprise, which can be worked up to a very remunerative degree. The purchase of a few Motor Cars to more fully cope with the tremendous traffic to the Caves, might be advantageous.

The position of the Hotel, with the grand views obtainable from same, and its close proximity to the many sights, ensure a continuance of its popularity for Visitors to the Blue Mountains, and those passing through to the Jenolan Caves.

This Branch of the Business could be worked in conjunction with a Central Booking Office in Sydney.

Plans, Illustrated Booklets, and Photos, are obtainable at the Auctioneers' Office, and inspection can be arranged for, providing the fullest information for prospective buyers.

TITLE TORRENS.

THE SALE INCLUDES THE FURNITURE AND EFFECTS, GOODWILL, which has been acquired after many years, also the License of the Hotel, which carries with it a good trade derivable from the Bar.

An Inventory of the Furniture will be prepared.

ELEVATION 3424ft ABOVE THE SEA.

MOUNT VICTORIA is the terminus of the splendid service of daily trains and week-end Tourist Excursions, provided by the Railways from Sydney, and is always a favourite resort for those desiring a rest and change from the city. In addition to being a spot of great interest to Travellers from the other States and from all parts of the World. The Drives and walks include some of the best sights on the Mountains.

The Imperial Hotel, situated close to the Grand, has just lately changed hands, and the new owner is at present engaged in spending a very large sum in alterations and additions, which show that the business is increasing, and gives great promise.

In addition to the Traffic going West from Sydney, the great business enterprises, including the Federal Small Arms Factory at Lithgow, should give great impetus to the locality generally, it being anticipated that a large number of persons engaged in business at Lithgow will reside at Mount Victoria.

HARDIE and GORMAN (in conjunction with RAINE and HORNE) have received instructions from Mr. Cooper to sell by Public Auction, at the Sale Rooms, 133 Pitt-street, Sydney, at 11.30 o'clock, on COOK IN COMFORT ON THE HOTTEST DAY. Find the heat unbearable cooking by coal or wood fires these summer days? Of course, you do. Well, use a "FLETCHER-RUSSELL" GAS STOVE, and you will bless the day you had it installed. It means a "piping-hot" oven, saucepans and kettles boiled "in no time," and a perfectly cool kitchen—you see the heat is all concentrated under the cooking—doesn't heat the room up "till you're ready to drop." Besides, the "Fletcher-Russell" makes no mess, and does its work without the constant attention a fire requires. Users of "Fletcher-Russells" put the cookables on, set the taps—which are regulated with a touch—enjoy themselves outdoors, and on their return find the cooking "done to a turn." Our little book on Gas Cooking is free. Ask or write for it. THREE MONTHS' COOKING FOR ONE POUND. JOHN DANKS AND SON, PROPY., Ltd., THE HOUSE FOR LIGHT AND HEAT, 324-330 PITT-STREET, SYDNEY.

TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.
Do you want to improve your position? Are you aware that you can qualify for any position by studying at your leisure in your own home?
By means of instruction by correspondence we can reach students far removed from educational centres. They may be prepared for all University, Local Government (Shire Clerks, Auditors, Engineers), Public Service, or other competitive examinations. They can be coached to become Bookkeepers, Accountants, Auditors, Surveyors, Architects, Electrical, Mechanical, or Civil Engineers, Sanitary Inspectors, Draftsmen, School Teachers, Shorthand Writers, Typists, etc.

PROFESSIONS, TRADES, ETC.

THE ORIGINAL STOTT.
Twenty-six years ago Mr. Sydney Stott commenced the FIRST BUSINESS COLLEGE in Sydney, in Victoria Arcade. In 1908 he purchased the finest building for teaching purposes in Sydney, at 70 PITT-STREET, every room being twenty-one feet high, and having the best light and ventilation procurable.
Nearly FOUR THOUSAND friends and supporters attended our Annual Concert at the SYDNEY TOWN HALL on Wednesday Evening, 20th December, and on Friday Evening, 15th December, SEVEN THOUSAND people attended the annual Demonstration of our Melbourne College, which was held in the Melbourne Exhibition. This is sufficient proof of the great power of Stott's Business Colleges (The Original Stott), over TEN THOUSAND Attendances.
INDISPUTABLE ADVANTAGES OFFERED BY STOTT'S.
1. Mr. Sydney Stott has returned from America, having visited the leading Business Colleges there, and all the latest and most up-to-date methods used in America will be adopted in our Colleges this year.
2. Everybody knows that Mr. Sydney Stott was the Founder of Business Education in Australia.
3. Our College is not merely a local one, but is an Australian Institution, having branches in the same lines in Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Perth, Auckland, and Dunedin.
4. We teach two Systems of Shorthand, the Pitmanic System and the Gregg System, and students attending this College have the advantage of the choice of two Systems. The Gregg System is very easy to learn, to write, and to read, and is very largely used in America, and on the Continent.
We have placed over 12,000 youths and young ladies in good positions and Government Departments during the last 26 years, and can do the same for your boy or girl.
Term starts from date of entry. Day and Evening Classes.
All the Instruction is individual.
New students are enrolled at the College office daily. Write or call for Illustrated Prospectus.

WHY DO I OFFER A FREE TRIAL TREATMENT

FOR THE REMOVAL OF

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, MOLES
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION?

Because it convinces any sufferer of the impossibility of having a new growth where Hairs have once been removed by me. No other specialist in Sydney has ever offered to do this, and my reason for this free treatment is to convince you once and for all of my success. This trial treatment costs nothing, and no payment is made until satisfied that no fresh growth has appeared. Many clients have taken advantage of this offer and continued treatment, and are now rid of these unpleasant disfigurements. Absolute privacy is maintained by individual waiting-rooms. The fees for treatment are very moderate. If unable to call, send for Illustrated Booklet, which is posted to any address free.

HOW TO CLEANSE THE FACE.

To the possessor of the normal skin, the use of soap and water for washing the face may be said to be optional; to one whose skin is greasy and affected with blackheads, washing with soap and water is essential; while a tender, dry, or brittle skin cannot be washed without great risk of injury. It is on account of the caustic effect of soaps that a greasy skin should be washed—it is on account of this same caustic effect that a dry, tender skin MUST NOT be washed, and a normal skin NEED NOT be washed.

With these rules to guide us, the cleansing of the skin can be most effectively accomplished without soap and water by the use of Novena Cerate, which is a cream of unique composition, leaving the skin soft, supple, and sweet-smelling. This is best done by rubbing some Novena Cerate thoroughly into the skin, leaving it on for five or ten minutes, and then wiping it out with a soft towel. This will remove dirt and impurities more effectively than soap and water can do, and make the skin less sensitive, supplying it also with the nutrition it is in need of.

When washing with soap and water is desired—there is a reason why Valaze Complexion Soap should be used in preference to others. It is because it contains some of the ingredients of that inimitable skinfood and beautifier Valaze; because in its soothing, cleansing, and toning effect it is unlike any other soap.

For those troubled with blackheads, pimples, and acne, Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore will prove invaluable. It instantly removes these blemishes, cleanses, stimulates and braces the skin, and by destroying the cause of these blemishes, prevents their recurrence. It has also a wonderfully whitening effect on the skin.

An excellent remedy for superfluous hairs is Novena Hair Destroyer, which instantly removes the hairs without the slightest detriment to the complexion. It soothes the skin and leaves a delightfully cool sensation after application. This is a pleasant deviation from the usual effect of other depilatories.

Valaze Liquidine acts directly on the pores, frees them from over-abundant secretions. A certain remedy for extreme cases of pimples, blotches, coarseness, acne, and blackheads. Also overcomes undue redness of the nose and face, 3s and 5s 6d.

The price of Novena Cerate is 3/6 and 2/ a jar, 4d postage. Valaze Complexion Soap is 2/2 posted. Valaze Blackhead and Open Pore Cure 4/10 posted, and Novena Hair Destroyer is 5/6 and 6d postage.

Obtainable from leading chemists or direct from Helena Rubinstein Prop., Ltd., Dept. D, Valaze Institute, 158 Pitt-street, Sydney; 274 Collins-street, Melbourne.

BLESSINGS
BEAUTY

Are many—varied—attractive and happy. Stoutly-built women, however, are at a great disadvantage always, and to ameliorate their physical burdens and discomforts science has evolved a new type and style of Corset (from the celebrated makers of the famous French Royal "P.D." Rustless Corsets). These particular models are hygienically designed on exquisite lines—so that the wearer's health is safeguarded—so accurate anatomically that the stoutest figure is immediately, almost imperceptibly, and naturally reduced to the most charming effect—permitting the stout woman to follow the prevailing fashion, WITH EASE AND COMFORT.

How much would the generously proportioned Dame not give for the 1in in the waistline as she compares herself with her more youthfully proportioned sister. Various devices have been suggested to arrest the fat-producing tendency, but

IN THINGS OPTICAL WE LEAD—

The highest Optical Degrees possible to obtain are held by our Mr. Jordan, and we are the first here to introduce the newest and best of scientific optical specialties.
These for examples:—
TORIC LENSES.
By means of these all strain and fatigue are relieved off the eye, and they are curved to give a direct focus to the eye. We can fit them to your present frame.
CHLOROPHYLLE LENSES.
The ease and comfort given to the eyes on burning hot days by these glasses are really wonderful. They take the glare out of the sunlight, converting it into a quiet green, which is restful to the eyes, without otherwise altering the object's vision.
KRYPTOK LENSES,
or BIFOCAL GLASSES, whose reading lens is enclosed within the distant lens. No disfiguring line to encounter the eye's vision, no attached segment to loosen, collect dust, or chip.
